FOREWORD

The genesis of, and inspiration for, Wheelock's Latin was the 1946 G.I. Education bill which granted World War II veterans a college education upon their return from service. "Why would a vet, schooled on the battlefields of Europe and Asia, want to study Latin?" asked our father, then a Professor of Classics at Brooklyn College. What could this language say to those who had already seen so much reality? How could a teacher make a "dead" language become alive, pertinent, and viable? How could one teach Latin, not as an extinct vehicle, but as the reflection of a lively culture and philosophy? This was the challenge our father undertook.

Frederic Wheelock set about to create a Latin text that would give students something to think about, a humanistic diet to nurture them both linguistically and philosophically. The book began with lessons he designed especially for his Brooklyn College students. As children we smelled regularly the pungent hectograph ink which allowed him to painstakingly reproduce the chapters of a book he was designing, page by page on a gelatin pad, for one student at a time. In 1950, on Frederic's six-month sabbatical leave, the Wheelock family travelled to the remote village of San Miguel De Allende in Mexico, where Frederic conscientiously wrote his text, and our diligent mother, Dorothy, meticulously typed the manuscript on an old portable typewriter. We young children scampered irreverently underfoot or played with native children and burros.

Twelve years of refinement, revision, and actual usage in our father's classrooms resulted in the book's first edition. When students needed to learn grammar, they read lessons and literature from the great ancient writers who used the grammar in a meaningful context. Our father sought to graft the vital flesh and blood of Roman experience and thinking onto the basic bones of forms, syntax, and vocabulary; he wanted students to transcend mere gerund grinding by giving them literary and philosophical substance on which to sharpen their teeth.

As early as we can remember, classical heritage filled our house. The etymology of a word would trigger lengthy discussion, often tedious for us as adolescents but abiding as we became adults. Knowing Latin teaches us English, we were constantly reminded; at least 60% of English words are derived from Latin. Students who take Latin are more proficient and earn higher scores on the verbal SAT exam. The business world has long recognized the importance of a rich vocabulary and rates it high as evidence of executive potential and success. Understanding the etymological history of a word gives the user vividness, color, punch, and precision. It also seems that the clearer and more numerous our verbal images, the greater our intellectual power. Wheelock's Latin is profuse with the etymological study of English and vocabulary enrichment. Our own experiences have shown that students will not only remember vocabulary words longer and better when they understand their etymologies, but also will use them with a sharper sense of meaning and nuance.

Why, then, exercise ourselves in the actual translation of Latin? "Inexorably accurate translation from Latin provides a training in observation, analysis, judgment, evaluation, and a sense of linguistic form, clarity, and beauty which is excellent training in the shaping of one's own English expression," asserted Frederic Wheelock. There is a discipline and an accuracy learned in the translation process which is transferable to any thinking and reasoning process, such as that employed by mathematicians. In fact, our father's beloved editor at Barnes & Noble, Dr. Gladys Walterhouse, was the Math Editor there and yet an ardent appreciator of Latin and its precision.

Our father loved the humanistic tradition of the classical writers and thinkers. And he shared this love not only with his students through the Sententiae Antīquae sections of his Latin text, but also with his family and friends in his daily life. As young girls, we were peppered with phrases of philosophical power from the ancients, and our father would show how these truths and lessons were alive and valid today. Some of the philosophical jewels which students of Latin will find in this book are: carpe diem, "harvest the day"; aurea mediocritās, "the golden mean"; summum bonum, "the Highest Good"; and the derivation of "morality" from mōrēs ("good habits create good character," as our father used to tell us).

If learning the Latin language and the translation process are important, then getting to know the messages and art of Horace, Ovid, Vergil, and other Roman writers is equally important. Wheelock presents these classical authors' writings on such illuminating topics as living for the future, attaining excellence, aging, and friendship. The summum bonum of Latin studies, Frederic Wheelock wrote, "is the reading, analysis, and appreciation of genuine ancient literary humanistic Latin in which our civilization is so deeply rooted and which has much to say to us in our own century."

For the 45 years that Frederic Wheelock was a Professor of Latin, he instilled in his students the love of Latin as both language and literature, and he did so with humor and humility. He dearly loved teaching, because he was so enthusiastic about what he taught. He had a deep and abiding respect for his students and demanded discipline and high standards. He wished for Latin to be loved and learned as he lived it, as a torch passed down through the ages, to help light our way today.

In 1987, as Frederic Wheelock was dying at the end of 85 richly lived years, he recited Homer, Horace, and Emily Dickinson. He, like the ancients, leaves a legacy of the love of learning and a belief that we stand on the shoulders of the ancients. He would be delighted to know that there are still active and eager students participating in the excitement and enjoyment of his beloved Latin.

FOR THE SEVENTH EDITION

Welcome to Wheelock's Latin, seventh edition! After almost a quarter of a century since our father's death, Wheelock's Latin and the classical tradition are current and alive. Frederic Wheelock's original intention for this textbook was the instruction of Latin in the context of Roman writers. To this design and classic text, revision author Richard A. LaFleur has brought modernity and invigoration through new but ancient and enlivening material; he has also shepherded Wheelock's Latin into contemporary media and arenas. We express our heartfelt gratitude to Rick LaFleur for his enterprise, his intelligence, and his loyalty.

Wheelock's Latin endures because Latin and the ancient Romans are universal and relevant. Philosophers, poets, and psychologists recognize the wisdom of the ancients: "Ut amēris, amābilis estō!" (Ovid, Ars Amātōria, II, 107), "In order to be loved, be lovable!" Ben Franklin then borrowed this truth, "If you would be loved, love, and be lovable." Self-help books, therapists, and even songwriters of today continue to offer this insight. In this way, Wheelock's Latin has become as timeless as the ancients it respects and is beloved by countless who have studied with it.

Wheelock's Latin is available to today's learners through modern developments which our father never could have foreseen, but about which, we imagine, he is smiling: the website, www.wheelockslatin.com, offering a rich array of interesting and useful ancillary materials; the proliferation of study aids, such as the audio CDs from Bolchazy-Carducci, where Latin is eloquently spoken; a Facebook page; smartphone apps for vocabulary and grammar; and finally, the arrival of an e-book. Wheelock's Latin is edifying, fun, and accessible, now more than ever with this 7th edition! Gaudēte!

PREFACE

Why a new beginners' Latin book when so many are already available? The question may rightly be asked, and a justification is in order.

Every year increasing numbers of students enter college without Latin; and consequently they have to begin the language as undergraduates, typically as an elective or to satisfy a foreign language requirement, if they are to have any Latin at all. Though some college beginners do manage to continue their study of Latin beyond the second year, an unfortunate number have to be satisfied with only two or three semesters. Included among these are Romance language majors, English majors, and undergraduates in a great many other fields who have been convinced of the cultural and the practical value of even a little Latin. Common too are graduate students who discover that they need some Latin and want to study it on their own—much as I taught myself Spanish from E. V. Greenfield's Spanish Grammar when I decided to make a trip to Mexico—and other adults who wish to learn some Latin independently of a formal academic course. Into the hands of such mature students it is a pity and a lost opportunity to put textbooks which in pace and in thought are graded to much younger learners. On the other hand, in the classical spirit of moderation, we should avoid the opposite extreme of a beginners' book so advanced and so severe that it is likely to break the spirit of even mature students in its attempt to cover practically everything in Latin.

Accordingly, the writer has striven to produce a beginners' book which is mature, humanistic, challenging, and instructive, and which, at the same time, is reasonable in its demands. Certainly it is not claimed that Latin can be made easy and effortless. However, the writer's experience with these chapters in preliminary form over a number of years shows that Latin can be made interesting despite its difficulty; it can give pleasure and profit even to the first-year student and to the student who takes only one year; it can be so presented as to afford a sense of progress and literary accomplishment more nearly commensurate with that achieved, for instance, by the student of Romance languages. The goal, then, has been a book which provides both the roots and at least some literary fruits of a sound Latin experience for those who will have only a year or so of Latin in their entire educational career, and a book which at the same time provides adequate introduction and encouragement for those who plan to continue their studies in the field. The distinctive methods and exercises employed in this book in order to attain this goal are here listed with commentary.

1. SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE AND LOCĪ ANTĪQVĪ

It can hardly be disputed that the most profitable and the most inspiring approach to ancient Latin is through original Latin sentences and passages derived from the ancient authors themselves. With this conviction the writer perused a number of likely ancient works, excerpting sentences and passages which could constitute material for the envisioned beginners' book. A prime desideratum was that the material be interesting per se and not chosen merely because it illustrated forms and syntax. These extensive excerpts provided a good cross section of Latin literature on which to base the choice of the forms, the syntax, and the vocabulary to be presented in the book. All the sentences which constitute the regular reading exercise in each chapter under the heading of Sententiae Antīquae ("Ancient Sentences") are derived from this body of original Latin, as is demonstrated by the citing of the ancient author's name after each sentence. The same holds for the continuous reading passages which appear both in the chapters and in the section entitled Locī Antīquī ("Ancient Passages"). Once the work of the formal chapters has been completed, one can go on to the crowning experience of the course, reading additional real Latin passages from ancient authors, texts that cover a wide range of interesting topics such as love, biography, philosophy, religion, morality, friendship, philanthropy, games, laws of war, anecdotes, wit, satirical comment. A few selections are drawn from late Latin and medieval authors, in order to illustrate, among other things, the continuity of Latin through the Middle Ages. The readings have in many instances been edited, omitting a word or phrase or simplifying the syntax in one way or another, but all reflect the ancient author's thought and fundamental expression and by the nature of their content constitute something of an introduction to the Roman experience; they are not "made-up" Latin composed simply to illustrate vocabulary, forms, and rules—though they are intended to do this too.

2. VOCABULARIES

Every chapter has a regular vocabulary list of new Latin words to be thoroughly learned. Each entry includes: the Latin word with one or more forms (e.g., with all principal parts, in the case of verbs); essential grammatical information (e.g., the gender of nouns, case governed by prepositions); English meanings (usually with the basic meaning first); and, in parentheses, representative English derivatives. The full vocabulary entry must be memorized for each item; in progressing from chapter to chapter, students will find it helpful to keep a running vocabulary list in their notebooks or a computer file, or to use vocabulary cards (with the Latin on one side, and the rest of the entry on the other). With an eye to the proverb repetītiō est māter memoriae ("repetition is the mother of memory"), words in the chapter vocabularies are regularly repeated in the sentences and reading passages of the immediately following chapters, as well as elsewhere in the book.

In order to avoid overloading the regular chapter vocabularies, words that are less common in Latin generally or which occur infrequently (sometimes only once) in this book are glossed in parentheses following the Sententiae Antīquae and the reading passages. These glosses are generally less complete than the regular vocabulary entries and are even more abbreviated in the later chapters than in the earlier ones, but they should provide sufficient information for translating the text at hand; for words whose meanings can be easily deduced from English derivatives, the English is usually not provided. The instructor's requirements regarding these vocabulary items may vary, but in general students should be expected to have at least a "passive" mastery of the words, i.e., they should be able to recognize the words if encountered in a similar context, in a later chapter, for example, or on a test; full entries for most of these "recognition" items will also be found in the end Vocabulary.

3. SYNTAX

Although the above-mentioned corpus of excerpts constituted the logical guide to the syntactical categories which should be introduced into the book, common sense dictated the mean between too little and too much. The categories which have been introduced should prove adequate for the reading of the mature passages of Locī Antīquī and also provide a firm foundation for those who wish to continue their study of Latin beyond the first year. In fact, with the skill acquired in handling this mature Latin and with a knowledge of the supplementary syntax provided in the Appendix, a student can move directly into reading a wide variety of classical and later authors. The syntax has been explained in as simple and unpedantic a manner as possible and illustrated by a large number of examples. Finally, in light of the sad reality that even English majors in college may have an inadequate knowledge of grammar, explanations of most grammatical terms have been added, usually with benefit of etymology; and these explanations have not been relegated to some general summarizing section (the kind that students usually avoid!) but have been worked in naturally as the terms first appear in the text.

4. FORMS AND THEIR PRESENTATION

The varieties of inflected and uninflected forms presented here are normal for a beginners' book. However, the general practice in this text has been to alternate lessons containing noun or adjective forms with lessons containing verb forms. This should help reduce the ennui which results from too much of one thing at a time. The same consideration prompted the postponement of the locative case, adverbs, and most irregular verbs to the latter part of the book, alternating with chapters that introduce subjunctives and other complex syntax.

Considerable effort has been made to place paradigms of more or less similar forms side by side for easy visual cross reference in the same chapter and also, as a rule, to have new forms follow familiar related ones in natural sequence (as when adjectives of the third declension follow the i-stem nouns).

The rate at which the syntax and the forms can be absorbed will obviously depend on the nature and the caliber of the class; the instructor will have to adjust the assignments to the situation. Though each chapter forms a logical unit, it has been found that at least two assignments have to be allotted to many of the longer chapters: the first covers discussion of the new grammar, the paradigms, the vocabularies, the "Practice and Review" sentences (renamed Exercitātiōnēs in the latest edition), and some of the Sententiae Antīquae; the second requires review, completion of the Sententiae, the reading passage(s), and the occasional section on etymology. Both these assignments are in themselves natural units, and this double approach contains the obvious gain of repetition.

5. PRACTICE AND REVIEW / EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

The "Practice and Review" sentences (Exercitātiōnēs) were introduced to provide additional repetition of forms, syntax, and vocabulary, which is so essential in learning a language. If the author of a textbook can start with a predetermined sequence of vocabulary and syntax, for example, and is free to compose sentences based on that material, then it should be fairly simple to make the sentences of succeeding lessons repeat the items of the previous few lessons, especially if the intellectual content of the sentences is not a prime concern. But the challenge of providing readings based instead, and exclusively, on ancient texts is considerably greater; and so, while most of the items introduced in a given chapter do re-appear in the Sententiae Antīquae of the following chapters, the author frankly concocted the "Practice and Review" sentences (only a few of which were inspired by ancient sources) to fill in the lacunae, to guarantee further repetition than could otherwise have been secured, and to provide exercises for continuous review. The few English-to-Latin sentences in each chapter provide an entirely different approach to the language than Latin-to-English readings and should, therefore, be done regularly, but the others need not be assigned as part of the ordinary outside preparation. They are easy enough to be done at sight in class as time permits; or they can be used as a basis for review after every fourth or fifth chapter in lieu of formal review lessons.

6. ETYMOLOGIES

Lists of English derivatives are provided in parentheses after the words in the vocabularies to help impress the Latin words on the student, to demonstrate the direct or indirect indebtedness of English to Latin, and to enlarge the student's own vocabulary. Occasionally, English cognates have been added. At the end of some chapters an "Etymology" section (re-titled Etymologia in the seventh edition) introduces additional English and also Romance language derivatives, as well as other interesting points which could not be easily included in the vocabulary. From the beginning, students should consult the lists of prefixes and suffixes given in the Appendix under the heading of "Some Etymological Aids."

7. THE INTRODUCTION / INTRŌDVCTIŌ

In addition to discussing the Roman alphabet and pronunciation, the book's general Intrōductiō sketches the linguistic, literary, and palaeographical background of Latin. This background and the actual Latin of the Sententiae Antīquae and the Locī Antīquī give the student considerable insight into Roman literature, thought, expression, and experience, and evince the continuity of the Roman tradition down to our own times. It is hoped that the Intrōductiō and especially the nature of the chapters themselves will establish this book as not just another Latin grammar but rather as a humanistic introduction to the reading of genuine Latin.

The book had its inception as a group of typed lessons I designed and tried out in class as a result of the dissatisfaction expressed at the beginning of this Preface. Those initial lessons worked well, despite imperfections soon evident to myself and to colleagues who generously offered their critique. To Professor Lillian B. Lawler of Hunter College I am grateful for her perusal of the typescript and for her suggestions. I also wish to acknowledge the patience of my students and colleagues at Brooklyn College who worked with the typed material, and their helpfulness and encouragement in stating their reactions to the text. Subsequently these trial lessons were completely revised and rewritten in the light of experience. I am indebted to Professor Joseph Pearl of Brooklyn College for his kindness in scrutinizing the 40 chapters of the manuscript in their revised form and for many helpful suggestions. To the Reverend Joseph M.-F. Marique, S.J., of Boston College I herewith convey my appreciation for his encouraging and helpful review of the revised manuscript. Thomas S. Lester of Northeastern University, a man of parts and my alter īdem amīcissimus since classical undergraduate years, has my heartfelt thanks for so often and so patiently lending to my problems a sympathetic ear, a sound mind, and a sanguine spirit. To my dear wife, Dorothy, who so faithfully devoted herself to the typing of a very difficult manuscript, who was often asked for a judgment, and who, in the process, uttered many a salutary plea for clarity and for compassion toward the students, I dedicate my affectionate and abiding gratitude. My final thanks go to Dr. Gladys Walterhouse and her colleagues in the editorial department of Barnes & Noble for their friendly, efficient, and often crucial help in many matters. It need hardly be added that no one but the author is responsible for any infelicities which may remain.

THE SECOND AND THIRD EDITIONS

Because of the requests of those who found they needed more reading material than that provided by the Locī Antīquī, the author prepared a second edition which enriched the book with a new section entitled Locī Immūtātī ("Unaltered Passages"). In these selections the original ancient Latin texts have been left unchanged except for omissions at certain points, and footnotes are provided comparable to those in the Locī Antīquī. It is hoped that these readings will prove sufficiently extensive to keep a class well supplied after completing the book's 40 chapters, will give an interesting additional challenge to the person who is self-tutored, and will provide a very direct approach to the use of the regular annotated texts of classical authors.

Because of the indisputable value of repetition for establishing linguistic reflexes, a new section of "Self-Tutorial Exercises," consisting of questions on morphology and syntax, and sentences for translation, was added to the third edition. A key provides answers to all the questions and translations of all the sentences.

The second and third editions would be incomplete without a word of deep gratitude to the many who in one way or another have given kind encouragement, who have made suggestions, who have indicated emendanda. I find myself particularly indebted to Professors Josephine Bree of Albertus Magnus College, Ben L. Charney of Oakland City College, Louis H. Feldman of Yeshiva College, Robert J. Leslie of Indiana University, Mr. Thomas S. Lester of Northeastern University, the Reverend James R. Murdock of Glenmary Home Missioners, Professors Paul Pascal of the University of Washington, Robert Renehan of Harvard University, John E. Rexine of Colgate University, George Tyler of Moravian College, Ralph L. Ward of Hunter College, Dr. Gladys Walterhouse of the Editorial Staff of Barnes & Noble, and most especially, once again, to my wife Dorothy.

Frederic M. Wheelock

THE REVISED EDITION

When Professor Frederic Wheelock's Latin first appeared in 1956, the reviews extolled its thoroughness, organization, and concision; one reviewer predicted that the book "might well become the standard text" for introducing college students and other adult learners to elementary Latin. Now, more than half a century later, that prediction has certainly been proven accurate. A second edition was published in 1960, retitled Latin: An Introductory Course Based on Ancient Authors and including a rich array of additional reading passages drawn directly from Latin literature (the Locī Immūtātī); the third edition, published in 1963, added Self-Tutorial Exercises, with an answer key, for each of the 40 chapters and greatly enhanced the book's usefulness both for classroom students and for those wishing to study the language independently. In 1984, three years before the author's death, a list of passage citations for the Sententiae Antīquae was added, so that teachers and students could more easily locate and explore the context of selections they found especially interesting; and in 1992 a fourth edition appeared under the aegis of the book's new publisher, HarperCollins, in which the text was re-set and re-designed.

The fifth edition, published in 1995 and aptly retitled Wheelock's Latin, constituted the first truly substantive revision of the text in more than 30 years. The revisions which I introduced were intended, not to alter the basic concept of the text, but to enhance it; indeed, a number of the most significant changes were based on Professor Wheelock's own suggestions, contained in notes made available for the project by his family, and others reflected the experiences of colleagues around the country, many of whom (myself included) had used and admired the book for two decades or more and had in the process arrived at some consensus about certain basic ways in which it might be improved for a new generation of students.

The most obvious change in the fifth edition reflected Wheelock's own principal desideratum, shared by myself and doubtless by most who had used the book over the years, and that was the addition of passages of continuous Latin, based on ancient authors, to all 40 chapters. These are in the early chapters brief and highly adapted, but later on are more extensive and often excerpted verbatim from a variety of prose and verse writers; some had appeared in previous editions among the Locī Antīquī and the Locī Immūtātī, while many were included for the first time in the fifth edition. Some of the "Practice and Review" sentences (Exercitātiōnēs) were revised or replaced, as were a few of the Sententiae Antīquae (which in some instances were expanded into longer readings), again as suggested in part by Professor Wheelock himself.

The chapter vocabularies, generally regarded as too sparse, were expanded in most instances to about 20–25 words, a quite manageable list including new items as well as many found previously as glosses to the Sententiae Antīquae. Full principal parts were provided for all verbs from the beginning, as colleagues around the country had agreed should be done, so students would not be confronted with the somewhat daunting list previously presented in Chapter 12.

There was only minimal shifting of grammar, but in particular the imperfect tense was introduced along with the future in Chapters 5, 8, and 10, so that a past tense would be available for use in the readings at a much earlier stage. Numerals and the associated material originally in Chapter 40 were introduced in Chapter 15; and a half dozen or so important grammatical constructions previously presented in the Supplementary Syntax were instead introduced in Chapter 40 and a few of the earlier chapters. Many of the grammatical explanations were rewritten; essential information from the footnotes was incorporated into the text, while some less important notes were deleted.

Finally, I included at the end of each chapter a section titled Latīna Est Gaudium—et Ūtilis, which presents, in a deliberately informal style, a miscellany of Latin mottoes and well-known quotations, familiar abbreviations, interesting etymologies, classroom conversation items, occasional humorous asides, and even a few ghastly Latinate puns, all intended to demonstrate, on the lighter side, that Latin can indeed be pleasurable as well as edifying.

The success of the fifth edition encouraged all of us involved—Professor Wheelock's daughters, Martha Wheelock and Deborah Wheelock Taylor, our editor Greg Chaput and his associates at HarperCollins, and myself—to proceed with revisions I had proposed for a new sixth edition, published in 2000; these included: the handsome new cover art, a Roman mosaic from Tunisia depicting Vergil with a copy of the Aeneid in his lap and flanked by two Muses representing his work's inspiration; maps of ancient Italy, Greece and the Aegean area, and the Mediterranean, specially designed to include, inter alia, all the placenames mentioned in the book's readings and notes (except a few situated on the remotest fringes of the empire); numerous photographs selected primarily from classical and later European art to illustrate literary and historical figures and aspects of classical culture and mythology presented in the chapters; revision of chapter readings, for greater clarity and increased reinforcement of new and recently introduced chapter vocabulary items; expansion of derivatives lists in the chapter vocabularies and of cross-references to related words in other chapters; and enlargement of the English-Latin end vocabulary. The "sixth edition, revised" (2005) included revisions to the Intrōductiō and some of the readings and accompanying notes, as well as further expansion of the English-Latin vocabulary designed to better complement the Workbook for Wheelock's Latin (in its revised third edition by Paul Comeau and myself). The revised sixth edition was also the first in many years to appear in a hardbound version, along with the traditional paperback; audio files were produced and posted online, with an introduction to pronunciation and reading of all the chapter vocabularies; and, also for the first time, a teacher's guide was written and made available online for teachers, home-schoolers, and independent learners.

THE NEW SEVENTH EDITION

This latest edition, the seventh, published in 2011, features a great many revisions intended to make Wheelock's Latin even more effective, more interesting, and more user-friendly. The text has been entirely re-keyed, providing the opportunity for formatting and design changes that help clarify each chapter's organization and, along with new photographs and drawings, make the book more visually appealing. SMALL BOLD CAPITALS are employed to call attention to important new grammatical and other technical terms. To encourage active use of the language in the classroom, Latin is employed in the chapter titles and for section heads (Exercitātiōnēs instead of "Practice and Review," Vocābula for "Vocabulary," etc.). Material in the footnotes has either been incorporated into the text or deleted. The maps have been updated, and more frequent references appear in the text to encourage their use; the Index has been expanded.

Significant revisions have been made in each chapter's grammar discussion section (newly titled Grammatica), including systematic introduction and definition of all parts of speech, earlier introduction of verb synopsis, and clarification of numerous grammatical points.The chapter Vocābula have been revised in several ways, including spelling out full nominatives for all adjectives, genitives for all nouns, and principal parts for all verbs, even regular first conjugation verbs—thus eliminating abbreviations potentially distracting to students trying to learn new vocabulary items for the first time. Each list is preceded by a brief discussion of new or exceptional types of words that will be encountered, as well as general suggestions on how to master vocabulary.

Similarly, each chapter's Lēctiōnēs et Trānslātiōnēs ("Readings and Translations") section opens with a variety of tips aimed at building reading and translating skills. English derivatives are provided for Latin words glossed in the Sententiae Antīquae and reading passages, as an aid to learning and recalling their meanings. Some of the existing readings have been slightly revised for improved reinforcement of new and recent vocabulary and grammar; and a few new authentic readings have been added to each chapter, in particular a selection of graffiti from Pompeii, titled Scrīpta In Parietibus ("Writings on Walls"), which are accompanied by drawings or photographs and designed to provide interesting insights into the lives, and literacy, of ancient Roman men and women. These inscriptions and the chapter's literary passages are provided with expanded introductions and a few Quaestiōnēs, reading comprehension and discussion questions designed to focus the reader's attention on important points of both subject and style.

The Etymologia sections have been in some instances shortened, in other instances expanded, particularly with the addition of more Romance language derivatives; and there are a few changes to the Latīna Est Gaudium sections as well.

Finally, the website at www.wheelockslatin.com, the online teacher's guide, vocabulary cards, and other ancillaries available from Bolchazy-Carducci Publishers (www.bolchazy.com) have been updated to reflect changes to the textbook.

A FINAL NOTE TO STUDENTS AND INSTRUCTORS

The Lēctiōnēs et Trānslātiōnēs in this edition purposely provide more material for reading and translation than one would want to require for homework in the two or three days typically allotted to a chapter in a semester course or the week or so allotted in high school. Instructors are encouraged to be selective: my suggestion is to assign study of the new grammar, paradigms, and vocabulary for the first day or two, requiring for written homework only limited selections from the Exercitātiōnēs and Sententiae Antīquae, and reserving the others (or some of the others, carefully selected in advance) for in-class sight translation; assignments for the second or third day should include the reading passages and graffiti following the Sententiae Antīquae, which will give students the experience they need with continuous narrative. I like to assign one or two of the English-to-Latin Exercitātiōnēs each day, or will sometimes divide the students into small groups, giving them five minutes or so to work on one of the sentences together and having a member of each group put their sentence on the board for review. Students should regularly be encouraged to practice new material at home with the Self-Tutorial Exercises located at the back of the book, checking their accuracy with the answer key that follows, and sentences from these exercises, again pre-selected for the purpose, can be used to drill mastery of new concepts via sight translation in class.

The companion reader Scribblers, Scvlptors, and Scribes provides a broad array of entirely authentic, unadapted classical Latin texts whose vocabulary and grammar are correlated with the 40 chapters of Wheelock's Latin. These readings, including a wide range of graffiti and other inscriptions, proverbs, and literary texts, provide insights into not just the minds of Rome's movers and shakers—her politicians and generals, philosophers and poets—but also into the daily lives of the average Roman. Students should be assigned a selection from these readings for their final day on each chapter.

Most instructors will also want their students to use the Workbook for Wheelock's Latin, which contains a variety of additional exercises, including for each chapter a detailed set of Intellegenda (learner objectives), a series of questions designed to focus directly on the newly introduced grammar, a variety of transformation drills, word, phrase, and sentence translations, questions on etymologies, synonyms, antonyms, and analogies for new vocabulary items, and reading comprehension questions to test the student's understanding of the chapter's reading passages.

Those who may not have time to complete all of the many Workbook items provided for each chapter are advised at least to review the Intellegenda, answer all the Grammatica questions and then complete one or two items from each section of the Exercitātiōnēs, all the Vīs Verbōrum ("The Power of Words") etymology items, one or two of the Latin-to-English translations in section A of the Lēctiōnēs (readings), and all the items in Lēctiōnēs B (questions on the chapter's literary passages).

There are numerous other materials designed to complement Wheelock's Latin, the Workbook for Wheelock's Latin, and Scribblers, Scvlptors, and Scribes, including audio CDs, computer software, vocabulary cards, and a wealth of internet resources, most of which, along with further suggestions on teaching and learning Latin via Wheelock, are accessible at the official Wheelock's Latin Series Website, www.wheelockslatin.com, and described in my book Latin for the 21st Century: From Concept to Classroom (available from Pearson Publishers).

MĪLLE GRĀTIĀS . . .

There are many whom I am eager to thank for their support of my work on Wheelock's Latin: first and foremost, my dear wife and steadfast companion, Alice, and my children, Jean-Paul, Laura Caroline, and Kimberley Ellen, for their constant affection; my colleague Jared Klein, a distinguished Indo-European linguist, for reading and offering his judicious advice on my revisions to both the Intrōductiō and the individual chapters; graduate assistants Derek Bast, David Driscoll, Cleve Fisher, Marshall Lloyd, Sean Mathis, Matthew Payne, and Jim Yavenditti, for their energetic and capable help with a variety of tasks; Mary Wells Ricks, long-time friend and former Senior Associate Editor for the Classical Outlook, for her expert counsel on a variety of editorial matters; our department secretaries, JoAnn Pulliam and Connie Russell, for their generous clerical assistance, and graphic designer Kay Stanton for her drawings of graffiti and general assistance with illustrations; my editors at HarperCollins, Erica Spaberg, Patricia Leasure, Greg Chaput, and Stephanie Meyers, each of whom enthusiastically supported my proposals for the revised editions; Tim McCarthy, Michael Slade, and Alison Strum of Art Resource in New York, as well as colleagues Jim Anderson, Bob Curtis, Timothy Gantz†, and Frances Van Keuren, for their assistance with the graphics, and Amélia Hutchinson, Mihai Spariosu, and Sallie Spence for consulting on Romance language derivatives; Tom Elliott and Brian Turner, with the Ancient World Mapping Center, for their expertise in designing the maps; students and associates at the University of Georgia who field-tested the new material or provided other helpful assistance, among them Bob Harris and Richard Shedenhelm; colleagues around the country who offered suggestions for specific revisions, especially Ward Briggs at the University of South Carolina (whose biographies of Professor Wheelock appear in his book, A Biographical Dictionary of American Classicists, Westport CT: Greenwood Press, 1994, and in the Winter, 2003, Classical Outlook), Marshall Joseph Becker, Rob Latousek, John Lautermilch, John McChesney-Young, Braden Mechley, Fred Mench, Betty Rose Nagle, Krzysztof Odyniec, John Ramsey, Joseph Riegsecker, Cliff Roti, Les Sheridan, David Sider, Alden Smith, Brad Tillery, Cliff Weber, Stephen Westergan, Stephen Wheeler, and David J. White; Dean Wyatt Anderson, for his encouragement of my own work and all our Classics Department's endeavors; Martha Wheelock and Deborah Wheelock Taylor, my "sisters-in-Latin," for their steadfast advocacy of my work on the revised editions and their generous sharing of their father's notes; and finally, Professor Frederic M. Wheelock himself, for producing a textbook that has truly become a classic in its own right and one whose revision, therefore, became for me a labor amōris.

INTRŌDVCTIŌ

Wer fremde Sprachen nicht kennt, weiss nichts von seiner eigenen. (Goethe)

Apprendre une langue, c'est vivre de nouveau. (French proverb)

Your appreciation of the Latin language can be considerably increased by even a limited awareness of the background sketched in this Intrōdvctiō. The paragraphs on the position of the Latin language in the Indo-European language family provide some linguistic perspective not only for Latin but also for the Romance languages and English. The brief survey of Latin literature introduces the authors whose works are excerpted in the book's Sententiae Antīquae, Locī Antīquī, and Locī Immūtātī and provides a literary perspective which the student may never otherwise gain. And, of course, no introduction to the language would be complete without a discussion of the Roman alphabet and pronunciation.

THE POSITION OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE IN LINGUISTIC HISTORY

Say the words "I," "me," "is," "mother," "brother," and "ten," and you are speaking words which, in one form or another, men and women of Europe and Asia have used for thousands of years. In fact, we cannot tell how old these words actually are. If their spelling and pronunciation have changed somewhat from period to period and place to place, little wonder; what does pique the imagination is the fact that the basic elements of these symbols of human thought have had the vitality to traverse such spans of time and space down to this very moment on this continent. The point is demonstrated in this considerably abbreviated and simplified table:

English	I	me	is	mother	brother	ten
Sanskrit[1]	aham	mā	asti	mātar-	bhrātar-	daśam
Greek	egō	me	esti	mētēr	phrātēr[2]	deka
Latin	ego	mē	est	māter	frāter	decem
Anglo-Saxon[3]	ic	mē	is	mōdor	brōthor	tīen
Old Irish[4]		mé	is	máthir	bráthir	deich
Lithuanian[5]	aš	manè	esti	motė	broterėlis	dešimtis
Russian[6]	ja	menja	jest'	mat'	brat	desjat'

You can see from these columns of words that the listed languages are related. And yet, with the exception of the ultimate derivation of English from Anglo-Saxon, none of these languages stems directly from another in the list. Rather, they all go back through intermediate stages to a common ancestor, which is now lost but which can be predicated on the evidence of the languages that do survive. Such languages the philologist calls COGNATES (Latin for "related" or, more literally, "born together," i.e., from the same ancestry). The name most commonly given to the now lost ancestor of all these "relatives," or cognate languages, is INDO-EUROPEAN, because its descendants are found both in or near India (Sanskrit, Iranian) and also in Europe (Greek and Latin and the Germanic, Celtic, Slavic, and Baltic languages).[7] The Indo-European languages for which we have the oldest surviving documents are Sanskrit, Iranian, Greek, and Latin, and these documents go back centuries before the time of Christ. In addition to the common vocabulary illustrated in the above chart, this large family of languages shares many INFLECTIONS, or word-endings, in common. An INFLECTED LANGUAGE is one in which the nouns, pronouns, adjectives, and verbs have variable endings that indicate the relationship of the words to each other in a sentence. In particular, note that Anglo-Saxon, like Latin, was an inflected language but that its descendant English has lost most of its inflections (though some survive, such as "who," "he," "she" for subjects, vs. "whom," "him," her" for objects, "she loves" for third person singular, vs. "I love," "you love," etc.).

[1]The language of the sacred writings of ancient India, parent of the modern Indo-European languages of India.

[2]Though cognate with the other words in this column, classical Greek phrātēr meant member of a clan.

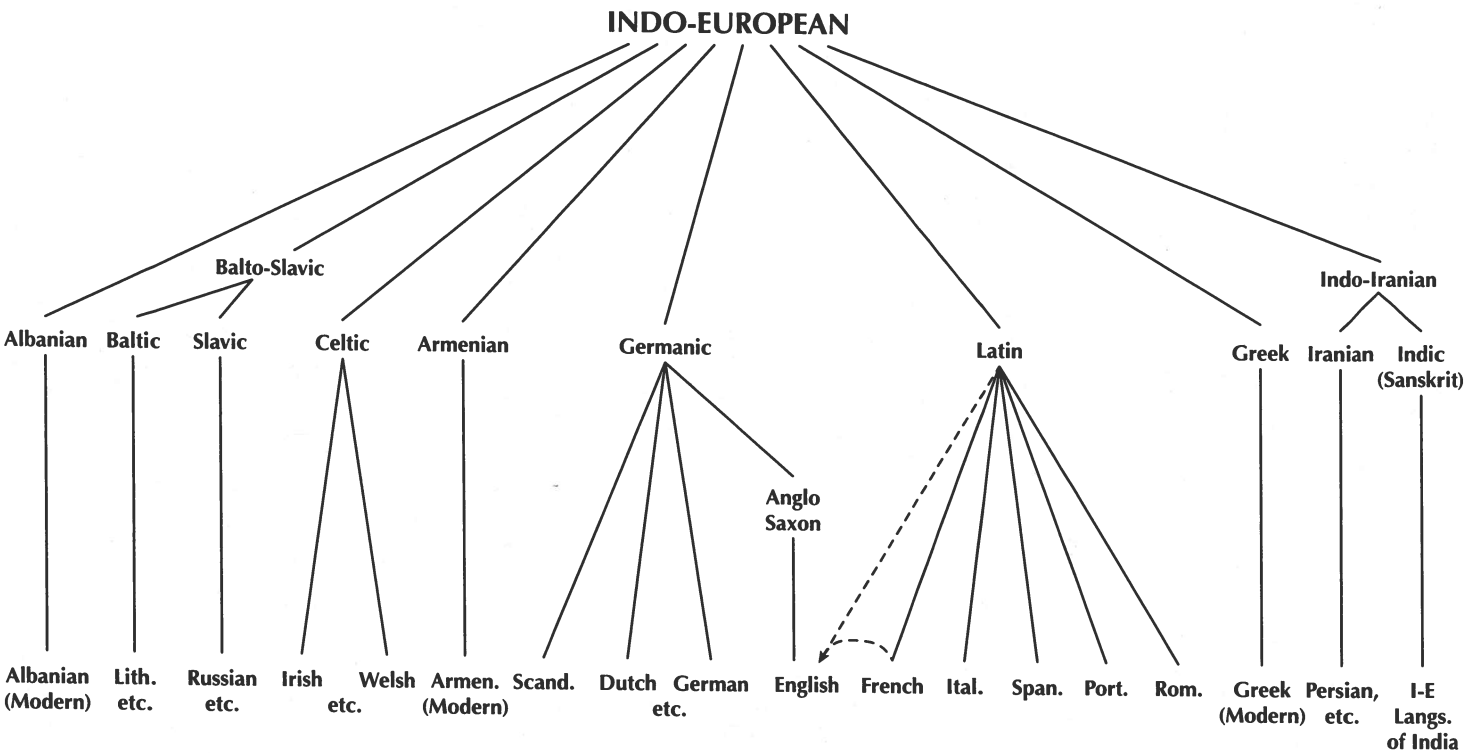
[3]As an example of the Germanic languages; others are Gothic, German, Dutch, Danish, Norwegian, Swedish, Icelandic, English.

[4]As an example of the Celtic languages; others are Welsh, Gaulish, Breton, Scots (Gaelic). Old Irish mé in the chart is actually nominative case, equivalent to "I" in meaning and usage but to "me" in form.

[5]As an example of the Baltic group; others are Latvian and Old Prussian.

[6]As an example of the Slavic group; others are Polish, Bulgarian, Czech.

[7]Note that many world languages (e.g., the Semitic languages, Egyptian, Basque, Chinese, the native languages of Africa and the Americas) lie outside the Indo-European family.



In the interest of simplicity a number of languages and intermediate stages have been omitted. Latin, for example, was only one of a number of Italic dialects, including Oscan and Umbrian, which it eventually submerged; among the Greeks there were likewise several dialects (Aeolic, Attic, Ionic, Doric). Two branches of the Indo-European language family, Anatolian and Tocharian, are now extinct and not shown on the chart.

The difference between DERIVED (from roots meaning "to flow downstream from" a source) and COGNATE languages can be demonstrated by the relationship of the Romance languages to Latin and to each other. Here we are in the realm of recorded history and can see that with the Roman political conquest of such districts as Gaul (France), Spain, and Dacia (Romania) there occurred also a Roman linguistic conquest. Out of this victorious ancient Latin as spoken by the common people (vulgus, hence "vulgar" Latin) grew the Romance languages, such as French, Spanish, Portuguese, Romanian, Occitan (or Provençal), and, of course, Italian. All these languages are "derived" from Latin and thus "cognate" with each other.

Parent	Cognate Romance Derivatives
Latin	Italian	Spanish	French	Portuguese	English Meaning
amīcus	amico	amigo	ami	amigo	friend

manus	mano	mano	main	mão	hand
bucca	bocca	boca	bouche	boca (mouth)	mouth (cheek in classical Lat.)
caballus	cavallo	caballo	cheval	cavalo	horse
fīlius	figlio	hijo	fils	filho	son
ille	il	el	le	o	the (that in classical Lat.)
illa	la	la	la	a	the (that in classical Lat.)
quattuor	quattro	cuatro	quatre	quatro	four

Although English ultimately stems from Anglo-Saxon, which is cognate with Latin, there is much more than that to the story. Anglo-Saxon itself had early borrowed a few words from Latin; and then in the 7th century more Latin (including many Latinized Greek and Hebrew words drawn from Jerome's "Vulgate" translation of the Bible) entered the language as a result of the work of St. Augustine (the Lesser), who had been sent by Pope Gregory to Christianize the Angles. After the victory of William the Conqueror in 1066, Norman French became the polite language and Anglo-Saxon was held in low esteem as the tongue of vanquished men and serfs—no longer a literary language, but simply the speech of humble daily life. Some two centuries later, however, as the descendants of the Normans finally amalgamated with the English natives, the Anglo-Saxon language reasserted itself; but in its poverty it had to borrow hundreds of French words (literary, intellectual, and cultural) before it could become the language of literature. Borrow it did abundantly, and in the 13th and 14th centuries this development produced what is called Middle English, known especially from Chaucer, who died in 1400. Along with the adoption of these Latin-rooted French words there was also some borrowing directly from Latin itself, and the renewed interest in the classics which characterized the Renaissance naturally intensified this trend during the 16th and the 17th centuries.[8] From that time to the present Latin has continued to be a source of new words, particularly for the scientist but even for ad writers and those marketing folks who invent product names!

Consequently, since English through Anglo-Saxon is cognate with Latin and yet also has directly or indirectly borrowed so many words from the language, our own vocabulary contains thousands of Latin cognates and thousands of derivatives. English "brother," for example, is cognate with Latin frāter, while "fraternal" clearly is derived from it. An important linguistic principle of sound change in the evolution of the Germanic languages, known as GRIMM'S LAW, describes shifts in consonants such as p to f, hard c (k) to h, and d to t, which account for the fact that Latin-English cognates like pēs/ped-/"foot" and cor/cord-/"heart" have a common origin. Following are a variety of examples of English cognates and derivatives of Latin words:

Latin	English Derivative	English Cognate
māter	maternal	mother
duo	dual, duet	two
dēns, stem dent-	dental	tooth
pēs, stem ped-	pedal	foot
cor, stem cord-	cordial	heart
ferō	fertile	bear

Here you see one of the reasons for the richness of our vocabulary, and the longer you study Latin the more keenly you will realize what a limited language ours would be without the Latin element. Despite the brevity of this survey you can comprehend the general position of Latin in European linguistic history and [8] Thomas Wilson (16th century) says: "The unlearned or foolish fantastical, that smells but of learning (such fellows as have been learned men in their days), will so Latin their tongues, that the simple cannot but wonder at their talk, and think surely they speak by some revelation." Sir Thomas Browne (17th century) says: "If elegancy still proceedeth, and English pens maintain that stream we have of late observed to flow from many, we shall within a few years be fain to learn Latin to understand English, and a work will prove of equal facility in either." These statements are quoted by permission from the "Brief History of the English Language" by Hadley and Kittredge in Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition, copyright, 1934, 1939, 1945, 1950, 1953, 1954, by G. & C. Merriam Co.

something of its continuing importance to us today. It is the cognate of many languages and the parent of many, and can even be called the adoptive parent of English.

A BRIEF SURVEY OF LATIN LITERATURE

Since throughout this entire book you will be reading sentences and passages excerpted from Latin literature, a brief outline is here sketched to provide an overview of both the nature and the extent of this great literary corpus. Following is a conventional chronology:

I. Archaic through Early Republican Period (down to ca. 80 B.C.)
II. Late Republican and Augustan Period (the "Golden Age": 80 B.C.–A.D. 14)
  A. Ciceronian Period (80–43 B.C.)
  B. Augustan Period (43 B.C.–A.D. 14)
III. Post-Augustan Period (the "Silver Age": A.D. 14–138)
IV. Patristic Period (late 2nd–5th cent.)
V. Medieval Period (6th–14th cent.)
VI. Renaissance (15th cent.) to the Present

ARCHAIC THROUGH EARLY REPUBLICAN PERIOD (DOWN TO CA. 80 B.C.)

The apogee of Greek civilization, including the highest development of its magnificent literature and art, was reached during the 5th and the 4th centuries before Christ. In comparison, Rome during those centuries had little to offer. Our fragmentary evidence shows only a rough, accentual native meter called Saturnian, some native comic skits, and a simple, practical prose for records and speeches.

In the 3d century B.C., however, the expansion of Roman power brought the Romans into contact with Greek civilization. Somehow the hard-headed, politically and legally minded Romans were fascinated by what they found, and the writers among them went to school to learn Greek literature. From this time on, Greek literary forms, meters, rhetorical devices, subjects, and ideas had a tremendous and continuing influence on Roman literature, even as it developed its own character and originality in a great many ways.

In fact, the Romans themselves did not hesitate to admit as much. Although the Romans now composed epics, tragedies, satires, and speeches, the greatest extant accomplishments of this period of apprenticeship to Greek models are the comedies of Plautus (ca. 254–184 B.C.) and Terence (185–159 B.C.). These were based on Greek plays of the type known as New Comedy, the comedy of manners, and they make excellent reading today. Indeed, a number of these plays have influenced modern playwrights; Plautus' Menaechmi, for instance, inspired Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

LATE REPUBLICAN AND AUGUSTAN PERIOD (80 B.C.–A.D. 14)

During the first century before Christ the Roman writers perfected their literary media and made Latin literature one of the world's greatest. It is particularly famous for its beautiful, disciplined form, which we think of as "classic," and for its real substance as well. If Lucretius complained about the poverty of the Latin vocabulary, Cicero so molded the vocabulary and the general usage that Latin remained a supple and a subtle linguistic tool for thirteen centuries and more.

THE CICERONIAN PERIOD (80–43 B.C.). The literary work of the Ciceronian Period was produced during the last years of the Roman Republic. This was a period of civil wars and dictators, of military might against constitutional right, of selfish interest, of brilliant pomp and power, of moral and religious laxity. Outstanding authors important for the book which you have in hand are:

Lucretius (Titus Lūcrētius Cārus, ca. 98–55 B.C.): author of Dē Rērum Nātūrā, a powerful didactic poem on happiness achieved through the Epicurean philosophy. This philosophy was based on pleasure, or rather the absence of pain and suffering, and was buttressed by an atomic theory which made the universe a realm of natural, not divine, law and thus eliminated fear of the gods and the tyranny of religion, which Lucretius believed had shattered men's happiness.

Catullus (Gāius Valerius Catullus, ca. 84–54 B.C.): lyric poet, the Robert Burns of Roman literature, an intense and impressionable young provincial from northern Italy who fell totally under the spell of an urban sophisticate, Lesbia (a literary pseudonym for her real name, Clodia), but finally escaped bitterly disillusioned; 113 of his poems have survived.

Cicero (Mārcus Tullius Cicerō, 106–43 B.C.): the greatest Roman orator, whose eloquence thwarted the conspiracy of the bankrupt aristocrat Catiline in 63 B.C. and 20 years later cost Cicero his own life in his patriotic opposition to Mark Antony's high-handed policies; admired also as an authority on Roman rhetoric, as an interpreter of Greek philosophy to his countrymen, as an essayist on friendship (Dē Amīcitiā) and on old age (Dē Senectūte), and, in a less formal style, as a writer of self-revealing letters. Cicero's vast contributions to the Latin language itself have already been mentioned.

Caesar (Gāius Iūlius Caesar, 102 or 100–44 B.C.): orator, politician, general, statesman, dictator, author; best known for his military memoirs, Bellum Gallicum and Bellum Cīvīle.

Nepos (Cornēlius Nepōs, 110–24 B.C.): friend of Catullus and Caesar and a writer of biographies noted rather for their relatively easy and popular style than for their importance as historical documents.

Publilius Syrus (fl. 43 B.C.): a slave who was taken to Rome and there became famous for his mimes, which today are represented only by a collection of epigrammatic sayings.

THE AUGUSTAN PERIOD (43 B.C.– A.D. 14). The first Roman Emperor gave his name to this period. Augustus wished to correct the evils of the times, to establish civil peace by stable government, and to win the Romans' support for his new regime. With this in mind he and Maecenas, his unofficial prime minister, sought to enlist literature in the service of the state. Under their patronage Vergil and Horace became what we should call poets laureate. Some modern critics feel that this fact vitiates the noble sentiments of these poets; others see in Horace a spirit of independence and of genuine moral concern, and maintain that Vergil, through the character of his epic hero Aeneas, is not simply glorifying Augustus but is actually suggesting to the emperor what is expected of him as head of the state.

Vergil (Pūblius Vergilius Marō, 70–19 B.C.): from humble origins in northern Italy; lover of nature; profoundly sympathetic student of humankind; Epicurean and mystic; severe and exacting self-critic, master craftsman, linguistic and literary architect, "lord of language"; famous as a writer of pastoral verse (the Eclogues) and of a beautiful didactic poem on farm life (the Georgics); best known as the author of one of the world's great epics, the Aeneid, a national epic with contemporary political resonances, to be sure, but one also with ample universal and human appeal to make it powerful reading for our own age.

Horace (Quīntus Horātius Flaccus, 65–8 B.C.): a freedman's son who, thanks to his father's vision and his own qualities, rose to the height of poet laureate; writer of genial and self-revealing satires; author of superb lyrics both light and serious; meticulous composer famed for the happy effects of his linguistic craftsmanship (cūriōsa fēlīcitās, painstaking felicity); synthesist of Epicurean carpe diem (harvest the day) and Stoic virtūs (virtue); preacher and practitioner of aurea mediocritās (the golden mean).

Livy (Titus Līvius, 59 B.C.– A.D. 17): friend of Augustus but an admirer of the Republic and of olden virtues; author of a monumental, epic-spirited history of Rome, and portrayer of Roman character at its best as he judged it.

Propertius (Sextus Propertius, ca. 50 B.C.–ca. A.D. 2): author of four books of romantic elegiac poems, much admired by Ovid.

Ovid (Pūblius Ovidius Nāsō, 43 B.C.– A.D.17): author of several volumes of love poetry which was hardly consonant with Augustus' plans; most famous today as the writer of the long and clever hexameter work on mythology entitled Metamorphōsēs, which has proved a thesaurus for subsequent poets. Ovid, like Pope, "lisped in numbers, for the numbers came."

THE POST-AUGUSTAN PERIOD (A.D. 14–138)

In the post-Augustan age there was a great deal of excellent writing; but often there were also artificialities and conceits, a striving for effects and a passion for epigram, characteristics which often indicate a less sure literary sense and power—hence the conventional, though overstated, distinction between the "Golden Age" of the late Republic and Augustan era and this so-called "Silver Age." The temperaments of not a few emperors also had a limiting, even blighting effect on the literature of this period.

Seneca (Lūcius Annaeus Seneca, 4 B.C.–A.D. 65): Stoic philosopher from Spain; tutor of Nero; author of moral essays on the Stoic spirit, of tragedies (which, though marred by too much rhetoric and too many conceits, had considerable influence on the early modern drama of Europe), and of the Apocolocyntōsis ("Pumpkinification"), a brilliantly witty, though sometimes cruel, prosimetric satire on the death and deification of the emperor Claudius.

Petronius (exact identity and dates uncertain, but probably Titus Petrōnius Arbiter, died A.D. 66): Neronian consular and courtier; author of the Satyricon, a satiric, prosimetric novel of sorts, famous for its depiction of the nouveau-riche freedman Trimalchio and his extravagant dinner-parties.

Quintilian (Mārcus Fabius Quīntiliānus, ca. A.D. 35–95): teacher and author of the Īnstitūtiō Ōrātōria, a famous pedagogical work which discusses the entire education of a person who is to become an orator; a great admirer of Cicero's style and a critic of the rhetorical excesses of his own age.

Martial (Mārcus Valerius Mārtiālis, A.D. 45–104): famed for his more than 1,500 witty epigrams and for the satirical twist which he so often gave to them. As he himself says, his work may not be great literature but people do enjoy it.

Pliny the Younger (Gāius Plīnius Caecilius Secundus, ca. A.D. 62–113): a conscientious public figure, who is now best known for his Epistulae, letters which reveal both the bright and the seamy sides of Roman life during this imperial period.

Tacitus (Pūblius Cornēlius Tacitus, A.D. 55–117): most famous as a satirical, pro-senatorial historian of the period from the death of Augustus to the death of Domitian.

Juvenal (Decimus Iūnius Iuvenālis, ca. A.D. 55–post 127): a relentless, intensely rhetorical satirist of the evils of his times, who concludes that the only thing for which one can pray is a mēns sāna in corpore sānō (a sound mind in a sound body). His satires inspired Dr. Samuel Johnson's London and The Vanity of Human Wishes and the whole conception of caustic, "Juvenalian" satire.

THE ARCHAISING PERIOD. The mid- to late 2nd century may be distinguished as an archaizing period, in which a taste developed for the vocabulary and style of early Latin and for the incorporation of diction from vulgar Latin; characteristic authors of the period were the orator Fronto and the antiquarian Aulus Gellius, known for his miscellaneous essays Noctēs Atticae ("Nights in Attica").

THE PATRISTIC PERIOD (Late 2nd Cent.–5th Cent.)

The name of the Patristic Period comes from the fact that so much of the vital literature was the work of the Christian leaders, or fathers (patrēs), among whom were Tertullian, Cyprian, Lactantius, Jerome, Ambrose, and Augustine. These men had been well educated; they were familiar with, and frequently fond of, the best classical authors; many of them had even been teachers or lawyers before going into service of the Church. At times the classical style was deliberately employed to impress the pagans, but more and more the concern was to reach the common people (vulgus) with the Christian message. Consequently, it is not surprising to see a re-emergence of in contemporary literature of vulgar Latin, the language of the common people whose linguistic roots date back to early Republican times. In fact, the language of Plautus has much in common with this later vulgar Latin, and we know that throughout the late Republican and post-Augustan periods vulgar Latin lived on as the colloquial idiom of the people while kept distinct from the literary idiom of the texts and the polished conversation of those ages. St. Jerome in his letters is essentially Ciceronian, but in his Latin edition of the Bible, the "Vulgate" (383–405 A.D.), he uses the language of the people. Similarly St. Augustine, though formerly a teacher and a great lover of the Roman classics, was willing to use any idiom that would reach the people and remarked that it did not matter if even the barbarians conquered Rome provided they were Christian.

THE MEDIEVAL PERIOD (6th–14th Cents.)

During the first three centuries of the Medieval period, vulgar Latin underwent rapid changes—e.g., the loss of most declensional endings and the increased use of prepositions, extensive employment of auxiliary verbs, widely variable uses of the subjunctive and the indicative—and, reaching the point when it could no longer be called Latin, it became this or that Romance language according to the locality.

On the other hand, Latin, the literary idiom more or less modified by the Vulgate and other influences, continued throughout the Middle Ages as the living language of the Church and of the intellectual world. Though varying considerably in character and quality, it was an international language, and Medieval Latin literature is sometimes called "European" in contrast to the earlier "national Roman." In this Medieval Latin was written a varied and living literature (religious works, histories, anecdotes, romances, dramas, sacred and secular poetry), examples of which appear in this book, in the excerpt from the 7th century writer Isidore of Seville (in Capvt XXIX) and selections from other authors in the Locī Antīquī. The long life of Latin is attested in the early 14th century by the facts that Dante composed in Latin the political treatise Dē Monarchiā, that he wrote in Latin his Dē Vulgārī Ēloquentiā to justify his use of the vernacular Italian for literature, and that in Latin pastoral verses he rejected the exhortation to give up the vernacular, in which he was writing the Divine Comedy, and compose something in Latin. At the same time, by token of Dante's success and that of others in the use of the vernacular languages, it must be admitted that Latin had begun to wage a losing battle.

THE PERIOD FROM THE RENAISSANCE (15th Cent.) TO THE PRESENT

Because of Petrarch's new-found admiration of Cicero, Renaissance scholars scorned Medieval Latin and turned to Cicero in particular as the canon of perfection. Although this return to the elegant Ciceronian idiom was prompted by great affection and produced brilliant effects, it was an artificial movement which made Latin somewhat imitative and static compared with the spontaneous, living language which it had been during the Middle Ages. However, Latin continued to be effectively employed well into the modern period—by Erasmus and Sir Thomas More in the 16th century, by Milton, Bacon, and Newton in the 17th century, and by botanists, classical scholars, and poets of the later centuries—and the ecclesiastical strain is still very much alive (despite its de-emphasis in the early 1960s) as the language of the Roman Catholic Church and seminaries. Furthermore, the rediscovery of the true, humanistic spirit of the ancient Latin and Greek literatures and the fresh attention to literary discipline and form as found in the classics proved very beneficial to the native literature of the new era.

The purpose of this abbreviated outline has been to provide some sense of the unbroken sweep of Latin literature from the 3rd century B.C. down to our own times. Besides enjoying its own long and venerable history, Latin literature has also inspired, schooled, and enriched our own English and other occidental literatures to a degree beyond easy assessment. Add to this the wide influence of the Latin language itself as outlined above and you can hardly escape the conclusion that Latin is dead only in the narrow technical sense of the word, and that even a limited knowledge of Latin is a great asset to anyone who works with or is interested in English and the Romance languages and literatures and, indeed, to any educated person determined to read, write, and think with precision and a broad cultural perspective.

THE ALPHABET AND PRONUNCIATION

The forms of the letters which you see on this printed page are centuries old. They go back through the earliest Italian printed books of the 15th century[9] and through the finest manuscripts of the 12th and 11th centuries to the firm, clear Carolingian bookhand of the 9th century as perfected under the inspiration of the Carolingian Renaissance by the monks of St. Martin's at Tours in France. These monks developed the small letters from beautiful clear semi-uncials, which in turn lead us back to the uncials and square capitals of the Roman Empire—uncials, developed from Roman cursive, resembled square capitals except that the sharp corners of the angular letters were rounded so that they could be written with greater rapidity. Today we are in the habit of distinguishing the Roman alphabet from the Greek, but the fact is that the Romans learned to write from the Etruscans, who in turn had learned to write from Greek colonists who had settled in the vicinity of Naples during the 8th century B.C.; thus the Roman alphabet is simply one form of the Greek alphabet. But the Greeks were themselves debtors in this matter, for, at an early date, they had adapted their alphabet from a Semitic source, the Phoenicians; while the 22 letters of the Phoenician script, itself influenced by Egyptian hieroglyphics, had represented only consonant sounds, however, the Greeks showed their originality in using some of these letters to designate vowel sounds. The history of the letter-forms you see in our books today provides one more illustration of our indebtedness to European, Near Eastern, and North African antiquity.

[9]Called "incunabula" because they were made in the "cradle days" of printing. The type is called "Roman" to distinguish it from the "black-letter" type which was used in northern

The Roman alphabet was like ours except that it lacked the letters j and w. Furthermore, the letter v originally stood for both the sound of the vowel u and the sound of the consonant w (originally a literal "double u," i.e., vv). Not until the second century of our era did the rounded u-form appear to distinguish vowel from consonant, but for convenience both v and u are employed in the Latin texts of most modern editions. The letter k was rarely used, and then only before a, in a very few words. The letters y (Greek upsilon, Y) and z (Greek zeta) were introduced toward the end of the Republic to be used in spelling words of Greek origin.

The following tables indicate approximately the sounds of Latin and how the letters were used by Romans of the classical period to represent those sounds (there are several differences of pronunciation in medieval and ecclesiastical Latin).

Vowels

Vowels in Latin had essentially two possible pronunciations, long and short. Long vowels were generally held about twice as long as short vowels (cf. half notes to quarter notes in music) and are marked in this book, as in most beginning texts, Europe (cp. the German type). The Italian printers based their Roman type on that of the finest manuscripts of the period, those written for the wealthy, artistic, exacting Renaissance patrons. The scribes of those manuscripts, seeking the most attractive kind of script with which to please such patrons, found it in manuscripts written in the best Carolingian book-hand.

with a MACRON or LONG MARK (e.g., ā); vowels without a macron are short. Students should regard macrons as part of the spelling of a word, since the differences of pronunciation they indicate are often crucial to meaning (e.g., liber is a noun meaning book, while līber is an adjective meaning free); the Romans themselves recognized the importance of such differences and (occasionally, not always) marked long vowels in a variety of ways, sometimes by writing them larger than short vowels (LĪBER) or writing them twice (LIIBER) or, more commonly and even in personal letters and graffiti, by writing a mark called in Latin an APEX, resembling an acute accent, above the vowel (LÍBER). Though there were most certainly individual differences, the pronunciations of the long and short vowels were approximately as follows—be sure to listen to the pronunciation of these words and all the Latin in this Intrōdvctiō either on the audio CD set Readings from Wheelock's Latin or online at www.wheelockslatin.com):

Long	Short
ā as in father: dās, cārā	a as in Dinah: dat, casa
ē as in they: mē, sēdēs	e as in pet: et, sed
ī as in machine: hīc, sīca	i as in pin: hic, sicca
ō as in clover: ōs, mōrēs	o as in orb, off: os, mora
ū as in rude: tū, sūmō	u as in put: tum, sum

y, either short or long, a vowel with a sound intermediate between u and i, as in French tu or German über—one of only a few sounds in classical Latin that do not occur in modern English

Diphthongs

Latin has the following six diphthongs, combinations of two vowel sounds that were collapsed together into a single syllable:

ae as ai in aisle: cārae, saepe
au as ou in house: aut, laudō ei as in reign: deinde eu as Latin e + u, pronounced rapidly as a single syllable: seu. The sound does not occur in English and is rare in Latin.
oe as oi in oil: coepit, proelium ui as in Latin u + i, spoken as a single syllable like Spanish muy (or like English gooey, pronounced quickly as a single syllable). This diphthong occurs only in huius, cuius, huic, cui, hui. Elsewhere the two letters are spoken separately as in fu-it, frūctu-ī.

Consonants

Latin consonants had essentially the same sounds as the English consonants with the following exceptions:

bs and bt were pronounced ps and pt (e.g., urbs, obtineō); otherwise Latin b had the same voiced sound as our letter (e.g., bibēbant).

c was always hard as in can, never soft as in city: cum, cīvis, facilis.

g was always hard as in get, never soft as in gem: glōria, gerō. When it appeared before n, the letter g represented a nasalized ng sound as in hang-nail: magnus.

h was a breathing sound, an ASPIRATE, as in English, only less harshly pronounced: hic, haec

i (which also represented a vowel) usually functioned as a consonant with the sound of y as in yes when used before a vowel at the beginning of a word (iūstus = yustus); between two vowels within a word it served in double capacity: as the vowel i forming a diphthong with the preceding vowel, and as the consonant y (reiectus = rei-yectus; maior = mai-yor, with the ai pronounced like that in aisle; cuius = cui-yus); otherwise it was usually a vowel. This so-called CONSONANTAL i regularly appears in English derivatives as a j (a letter added to the alphabet in the Middle Ages); hence maior = major, Iūlius = Julius.

m had the sound it has in English, pronounced with the lips closed: monet. There is some evidence, however, that in at least certain instances final -m (i.e., -m at the end of a word), following a vowel, was pronounced with the lips open, producing a nasalization of the preceding vowel, another of the few sounds of classical Latin not occurring in English: tum, etiam.

q, as in English, is always followed by consonantal u, the combination having the sound kw: quid, quoque.

r was trilled; the Romans called it the littera canīna, because its sound suggested the snarling of a dog: Rōma, cūrāre.

s was always voiceless as in see, never voiced as in our word ease: sed, posuissēs, mīsistis.

t always had the sound of t as in tired, never of sh as in nation or ch as in mention: taciturnitās, nātiōnem, mentiōnem.

v had the sound of our w: vīvō = wīwō, vīnum = wīnum.

x had the sound of ks as in axle, not of gz as in exert: mixtum, exerceō.

ch represented Greek chi and had the sound of ckh in blockhead, not of ch in church: chorus, Archilochus.

ph represented Greek phi and had the sound of ph in uphill, not the f sound in our pronunciation of philosophy: philosophia.

th represented Greek theta and had the sound of th in hothouse, not of th in thin or the: theātrum.

The Romans quite appropriately pronounced double consonants as two separate consonants; we in our haste usually render them as a single consonant. For instance, the rr in the Latin word currunt sounded something like the two r's in watch the cur run (except that in Latin each r was trilled); and the tt in admittent sounded like the two t's in admit ten.

Syllables

In Latin as in English, a word has as many syllables as it has vowels and diphthongs.

Syllabification: In dividing a word into syllables:

1. Two contiguous vowels or a vowel and a diphthong are separated: dea, de-a; deae, de-ae.
2. A single consonant between two vowels goes with (because pronounced with) the second vowel: amīcus, a-mī-cus.
3. When two or more consonants stand between two vowels, generally only the last consonant goes with the second vowel: mittō, mit-tō; servāre, ser-vā-re; cōnsūmptus, cōn-sūmp-tus. However, a stop (p, b, t, d, c, g) + a liquid (l, r) generally (with common exceptions in poetry) count as a single consonant and go with the following vowel: patrem, pa-trem; castra, cas-tra. Also counted as single consonants are qu and the aspirates ch, ph, th, which should never be separated in syllabification: architectus, ar-chi-tec-tus; loquācem, lo-quā-cem.

Syllable quantity: A syllable is LONG BY NATURE if it contains a long vowel or a diphthong; a syllable is LONG BY POSITION if it contains a short vowel followed by two or more consonants or by x, which is a double consonant (= ks). Otherwise a syllable is short; again, the difference is rather like that between a musical half-note and a quarter-note. In applying these rules, remember that a stop + a liquid as well as qu and the aspirates ch, ph, and th regularly count as a single consonant: e.g., pa-trem, quo-que, phi-lo-so-phi-a.

Syllables long by nature (here underlined): lau-dō, Rō-ma, a-mī-cus.
Syllables long by position (underlined): ser-vat, sa-pi-en-ti-a, ax-is (= ak-sis).
Examples with all long syllables, whether by nature or by position, underlined:
lau-dā-te, mo-ne-ō, sae-pe, cōn-ser-vā-tis, pu-el-lā-rum.

Even in English, syllables have this sort of temporal quantity, i.e., some syllables take longer to pronounce than others (consider the word "enough," with its very short, clipped first syllable, and the much longer second syllable), but it is not a phenomenon we think much about. The matter is important in Latin, however, for at least two reasons: first, syllable quantity was a major determinant of the rhythm of Latin poetry, as you will learn later in your study of the language; and, of more immediate importance, syllable quantity determined the position of the stress accent in words of three or more syllables, as explained below.

Accent

Words in Latin, like those in English, were pronounced with extra emphasis on one syllable (or more than one, in the case of very long words); the placement of this STRESS ACCENT in Latin (unlike English) followed these strict and simple rules:

1. In a word of two syllables the accent always falls on the first syllable: sér-vō, saé-pe, ní-hil.
2. In a word of three or more syllables (a) the accent falls on the next to last syllable (sometimes called the PENULT), if that syllable is long (ser-vā́-re, cōn-sér-vat, for-tū́-na); (b) otherwise, the accent falls on the syllable before that (the ANTEPENULT: mó-ne-ō, pá-tri-a, pe-cū́-ni-a, vó-lu-cris).

Because these rules for accentuation are so regular, accent marks (as opposed to macrons) are not ordinarily included when writing Latin; in this text, however, accents are provided in both the PARADIGMS (sample declensions and conjugations) and the chapter vocabularies, as an aid to correct pronunciation.

LANGUAGE IS SPEECH: The Importance of Pronunciation and Reading Aloud

Although oral-aural communication and conversational skills are sometimes—and unfortunately—given little stress in the Latin classroom, nevertheless a reasonably correct and consistent pronunciation is essential to the mastery of Latin, as of any language. An ability to pronounce words and to read sentences and longer texts aloud according to the few, simple rules provided in this Intrōdvctiō will also enable you to "pronounce" correctly in your mind and, as you think of a word, to spell it correctly. Without that ability, you will confuse not only the sounds of the language, but also the spelling and often therefore the meaning of its words.

Fortunately, as you have seen in this discussion, prōnūntiātiō Latīna est facilis, Latin pronunciation is easy, far easier than that of English or any other language I know. Vowels have only two possible sounds; most consonants have only one; and the rules for accentuation are just that, rules that you can count on every time. Moreover, nearly every sound that existed in classical Latin occurs also in English (the chief exceptions being the vowel y and the diphthong eu, neither of which was very common, the trilled r, and final -m). And in Latin, "what you see is what you get" or rather "what you see is what you hear": there are no "silent e's" or other such oddities of correlating spelling with sound that have led to the familiar quip that in English "ghoti" can even be pronounced "fish" (gh- as in "enough," -o- as in "women," and -ti as in "nation")!

As you begin your study of Latin, remember that it did not merely consist of written texts to be read mutely from a printed page, but it was for a millennium and more a spoken language—a language learned and spoken by Roman boys and girls, in fact, just as your own native language was acquired and spoken by you in your childhood; it was a living language read and spoken by average Roman women and men, and not just by famous orators, poets, and politicians. And—a fact some may find startling—the Romans themselves never read silently, but always aloud; they regarded language as speaking and listening, and viewed writing as merely a convenient means of recording communications spoken and heard.

In your study of this classic and (because of its recurring inflections) highly sonorous tongue, you should apply all your language learning skills toward acquiring mastery, spending at least a few minutes every day listening and speaking, and not just silently reading and writing. In a classroom setting, you will have abundant opportunity to hear the language; but even so, or if you are studying independently, the Readings from Wheelock's Latin CDs and the online audio at www.wheelockslatin.com are indispensable resources. Always practice and review paradigms and vocabulary items by listening to and reading them aloud. Most especially, like a true Roman, read aloud every Latin sentence or passage you encounter; and, though this book will certainly help you develop your skills in translating Latin into English, you should first read every Latin text aloud for comprehension, reading and hearing and thinking what the text is saying, before ever attempting to translate into English.

CAPVT I

Verbs; First and Second Conjugations; Adverbs; Reading and Translating

Salvē ("Greetings!"), and WELCOME to the study of classical Latin, or what I affectionately call "The Mother Tongue"! You already know a great deal about the design and purposes of this book from reading the Preface and Intrōductiō and thus are aware you are embarking on a fascinating journey into, not only the language, but also the literature and culture of ancient Rome. The task will be challenging, but the rewards manifold, and so I bid you bonam fortūnam! (you can deduce the meaning of that phrase from the context and English derivatives, but, if not, look up both words in the Latin-English Vocābula at the back of the book. . . .)

GRAMMATICA ("GRAMMAR TOPICS")

Each of this book's chapters opens with a discussion of grammatical issues essential to the mastery of Latin, typically including both MORPHOLOGY (word forms) and SYNTAX (usage of those forms within a sentence). Throughout each chapter important new terms, like "morphology" and "syntax" here, are regularly printed in these SMALL BOLD CAPITALS, usually at their first few occurrences in the book, as a reminder that they are items you must be familiar with.

VERBS (sg. verbum, pl. verba)

Since a VERB (from Latin verbum, whose basic meaning is word) describes its subject's activity or state of being, and is thus one of the most important words in a sentence, we may best begin our study of Latin with a look at that part of speech (the other PARTS OF SPEECH in Latin are the same as those in English: NOUNS, PRONOUNS, ADJECTIVES, ADVERBS, PREPOSITIONS, CONJUNCTIONS, INTERJECTIONS, each of which is systematically introduced in this book).

In Latin as in English, verbs exhibit the following five characteristics:

PERSON (Lat. persōna): who is the subject, i.e., who performs (or, in the passive, receives) the action, from the speaker's point of view; 1st person = the speaker(s), I, we; 2nd = the person(s) spoken to, you; 3rd = the person(s) spoken about, he, she, it, they.

NUMBER (numerus): how many subjects, singular or plural.

TENSE (tempus, time): the time of the action; Latin has six tenses, present, future, imperfect, perfect, future perfect, and pluperfect.

MOOD (modus, manner): the manner of indicating the action or state of being of the verb; like English, Latin has the INDICATIVE (which "indicates" facts) and the IMPERATIVE (which orders actions), both introduced in this chapter, and the SUBJUNCTIVE (which describes, in particular, hypothetical or potential actions), introduced in Capvt XXVIII VOICE (vōx): an indication, with transitive verbs (those that can take direct objects), of whether the subject performs the action (ACTIVE VOICE) or receives it (PASSIVE VOICE).

Conjugation (coniugātiō)

To CONJUGATE (coniugāre, join together) a FINITE VERB (i.e., a verb that exhibits the above characteristics, as opposed to *in*finitives, which lack person and number) is to list all its forms, according to these variations of person, number, tense, mood, and voice. If asked to conjugate the English verb to praise in the present tense, active voice, of the indicative mood, you would say:

	Singular	Plural
1st person	I praise	we praise
2nd person	you praise	you praise
3rd person	he (she, it) praises	they praise

The person and the number of five of these forms cannot be determined in English without the aid of pronouns I, you, we, they. Only in the third person singular can you omit the pronoun he (she, it) and still make clear by the special ending of the verb that praises is third person singular.

Personal Endings

What English can accomplish in only one of the six forms, Latin can do in all six by means of PERSONAL ENDINGS, which indicate distinctly the person, the number, and the voice of the verb. Since these personal endings will be encountered in every Latin sentence, you need to memorize them now, and it's easily done. For the active voice they are:

Singular
1st person	-ō or -m, which corresponds to I.
2nd person	-s, which corresponds to you (sg.).
3rd person	-t, which corresponds to he, she, it.
Plural
1st person	-mus, which corresponds to we.
2nd person	-tis, which corresponds to you (pl.).
3rd person	-nt, which corresponds to they.

The next step is to find a verb STEM to which these endings can be added.

Present Active Infinitive and Present Stem

An INFINITIVE is a common verbal form, usually preceded with "to" in English ("to err is human, to forgive divine"). The present active infinitives of the model verbs used in this book for the first and second conjugations are:

laudāre, to praise monēre, to advise

The -āre ending, with its -ā- STEM VOWEL, identifies a verb as first conjugation; -ēre and the -ē- characterize second conjugation verbs (Latin has four conjugations altogether, each marked by a different stem vowel—the third and fourth conjugations are introduced in later chapters). Drop the -re, the actual infinitive ending, and you have the PRESENT STEM, which ends in ā for first conjugation verbs, ē for second:

laudā- monē-

To this stem add the personal endings (with the few modifications noted below), and you are ready to read or to say something in Latin about the present: e.g., laudā + s > laudās, you praise; monēmus, we advise.

This leads us to the first of many paradigms presented in this book. PARADIGMS (from Greek paradeigma, pattern, example) are presented throughout the chapters and in the Appendix (see Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 495–509) to provide model summaries of forms. The ancient Romans learned the many INFLECTIONS (the changing endings of individual words) from their parents, teachers, and daily contact with other Latin speakers, just as we as children learned our own native language (and such inflections as "they" and "them," or "see" and "sees"). Since we lack this natural Latin-speaking environment and usually begin the study of Latin at a relatively late age under the exigencies of time, the analytical "grammar-translation" approach through paradigms (which even the Romans themselves had to learn) is widely regarded as a highly effective method for high-schoolers, college students, and other adult learners.

In the process of memorizing paradigms, be sure always to say them aloud, as speaking and listening to the language, to its basic sounds and rhythms, is essential to acquiring mastery; if you have the audio package, Readings from Wheelock's Latin, you can hear all the book's paradigms (as well as the 40 chapter vocabularies and Latin readings) pronounced there.

Present Indicative Active of laudō and moneō

Singular
1. laúdō, I praise, am praising, do praise	móneō, I advise, etc.
2. laúdās, you praise, are praising, do praise	mónēs, you advise, etc.
3. laúdat, he (she, it) praises, is praising, does praise	mónet, he (she, it) advises, etc.
Plural
1. laudámus, we praise, are praising, do praise	monḗmus, we advise, etc.
2. laudátis, you praise, are praising, do praise	monḗtis, you advise, etc.
3. laúdant, they praise, are praising, do praise	mónent, they advise, etc.

Note that Latin has only these present active indicative forms, and so the following English translations are possible, depending on context; e.g., mē laudant, they praise me (SIMPLE PRESENT) or they are praising me (PROGRESSIVE PRESENT) or they do praise me (EMPHATIC PRESENT).

ACCENT marks (as in mónent) are provided in the paradigms only for convenience; since they follow the strict rules for accentuation explained in the Intrōductiō, they need not, and should not, be included in your own conjugation of Latin verbs (unless you are asked to do so by your instructor).

The MACRONS, however, must be included (just as the Romans themselves frequently marked long vowels in a variety of ways), and the long vowel sounds they indicate must be taken into account in pronouncing and memorizing the paradigms and in conjugating other verbs. Note that the stem vowel has no macron in certain forms (e.g., moneō, laudant); learn the following rule, which will make it easier to account for macrons that seem to disappear and reappear arbitrarily:

> Vowels that are normally long are regularly shortened when they occur immediately before another vowel (hence moneō instead of monēō), before -m, -r, or -t at the end of a word (hence laudat, not laudāt), or before nt or nd in any position (laudant, not laudānt: the asterisks here and elsewhere in this book indicate a hypothetical form not actually occurring in classical Latin).

In the case of first conjugation, or -ā-, verbs (vs. second conjugation, -ē- verbs), the stem vowel is not merely shortened but disappears entirely in the first person singular, through contraction with final -ō (laudō, not laudāō).

Present Active Imperative

The IMPERATIVE MOOD is used for giving commands; the singular imperative is identical to the present stem, and the plural imperative (employed when addressing two or more persons) is formed by adding -te to that stem:

2nd person singular	laúdā, praise!	mónē, advise!
2nd person plural	laudāte, praise!	monēte, advise!

ADVERBS (sg. adverbium, pl. adverbia)

In Latin and English, an ADVERB is a word that modifies a verb, an adjective, or another adverb, and is typically positioned before that word (ad + verbum, next to/near the verb); nōn and saepe appear in the following Vocābula, and many others will be introduced in subsequent chapters.

> Nōn valet. She (or he) is not well. Mē saepe laudant. They often praise me. Mē nōn saepe monēs. You do not often advise me.

VOCĀBVLA ("VOCABULARY")

In memorizing the Vocābula in every chapter, pronounce (prōnūntiā!) each Latin word carefully, with attention to macrons, according to the rules learned in the Intrōductiō, along with the English meanings; listen to each chapter's vocabulary on the Readings from Wheelock's Latin CDs or online at www.wheelockslatin.com. Thorough memorization of vocabulary is a sine qua non (sine quā nōn, without which not), an absolute essential to mastering a language, and there are no shortcuts; spend at least 5-10 minutes every single day studying a chapter's new vocabulary and reviewing words introduced in previous chapters.

Most vocabulary entries contain additional information that should be learned, often including an indication of the part of speech (adverb, conjunction, etc.) and a selection of English derivatives listed in parentheses at the end of the entry. Like an English verb, a Latin verb has PRINCIPAL PARTS (usually four, vs. three in English, as in "go, went, gone") which must be memorized in order to fully conjugate the verb. As you will see from the following list, the first principal part is the first person singular present active indicative, and the second principal part is the present active infinitive; the function of the remaining principal parts will be explained in later chapters. Try conjugating two or three of the verbs in this list, and give their singular and plural imperatives too.

mē, pron. (= pronoun, see p. 537–39 for a list of the abbreviations used in this book) me, myself
quid, pron., what (quid pro quo, quiddity) níhil, noun, nothing (nil, nihilism, annihilate) nōn, adv. (adverb), not saépe, adv., often sī, conj. (conjunction), if ámō, amāre, amāvī, amātum, to love, like; amābō tē, idiom, please (lit., I will love you) (amorous, amatory, Amanda) cōgitō, cōgitāre, cōgitāvī, cōgitātum, to think, ponder, consider, plan (cogitate, cogitation, cogitative) dēbeō, dēbēre, dēbuī, dēbitum, to owe; ought, must, should (debt, debit, due, duty) dō, dáre, dédī, dátum, to give, offer (date, data, dative); unlike other first conj. verbs, the stem vowel of dō is long only in the 2nd pers. sg. indic. (dās) and sg. imperat. (dā).
érrō, errāre, errāvī, errātum, to wander; err, go astray, make a mistake, be mistaken (erratic, errant, erroneous, error, aberration) laúdō, laudāre, laudāvī, laudātum, to praise (laud, laudable, laudatory) móneō, monēre, mónuī, mónitum, to remind, advise, warn (admonish, admonition, monitor, monument, monster, premonition) sálveō, salvēre, to be well, be in good health; sálvē, salvéte, hello, greetings! (salvation, salver, salvage) sérvō, servāre, servāvī, servātum, to preserve, save, keep, guard (observe, preserve, reserve, reservoir) cōnsérvō, cōnservāre, cōnservāvī, cōnservātum (con-servō), a stronger form of servō, to preserve, conserve, maintain (conservative, conservation, conservator) térreō, terrēre, térruī, térritum, to frighten, terrify (terrible, terrific, terrify, terror, terrorist, deter) váleō, valēre, váluī, valitūrum, to be strong, have power; be well; válē (valéte), goodbye, farewell! (valedictorian, valid, invalidate, prevail, prevalent) vídeō, vidēre, vīdī, vīsum, to see; observe, understand (video, provide, evident, view, review, revise, revision, television) vócō, vocāre, vocāvī, vocātum, to call, summon (vocation, advocate, vocabulary, convoke, evoke, invoke, provoke, revoke)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ ("READING AND TRANSLATION")

Before attempting to read the following sentences and passage (all of which are based, however freely, on ancient sources), be sure you have memorized the paradigms and Vocābula and practiced conjugating some of the verbs in the list. You should also first assess your mastery of each chapter's grammatical material by using the Self-Tutorial Exercises at the back of the book (p. 412–45): write out your answers to the grammar questions and your translations of at least some of the sentences, and then check your responses against the Answer Key at p. 446–83; if you have made mistakes, analyze them and review accordingly, before proceeding to the chapter's readings.

The following simple rules will assist you with reading and translating. First, listen to the CDs, if you have them, and always read each sentence aloud (just as the Romans did!); read for comprehension, thinking about the meanings of words and phrases and the likely sense of the whole sentence. The verb often comes last in Latin: if its ending is either first or second person, you already know the subject ("I," "we," or "you") and can begin your translation there; if the verb is third person (i.e., ending with -t or -nt), look for a noun that might be the subject, frequently the first word in the sentence. Subject-object-verb (SOV) is a common word-order pattern in Latin (vs. SVO in English).

SENTENTIAE ("Sentences")

1. Labor mē vocat. (Note the SOV word order.—labor; "laboratory," "elaborate"; a noun, and one of hundreds of Lat. words that come into Eng. with their spelling unchanged; such words are typically not defined in these notes, as you are expected to intuit their meaning, but usually they may be found in the end Vocab., p. 518–36 below.)
2. Monē mē, sī errō—amābō tē!
3. Festīnā lentē. (A favorite saying of the emperor Augustus.—festīnō, festīnāre, to hasten, make haste; "Festina," a brand of wristwatch.—lentē, adv., slowly.)
4. Laudās mē; culpant mē. (culpō, culpāre, to blame, censure; "culpable," "culprit.")
5. Saepe peccāmus. (peccō, peccāre, to sin; "peccadillo," "impeccable.")
6. Quid dēbēmus cōgitāre?
7. Cōnservāte mē!
8. Rūmor volat. (volō, volāre, to fly; "volatile," "volley.")
9. Mē nōn amat.
10. Nihil mē terret. (SOV again.)
11. Apollō mē saepe servat.
12. Salvēte!—quid vidētis? Nihil vidēmus.
13. Saepe nihil cōgitās.
14. Bis dās, sī cito dās. (bis, adv., twice; "bisect," "bicycle."—cito, adv., quickly; "citation," "incite."—What do you suppose this ancient proverb meant?)
15. Sī valēs, valeō. (A friendly sentiment with which Romans often commenced a letter.)

Each chapter contains a few sentences to translate from English into Latin; you will enjoy these composition exercises, which will soon have you thinking like an ancient Roman! You will need to carefully analyze the English sentence first, of course, thinking for example about the person and number of the verb; and use the few rules of word order you have learned in this chapter.

16. What does he see?
17. They are giving nothing.
18. You ought not to praise me.
19. If I err, he often warns me.
20. If you love me, save me, please!

The Poet Horace Contemplates an Invitation

Maecēnās et Vergilius mē hodiē vocant. Quid cōgitāre dēbeō? Quid dēbeō respondēre? Sī errō, mē saepe monent et culpant; sī nōn errō, mē laudant. Quid hodiē cōgitāre dēbeō?

Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus, 65–8 B.C.) is one of the best known and admired of all classical Lat. poets; as a young man he composed two volumes of satires, but he is perhaps even better known for his lyric poems, the Odes or Carmina, from which comes the poet's urgent dictum to "harvest the day," carpe diem! For further particulars on Horace and the other authors cited in these chapter reading passages, review the Introd. above, p. xxxii. The wealthy literary patron Maecenas and the poet Vergil, author of Rome's great epic poem, the Aeneid, were both friends of Horace, and this brief passage is very freely adapted from autobiographical references in his poetry.—et, conj., and.—hodiē, adv., today; "hodiernal."—respondeō, respondēre, to reply, respond; "response," "correspond.") QVAESTIŌNĒS: Why is Horace hesitant about the invitation he has received? In view of the shared interests of the three men, what do you suppose Horace may have done that Maecenas and Vergil might sometimes criticize?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS ("Writings on Walls")

Like modern Americans—and literate humans everywhere!—the ancient Romans loved scribbling on walls, and a vast number of their graffiti have been preserved in the ruins of Pompeii, the south Italian city near Naples that was at once both destroyed and, in an archaeological sense, preserved in the dreadful, catastrophic eruption of Mount Vesuvius in August of A.D. 79 (see Map 1, above). Examples of these graffiti are presented throughout book, for the interest and insights they provide into one aspect or another of life in ancient Italy; dozens more graffiti and other inscriptions from throughout the Roman empire are included in the companion reader, Scribblers, Scvlptors, and Scribes, also available from HarperCollins Publishers.

Many of the graffiti from Pompeii have been damaged, sometimes obscuring letters or entire words, and others contain—like those you have likely seen yourself on public bathroom walls!—spelling errors or other oddities of language that are interesting in themselves as reflections of varying levels of literacy, pronunciation variants, and other evidence of the general fluidity of language. You will learn lots of rules (rēgulae) of spelling and grammar as you proceed through this text (rules that Latin, as a highly "regular" language, tends to follow), but you should keep in mind that these reflect a limited, albeit important, segment of the population of ancient Italy, i.e., well educated, highly literate Romans of the 1st centuries B.C. and A.D.; many other Romans could read and write, however, and though they may not have produced any literary masterpieces, the "Writings on Walls" (scrīpta in parietibus) they have left us—in their own handwriting—are a valuable legacy from the ancient world. In editing these graffiti, the following conventional symbols are regularly employed to indicate the sorts of errors and omissions mentioned above, as well as abbreviations that were common in both formal and informal texts:

(abc) an abbreviation expanded by the editor
[abc] letters missing due to damage and supplied by the editor

{abc} letters included by error
<abc> letters omitted either by error, or as a reflection of the writer's pronunciation, and supplied by the editor

Av<ē>, pu<e>l<l>a!

Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum (CIL) 4.10040: From the attic of a lodging in Pompeii, Reg. II, Ins. 1, = Region II, Insula 1: archaeologists have divided the ancient city into regions and blocks, regiōnēs and īnsulae, the numbers for which are generally provided in this book; individual houses and shops within each insula were also typically numbered and sometimes named. The lad who scribbled this graffito to his sweetheart was not highly literate: as you can see from the drawing, he actually wrote AV, a contraction of AVE, = avē, which here had essentially the same meaning as salvē; and his PVLA was a misspelling of puella, which as you will see in Capvt II means girl or girlfriend. The above drawing, and those in subsequent chapters, are reproduced directly from the CIL by graphic artist Kay Stanton.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS! ("Latin Is Fun—and Useful!")

Salvēte! Here and at the close of each chapter, you will find a trove of Latin miscellānea (you can easily deduce the meaning of that term—it became an English word too, spelled exactly the same!) for your pleasure and edification! Gaudium, in the title of this section, is the noun (nōmen) for joy or just plain fun; and ūtilis, an adjective (adiectīvum) meaning useful, is a reminder here of the amazing "utility" of the Latin language, whose careful study will provide you with invaluable knowledge that you can "utilize" every day! To start with, here is some "first day" conversational Latin:

Salvē, discipula or discipule! Hello, student! (The -a/-e variants distinguish between female and male students.)

Salvēte, discipulae et discipulī! Hello, students! (feminine and masculine plural)

Salvē, magister or magistra! Greetings, teacher! (again, masculine or feminine)

Valēte, discipulī et discipulae! Valē, magister (magistra)! Good-bye, students . . . , etc.

Quid est nōmen tibi? What's your name?

Nōmen mihi est "Mark." My name is Mark. (Or, better yet, how about a nōmen Latīnum, Latin name: nōmen mihi est "Mārcus.")

Your instructor may employ conversational "classroom Latin" in teaching grammar: several Latin grammatical terms are introduced above, e.g., adverbium, verbum, and coniugāre; would you know how to respond if your instructor said to you, Coniugā verbum "amō, amāre"? (She/he might add . . . in tempore praesentī, which you could likely guess means in the present tense—most of our English grammar terms derive from Latin, so this is easy!) In Capvt II you will learn that est = is; if your teacher asked, Quid est

"saepe"—verbum aut (or) adverbium?—how would you reply? You'll be speaking, and thinking, like a Roman before you know it!

Oh, and remember that labor in sentence 1 (sententia I) above is one of many Latin words that come directly into English without any alteration in spelling? Well, rūmor in sententia VIII is another, and so is videō in the Vocābula. On the other hand, amō does not mean "bullets" ("ammo"!!) nor is amat "a small rug," so, in this section of the book, beware of . . . iocī terribilēs (terrible jokes): valēte!

CAPVT II

First Declension Nouns and Adjectives; Prepositions, Conjunctions, Interjections

GRAMMATICA

NOUNS (sg. nōmen, pl. nōmina) AND CASES

A NOUN (nōmen name) "names" or identifies a person, place, or thing, either generally, poēta, poet, urbs, city, liber, book (so-called COMMON NOUNS), or specifically, Vergilius, Vergil, Rōma, Rome, Aenēis, Aeneid (PROPER NOUNS). Nouns are also categorized as ABSTRACT (īra, anger) or CONCRETE (porta, gate). As a Latin verb has various INFLECTIONS or endings that signal specifics of meaning, so a noun has various terminations to show whether it functions as a verb's subject or object, indicates possession, etc. The inflected forms of a noun are called CASES, the more common uses and meanings of which are catalogued below; you will encounter several other case uses in subsequent chapters, all of which you must be able to identify and name, so it is advisable to begin now keeping a list for each case, with definitions and examples, in your notebook or a computer file. For illustrative purposes, we will refer to the following simple English sentences, which have been limited to the material available in Capita I and II and later in the chapter will be translated into Latin for further analysis.

A. The poet is giving the girl large roses (or is giving large roses to the girl).
B. The girls are giving the poet's roses to the sailors.
C. Without money the girls' country (or the country of the girls) is not strong.

Nominative Case

The Romans used the NOMINATIVE CASE most commonly to indicate the SUBJECT of a finite verb; e.g., "poet" in sentence A above and "girls" in B. As you will see in a later chapter, the nominative was also employed with forms of to be (sum, esse) and other linking verbs, as a PREDICATE NOMINATIVE: Puella est poēta, the girl is a poet; Patria est antīqua, the country is ancient.

Genitive Case

When one noun was used to modify (from modus, limit) another, the Romans put the modifying/limiting noun, like poet's in sentence B and girls' in sentence C, in the GENITIVE CASE. One idea commonly conveyed by the genitive is POSSESSION and, although other uses are distinguished, the genitive can generally be translated with the preposition "of" or by using an apostrophe ('s or s'). A noun in the genitive case usually follows the noun it modifies.

Dative Case

The Romans used the DATIVE to mark the person or thing indirectly affected by the action of the verb, as (to) the girl in sentence A and to the sailors in B; both of these nouns are INDIRECT OBJECTS, the most common use of the dative. "To" or "for" are most commonly supplied in translating a dative.

Accusative Case

The Romans used the ACCUSATIVE CASE to indicate the DIRECT OBJECT of the verb, the person or thing directly affected by the verb's action. In sentences A and B, roses is the direct object of is (are) giving.

The accusative can also be used as OBJECT OF A PREPOSITION, with certain (not all) prepositions: e.g., ad, toward/at; in, into; post, after, behind. A PREPOSITION (praepositiō, placing before; pl. praepositiōnēs) is usually "positioned before" a noun or pronoun (its "object"), forming with that object a PREPOSITIONAL PHRASE that modifies either a noun (agricola ad portam est vir bonus, the farmer at the gate is a good man—ad portam is adjectival, answering the question "which farmer?"), or a verb (agricola ad portam ambulat, the farmer is walking toward the gate—ad portam is adverbial and answers the question "where?"), or some other word in the sentence. Most prepositions govern objects in either the ablative case or the accusative; a few can take both cases but with different shades of meaning.

Ablative Case

The ABLATIVE CASE is sometimes called the "adverbial case" because it was used by the Romans to modify, or limit, the verb by such ideas as means ("by/with what," e.g., pecūniā, with money), agent ("by whom": ab puellā, by the girl), accompaniment ("with whom": cum poētā, with the poet), manner ("how": cum īrā, with anger, angrily), place ("where/from which": in/ex patriā, in/from the country), time ("when/within which": ūnā hōrā, in one hour). The ablative was often employed as object of a preposition; when a preposition was not used, typically "by," "with," or "from" should be supplied in translating to English.

Vocative Case

The Romans used the VOCATIVE CASE to address or call on (vocāre, to call) a person or thing directly; e.g., Salvē, nauta, Greetings, sailor. Sometimes the INTERJECTION Ō was employed, Ō puella, servā mē, O (oh) girl, save me!—an interjection (interiectiō, throwing into; pl. interiectiōnēs) is an exclamatory word "thrown into" a sentence and expressing some emotion, e.g., "oh," "aha," "wow," "yikes!" In modern punctuation the vocative (or noun/pronoun of DIRECT ADDRESS, as the usage is typically called) is separated from the rest of the sentence by commas. With one major exception to be studied in Capvt III, the vocative has the same form as that of the nominative, and so it is ordinarily not listed in the paradigms.

FIRST DECLENSION NOUNS AND ADJECTIVES

The listing of all the cases of a noun or adjective is called a DECLENSION (from dēclīnāre, to change the direction or form of something). Just as we conjugate verbs by adding endings to a stem, so we DECLINE nouns and adjectives by adding endings to a BASE. The nominative and genitive singular forms of a noun are provided in the vocabulary entry, which must be completely memorized, and the base is found by dropping the genitive ending; the vocabulary entry for an adjective includes the masculine, feminine, and neuter nominative singular forms, and the surest way to determine its base is by dropping the feminine ending. The following paradigm, which should be memorized (and remember to practice aloud!), illustrates the declension of a noun/adjective phrase, porta magna, the large gate; note that since Latin lacked equivalents of the English ARTICLES "a," "an," and "the," they must be supplied in translation:

	porta, gate Base: port-	magna, large Base: magn-		Endings
Singular
Nom.	pórta	mágna	the (a) large gate	-a
Gen.	pórtae	mágnae	of the large gate	-ae
Dat.	pórtae	mágnae	to/for the large gate	-ae
Acc.	pórtam	mágnam	the large gate	-am
Abl.	pórtā	mágnā	by/with/from, etc., the large gate	-ā
Voc.	pórta	mágna	O large gate	-a

Plural
Nom.	pórtae	mágnae	the large gates or large gates	-ae
Gen.	portā́rum	magnā́rum	of the large gates	-ārum
Dat.	pórtīs	mágnīs	to/for the large gates	-īs
Acc.	pórtās	mágnās	the large gates	-ās
Abl.	pórtīs	mágnīs	by/with/from, etc., the large gates	-īs
Voc.	pórtae	mágnae	O large gates	-ae

Gender

Like English, Latin distinguishes three GENDERS: masculine, feminine, and neuter. While Latin nouns indicating male beings are naturally masculine and those indicating female beings are feminine, the gender of most other nouns was a grammatical concept, not a natural one, and so a noun's gender must be memorized as part of the vocabulary entry.

Most first declension nouns are feminine; e.g., puella, girl; pecūnia, money. A few nouns denoting individuals engaged in what were among the Romans traditionally male occupations are masculine; e.g., poēta, poet; nauta, sailor; agricola, farmer (others not employed in this book are aurīga, charioteer; incola, inhabitant; pīrāta, pirate).

ADJECTIVES, AGREEMENT, AND WORD ORDER

An ADJECTIVE (sg. adiectīvum, pl. adiectīva, set next to, added) "adds" information about, or "modifies," a noun or pronoun; e.g., magna porta, the large gate; patria antīqua, the ancient country. In these examples, "large" and "ancient" describe "attributes" of the nouns, and adjectives used as simple modifiers in this way are called ATTRIBUTIVE ADJECTIVES. Like nouns, adjectives are declined, and an adjective agrees with its noun in gender, number, and case; like nouns, adjectives can be singular or plural and they have the same cases, but an adjective has varying forms to agree with a particular noun's gender (an adjective that modifies more than one noun usually agrees in gender with the nearest one, though sometimes the masculine predominates). As its Latin root meaning suggests, an adjective was usually positioned next to its noun (except in poetry, where word order is much freer). Most often the adjective followed the noun; common exceptions were adjectives denoting size or number, as well as demonstratives (hic, this; ille, that), which normally precede, as do adjectives which the speaker or writer wishes to emphasize.

GRAMMAR: MORPHOLOGY AND SYNTAX

Two major aspects of a language's GRAMMAR are its morphology and syntax. MORPHOLOGY refers to the forms of words, such as verb conjugations and noun-adjective declensions. SYNTAX, from the Greek verb syntattein meaning to arrange, refers to the arrangement and interrelation of words to form meaningful phrases, clauses, and sentences. To describe the syntax of a given noun or adjective, you should state its form, the word on which it most closely depends, and the reason for the form (i.e., its grammatical USE or FUNCTION in the sentence). The sentences presented at the beginning of the chapter, here translated into Latin, provide some examples. Notice in the subject and verb endings the rule that a verb must agree with its subject in person and number; note too that where a noun ending such as -ae can represent more than one case and thus result in AMBIGUOUS FORMS, word order and context provide essential clues to a sentence's meaning (hence puellae is the indirect object in A, subject in B).

A. Poēta puellae magnās rosās dat.
B. Puellae nautīs rosās poētae dant.
C. Patria puellārum sine pecūniā nōn valet.

The syntax of some of these words can be described as follows:

Word	Form	Dependence	Use/Function Sentence A
poēta	nom. sg.	dat	subject
puellae	dat. sg.	dat	indirect object
magnās	acc. pl.	rosās	modifies and agrees with noun Sentence B
puellae	nom. pl.	dant	subject
nautīs	dat. pl.	dant	indirect object
rosās	acc. pl.	dant	direct object
poētae	gen. sg.	rosās	possession Sentence C
pecūniā	abl. sg.	sine	object of preposition

Be sure you can explain the syntax of all nouns and adjectives in the sentences and reading passage below.

VOCĀBVLA

This new vocabulary list includes, inter alia (inter alia, among other things), several nouns and adjectives. In addition to English meanings and (in parentheses) derivatives, each noun entry includes the nominative and genitive singular, so you can identify the noun's base, and its gender. Adjective entries include the nominative for all three genders, e.g., magnus, magna, magnum (often abbreviated magnus, -a, -um in this book's notes); the nominative form magna is recognizably first declension and feminine, and thus has the genitive singular form magnae and the base magn-; the full declensions of masculine (magnus) and neuter (magnum) adjectives are introduced in the next two chapters, but it will be easiest for you to learn the nominatives for all three genders now. As you learn the new first declension nouns and adjectives, try declining two or three of them.

Also in this list are two new CONJUNCTIONS (you learned sī, if, in Capvt I), et and sed: a conjunction (sg. coniūnctiō, pl. coniūnctiōnēs, joining together) connects two or more elements, such as two nouns (fāma et fortūna, fame and fortune) or two clauses (puella mē laudat sed nauta mē monet, the girl praises me but the sailor warns me); COORDINATING CONJUNCTIONS connect equivalent elements (poētam amāmus et laudāmus, we love and praise the poet), while SUBORDINATING CONJUNCTIONS introduce a subordinate (dependent) clause and connect it with a main (independent) clause (sī errō, mē monēs, if I make a mistake, you advise me).

In studying any language, ancient or modern, you must learn through listening and speaking, not just by reading silently from a printed page; as you study each chapter's vocabulary, use the CDs or the audio online at www.wheelockslatin.com (where you can also find vocabulary cards and cumulative lists), and listen to (audī!) and say aloud (prōnūntiā!) each Latin word and its meaning. Pay close attention to macrons, which indicate important differences of pronunciation and often of meaning. Latin pronunciation is easy—prōnūntiātiō Latīna est facilis!—and generally "what you see is what you get (i.e., what you say and hear)"; but recall that the consonant cluster -gn- is an exception, representing an -ngn- sound as in "ha*ngn*ail," so that magna sounds something like mangna: listen carefully to this word on the website or CDs.

fāma, fāmae, f., rumor, report; fame, reputation (famous, defame, infamy) fōrma, fōrmae, f., form, shape; beauty (formal, format, formula, formless, deform, inform, etc.; but not formic, formidable) fortūna, fortūnae, f., fortune, luck (fortunate, misfortune, unfortunate) īra, īrae, f., ire, anger (irate, irascible; but not irritate) naúta, naútae, m., sailor (nautical, nautilus, argonaut) pátria, pátriae, f., fatherland, native land, (one's) country (patriotic, expatriate, repatriate) pecūnia, pecūniae, f., money (pecuniary, impecunious; cf. peculation) philosóphia, philosóphiae, f. (Greek philosophia, love of wisdom), philosophy poéna, poénae, f., penalty, punishment; poénās dáre, idiom, to pay the penalty (penal, penalize, penalty, pain, subpoena) poēta, poētae, m., poet (poetry, poetic) pórta, pórtae, f., gate, entrance (portal, portico, porch, porthole) puélla, puéllae, f., girl rósa, rósae, f., rose (rosary, roseate, rosette) sententia, sententiae, f., feeling, thought, opinion, vote, sentence (sententious, sentencing) vīta, vītae, f., life; mode of life (vital, vitals, vitality, vitamin, vitalize, devitalize, revitalize) antīquus, antīqua, antīquum, adj., ancient, old-time (antique, antiquities, antiquated, antiquarian) mágnus, mágna, mágnum, adj., large, great; important (magnify, magnificent, magnate, magnitude, magnanimous) méus, méa, méum, adj., my múltus, múlta, múltum adj., much, many (multitude, multiply, multiple; multi-, a prefix as in multimillionaire) túus, túa, túum adj., your, used when speaking to only one person et, conj., and; even; et . . . et, both . . . and sed, conj., but Ō, interj. (interjection), O!, Oh!, commonly preceding a vocative síne, prep. (preposition) + abl., without (sinecure, sans) est, is

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

As always, before attempting the following readings, be sure you have memorized the paradigms and Vocābula, and assessed your mastery by writing out your answers to the grammar questions and translations of some of the sentences in the Self-Tutorial Exercises for this chapter (p. 413–14), comparing your answers with the key (p. 446–47), and reviewing accordingly. Check your ability to recognize the new noun forms in the sentences below by identifying the case, number, gender, and use (function) of the first several that occur, e.g., veniam in the third sentence is: acc., sg., f., direct object. For adjectives, identify the nouns they modify.

Read each Sententia aloud, listening to the CDs if you have them, and think about its meaning, before translating. Likewise with the Catullus selection: read aloud and for comprehension, trying to get the sense of the entire passage. Remember that subject-object-verb (SOV) is a common pattern (as in S.A. 4)—but word order is quite variable in Latin, and so you must pay careful attention to word endings, which, for nouns, signal distinctions of number and case/use that are essential to meaning; watch the endings of adjectives too, for noun-adjective agreement, and of verbs for differences of person and number. Remember too that in translating you must routinely supply the ARTICLES "a," "an," or "the," as appropriate to the context. In translating from English to Latin, use SOV order, and analyze carefully the use of each word in the sentence; in S.A. 16, e.g., "life" is the direct object, and singular, so be sure to select the correct form of vīta.

All the book's Sententiae Antīquae and reading passages are drawn from ancient Roman sources, and the author is identified in parentheses; most of the readings in these early chapters are "adapted," i.e., simplified to accommodate the limited grammar and vocabulary you have learned, but an asterisk before an author's name means that the text is presented verbatim. The specific work from which each reading passage is drawn is cited in the notes, and citations for the individual Sententiae are provided at p. 553–55, for students who are interested in the context and wish to do further reading.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Salvē, Ō patria! (Plautus.)
2. Fāma et sententia volant. (Vergil.—volāre, to fly, move quickly; "volatile.")
3. Dā veniam puellae, amābō tē. (Terence.—venia, -ae, f., favor, pardon; "venial," "veniality.")
4. Clēmentia tua multās vītās servat. (Cicero.—clēmentia, -ae, f., clemency; "clement," "inclement.")
5. Multam pecūniam dēportat. (Cicero.—dēportāre, to carry away; "deport," "deportation.")
6. Et fortūnam et vītam antīquae patriae saepe laudās sed recūsās. (Horace.—recūsāre, to refuse, reject; "recusation," "recuse.")
7. Mē vītāre turbam iubēs. (*Seneca.—vītāre, to avoid; do not confuse this verb with the noun vīta; "inevitable." —turba, -ae, f., crowd, multitude; "turbid," "turbulent."—iubēre, to order; "jussive.")
8. Mē philosophiae dō. (Seneca.)
9. Philosophia est ars vītae. (*Cicero.—ars, nom. sg., art; "artifice," "artistry.")
10. Sānam fōrmam vītae cōnservāte. (Seneca.—sānus, -a, -um, sound, sane; "sanitary," "sanatorium.")
11. Immodica īra creat īnsāniam. (Seneca.—immodicus, -a, -um, immoderate, excessive.—creāre, to create; "creation," "creature."—īnsānia, -ae, f., unsoundness, insanity; "insane.")
12. Quid cōgitās?—dēbēmus īram vītāre. (Seneca.)
13. Nūlla avāritia sine poenā est. (*Seneca.—nūllus, -a, -um, no; "nullify," "annul."—avāritia, -ae, f., avarice; "avaricious.")
14. Mē saevīs catēnīs onerat. (Horace.—saevus, -a, -um, cruel.—catēna, -ae, f., chain; "catenary."—onerāre, to load, oppress; "onerous," "exonerate.")
15. Rotam fortūnae nōn timent. (Cicero.—rota, -ae, f., wheel; "rotary," "rotate."—timēre, to fear; "timid," "intimidate.")
16. The girls save the poet's life.
17. Without philosophy we often go astray and pay the penalty.
18. If your land is strong, nothing terrifies the sailors and you (sg.) ought to praise your great fortune.
19. You (pl.) often see the penalty of my anger and warn me.
20. The ancient gate is large.

Catullus Bids His Girlfriend Farewell

Puella mea mē nōn amat. Valē, puella! Catullus obdūrat: poēta puellam nōn amat, puellam nōn vocat, fōrmam puellae nōn laudat, puellae rosās nōn dat, et puellam nōn bāsiat! Īra mea est magna! Obdūrō, mea puella—sed sine tē nōn valeō.

Catullus Carm. 8, prose adaptation: We have surviving from Catullus (Gaius Valerius Catullus, ca. 84–54 B.C.) 113 finely crafted poems, at once scholarly but intensely emotional; several are satirical and brazenly targeted at contemporaries like Julius Caesar, Cicero, and Pompey the Great, but most are love poems. Of those amatory poems, some two dozen dramatically chronicle his relationship—from initial infatuation, to torrid romance, to the eventual devastating breakup—with the mistress whom he calls "Lesbia," but who we are confident was actually Clodia, wife of the Roman senator Quintus Caecilius Metellus Celer. For unadapted excerpts from the original poem, see Capvt XIX below.—obdūrāre, to be firm, tough; "durable," "endure."—bāsiāre, to kiss.—tē, you.) QUAESTIŌNĒS: Think of this brief passage as a miniature "drama" with three scenes; where does each scene begin and end? It might be said that there are two Catulluses here, marked by the shift from first person to third and back to first: where does each shift occur, what is the intended effect, and how does the Catullus of the first and third scenes differ emotionally from the persona he imagines in the second? Which might one suppose, within this dramatic construct, is "the real" Catullus?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Fortūna.
CIL 4.5371 (Reg. IX, near Ins. 8): This scribbler roughly configured his single-word inscription in the form of a ship, with the T representing the mast and the tails of the F, R, and A representing oars—a whimsical jeu d'esprit seen elsewhere in Pompeian graffiti (cf. Capvt III, below); was the writer hoping for luck, or hailing the goddess Fortuna (to whom there were temples in Rome and who was often depicted holding a ship's rudder), or both?

Fēlīclam amat.

CIL 4.8917: The Pompeian who scrawled this graffito near a doorway in an inn (Reg. III, Ins. 6) struggled with his handwriting: he tried writing the sentence three times, then marked out the first and last versions and saved his second attempt (have you ever had this problem in writing out a sentence yourself?). Spelling was an issue for this writer too; the name of the woman he had in mind was properly "Felicula" (a DIMINUTIVE from Lat. fēlīx, lucky), though we find this same variant form elsewhere in the city, a type of contraction known as SYNCOPE, which here reflects the common tendency in informal speech to drop a short, unaccented vowel occurring in a word's penultimate syllable.

ETYMOLOGIA ("Etymology")

Note that the term ETYMOLOGY comes from the Gk. etymos, true, real, and logos, word, meaning. Consequently, the etymology of a word traces the derivation of the word back to its original meaning. Under this heading will be introduced various items not covered by the derivatives listed in the vocabularies, and often including derivatives in Italian, Spanish, and other Romance languages.

Pecūnia is connected with pecus, cattle, just as Eng. fee is related to Ger. Vieh, cattle. Fortūna derives from fors, chance, accident. Explain the meanings of the following Eng. words on the basis of the Lat. source words in the sentences indicated. Further aid, if needed, can be obtained from a good dictionary; Webster's New World Dictionary and the American Heritage Dictionary are especially helpful with etymologies, and other resources are available online.

venial (3) turbulent (7)

obdurate ("Catullus")

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulī et discipulae! From the Vocābula: To do something sub rosā is to do it secretly or in confidence (the rose was in antiquity a symbol of secrecy); aqua vītae, literally, the water of life, is an old Latin phrase for "whiskey"; and a "sinecure" (from sine + cūra, care) is an office or position that is largely without responsibility. And here's some more conversational Latin:

Quid hodiē agis? How are you today?

Optimē! Great! Pessimē! Terrible! Bene! Good!
Satis bene. So-so or okay. Nōn bene. Not well. Et tū? And you?

CAPVT III

Second Declension Masculine Nouns and Adjectives; Apposition; Word Order

GRAMMATICA

THE SECOND DECLENSION

The second declension follows the rule you learned for the first: base + endings. The endings differ from those of the first declension, except in the dative and ablative plural, and second declension nouns are regularly either masculine or neuter; masculine nouns and adjectives are introduced below, neuters in Capvt IV. Most second declension masculines have a nominative singular ending in -us, while a few end in -er.

Masculines in -us

	amīcus, friend	magnus, great
Base:	amīc-	magn-		Endings
Singular
Nom.	amīcus	mágnus	a/the great friend	-us
Gen.	amīcī	mágnī	of a great friend	-ī
Dat.	amīcō	mágnō	to/for a great friend	-ō
Acc.	amīcum	mágnum	a great friend	-um
Abl.	amīcō	mágnō	by/with/from a great friend	-ō
Voc.	amīce	mágne	O great friend	-e

Plural
Nom.	amī́cī	mágnī	great friends	-ī
Gen.	amīcṓrum	magnṓrum	of great friends	-ōrum
Dat.	amī́cīs	mágnīs	to/for great friends	-īs
Acc.	amī́cōs	mágnōs	great friends	-ōs
Abl.	amī́cīs	mágnīs	by/with/from great friends	-īs
Voc.	amī́cī	mágnī	O great friends	-ī

Masculines in -er

Some second declension -er masculines, like puer, retain the -e- in the base, while most, like ager, drop the -e-, hence the importance of learning the genitive as part of the vocabulary entry (though a knowledge of such English derivatives as "puer-ile" and "agriculture" will also help you remember the base). Similar is the unique -ir masculine, vir, virī, man. The underlined forms below are the ones that call for special attention; the adjective magnus is added for the sake of comparison: note, e.g., the combinations puer magnus, a big boy, and Ō puer magne, O big boy.

	puer, boy	ager, field
Base:	puer-	agr-		Endings

Gen.	puerṓrum	agrṓrum	magnṓrum	-ōrum
Dat.	púerīs	ágrīs	mágnīs	-īs
Acc.	púerōs	ágrōs	mágnōs	-ōs
Abl.	púerīs	ágrīs	mágnīs	-īs
Voc.	púerī	ágrī	mágnī	-ī

Comments on Vocatives and Other Case Endings

Note that some second declension endings are identical to those in the first (the dative/ablative plural in -īs) and others are similar (e.g., -am/-um accusative singular, -ārum/-ōrum genitive plural, and -ās/-ōs accusative plural). As in the first declension, some second declension endings are used for different cases (e.g., what different cases may the forms amīcī, amīcō, and amīcīs represent?); again, for these ambiguous forms word order and context are essential aids to reading comprehension and translation. You recall that an adjective must agree with the noun it modifies in number, gender, and case; but note from ager magnus and puer magne that their endings may not always be spelled the same, nor even must they be of the same declension, as seen, e.g., in agricola Rōmānus: since the noun for "farmer," although first declension, is masculine, a masculine (second declension) adjective is required.

It is also important to note that only in the singular of -us nouns and adjectives of the second declension does the vocative ever differ in spelling from the nominative: singular amīcus, amīce; but plural amīcī, amīcī. Nouns in -ius (e.g., fīlius, son, Vergilius, Vergil) and the adjective meus, my, have a single -ī in the vocative singular: mī fīlī, my son; Ō Vergilī, O Vergil.

APPOSITION

An APPOSITIVE (from ad, at/next to, + pōnō, positus, to set/position) is a noun that is "positioned next to" another noun as an explanatory equivalent:

Gāium, fīlium meum, in agrō videō. I see Gaius, my son, in the field.

In this sentence fīlium is said to be "in apposition with" Gāium. Nouns in apposition always agree in case, usually in number, and often in gender as well, and an appositive is commonly separated from the preceding noun by commas.

WORD ORDER

Typical word order in a simple Latin sentence or clause is: (1) the subject and its modifiers, (2) indirect object and modifiers, (3) direct object and modifiers, (4) adverbial words or phrases, (5) verb. Remember, too, that adjectives and genitive nouns commonly follow the words they modify. However, although these patterns should be kept in mind, exceptions to these rules, especially for purposes of variety and emphasis, were common in classical Latin. In fact, in highly inflected languages like Latin, the basic sense of a clause is somewhat independent of word order, thanks to the inflectional endings, which tell so much about the interrelationship of the words in a sentence.

On the other hand, in English, where inflections are relatively few, sense commonly depends on stricter conventions of word order. Compare the following English sentence and the four Latin versions, which all mean essentially the same despite the differences of word order:

(1) The boy is giving the pretty girl a rose.
(2) Puer puellae bellae rosam dat.
(3) Bellae puellae puer rosam dat.
(4) Bellae puellae rosam dat puer.
(5) Rosam puer puellae bellae dat.

Whatever the order of the words in the Latin sentence, the sense remains the same (though the emphasis does vary, the first and last words typically being the most emphatic). Note also that according to its ending, bellae must modify puellae no matter where these words stand. But if you rearrange the words in the English sentence, you alter the sense:

(1) The boy is giving the pretty girl a rose.
(2) The pretty girl is giving the boy a rose.
(3) The girl is giving the boy a pretty rose.
(4) The girl is giving the pretty boy a rose.
(5) The rose is giving the boy a pretty girl.

In all these sentences the same words are used with the same spellings, but the sense of each sentence differs in accordance with the conventions of English word order. Furthermore, where the fifth English sentence is nonsense, the final Latin sentence, in much the same order, makes perfectly good sense—and lends emphasis to the direct object, the gift the boy is giving, i.e., the rose.

VOCĀBVLA

This chapter's Vocābula list introduces several second declension masculine nouns. As is clear from a word like ager, agrī, a noun's base is best determined by dropping its genitive ending, and the surest way to identify an adjective's base is by dropping the nominative ending from the feminine form. Remember that while the gender of a noun is fixed—i.e., nouns regularly have but a single gender (there are some obvious exceptions, like the Latin word for "citizen," which could be either masculine or feminine)—adjectives have all three genders. As you learn these new words, test your mastery by declining a noun-adjective pair such as vir avārus or populus Rōmānus and comparing your work with the paradigms.

Nouns and adjectives generally follow the patterns described in this book, but there are occasional exceptions, like these in the list below: fīlia, daughter, has the dative and ablative plural fīliābus, as distinct from fīliīs, the dative and ablative of fīlius, son; the adjective paucī, paucae, pauca, few, since it denotes plurality, has only plural forms.

As always, memorize the entire entry for each new word, and review words from the preceding two chapters as well; using vocabulary cards or cumulative vocabulary lists will help with comprehensive review, but ideally you should learn and review all chapter vocabularies by listening to the CDs or the audio lists at www.wheelockslatin.com. When using the online audio, look closely at the spelling of each word, including macrons, then click on it and listen to it, say the word aloud, read and think about its English meanings (which appear on the web-page with the full Latin entry), then look/click/listen and repeat aloud again. Learn Latin as you did your native language, or any modern language you may have studied, i.e., through your eyes, your ears, and your mouth; and when studying vocabulary, semper audī et prōnūntiā!

dē, prep. + abl., down from, from; concerning, about; as a prefix dē- with such meanings as down, away, aside, out, off (demote, from dē-moveō; decline, descend) in, prep. + abl., in, on; also as a prefix (induce, inscribe, invoke; for dē-, in-, and other prefixes, see App., p. 485–89) hódiē, adv., today (hodiernal) sémper, adv., always (sempiternal) hábeō, habḗre, hábuī, hábitum, to have, hold, possess; consider, regard (in-habit and in-hibit, "hold in"; ex-hibit, "hold forth"; habit, habitat) sátiō, satiáre, satiávī, satiátum, to satisfy, sate (satiate, insatiable, satiety, satisfaction)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After memorizing the paradigms and Vocābula and checking your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, find each second declension noun in the following readings and identify its case, number, and function; in particular, identify any nouns used as appositives (easy to spot as they are set off by commas). Remember always to read aloud and for comprehension, before attempting a translation; let the chapter's observations on word order assist, and, as always, pay close attention to word endings. Since Latin often omits POSSESSIVES where English would normally employ them, you should in translation routinely supply them, just as you do articles; e.g., for natural English idiom you should supply "his" with fīliābus in Ex. 7 and "your" with amīcōs in S.A. 10.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Fīlium nautae Rōmānī in agrīs vidēmus.
2. Puerī puellās hodiē vocant.
3. Sapientiam amīcārum tuārum, Ō fīlia mea, semper laudat.
4. Multī virī et fēminae philosophiam antīquam cōnservant.
5. Sī īra valet, Ō mī fīlī, saepe errāmus et poenās damus.
6. Fortūna virōs magnōs amat.
7. Agricola fīliābus pecūniam dat.
8. Without a few friends life is not strong.
9. Today you have much fame in your country.
10. We see great fortune in your daughters' lives, my friend.
11. He always gives my daughters and sons roses.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Dēbētis, amīcī, dē populō Rōmānō cōgitāre. (Cicero.)
2. Maecēnās, amīcus Augustī, mē in numerō amīcōrum habet. (Horace.—Maecēnās, a name in nom. sg.; see Capvt I reading passage.—Augustus, -ī, m.)
3. Libellus meus et sententiae meae vītās virōrum monent. (Phaedrus.—libellus, -ī, m., little book; "libel," "libelous.")

4. Paucī virī sapientiae student. (Cicero.—studēre + dat., to be eager for; "student," "studious.")
5. Fortūna adversa virum magnae sapientiae nōn terret. (Horace.—adversus, -a, -um, = Eng.; "adversary," "adversity.")
6. Cimōn, vir magnae fāmae, magnam benevolentiam habet. (Nepos.—Cimōn, proper name nom. sg.—benevolentia, -ae, f. = Eng.)
7. Semper avārus eget. (*Horace.—avārus = vir avārus.—egēre, to be in need.)
8. Nūlla cōpia pecūniae avārum virum satiat. (Seneca.—nūllus, -a, -um, no; "null," "annulment."—cōpia, -ae, f., abundance; "copious," "cornucopia.")
9. Pecūnia avārum irrītat, nōn satiat. (Publilius Syrus.—irrītāre, to excite, exasperate; "irritable," "irritate.")
10. Sēcrētē amīcōs admonē; laudā palam. (*Publilius Syrus.—sēcrētē, adv., in secret; "secret," "discrete."—admonē: = monē.—palam, adv., openly.)
11. Modum tenēre dēbēmus. (*Seneca.—modus, -ī, m., moderation; "mode," "modify."—tenēre, to hold, maintain; "tenable," "tenant.")

The Grass Is Always Greener

Agricola et vītam et fortūnam nautae saepe laudat; nauta magnam fortūnam et vītam poētae saepe laudat; et poēta vītam et agrōs agricolae laudat. Sine philosophiā avārī virī dē pecūniā semper cōgitant: multam pecūniam habent, sed nihil virum avārum satiat.

Horace Sat. 1.1: Freely adapted into prose from one of Horace's early satires (which he titled Sermōnēs, Conversations), this passage elaborates upon a theme sounded in several of the preceding Sententiae Antīquae.—et . . . et: you may be tempted to translate the first et as and; as a coordinating conjunction, however, et must connect parallel elements, and so it cannot join the nom. agricola with the acc. vītam but should instead be construed with the two dir. objs. vītam and fortūnam.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Horace here comments on a common human failing. What is that flaw, and what does the satirist regard as its cause?—do you agree with his assessment of cause and effect?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

G. Iūlius Trophimus

Venustus

CIL 4.7309b (Reg. I, Ins. 8, a caupōna, inn, tavern) and 8020 (Reg. I, Ins. 6): Ancient Romans, like modern Americans, loved to write or paint their own and others' names on walls, sometimes with "portraits." Gaius Julius Trophimus, to judge from the drawing seen here, was a handsome young man, one of several figures shown in a ritual procession; his full name typifies the nomenclature of male Roman citizens, consisting of a given name or PRAENOMEN (here "Gaius," regularly abbreviated "G" or even more commonly "C"), the family (gēns) name or NOMEN (here "Julius," which the scribe at first misspelled "Juliaus" and then corrected by marking out the superfluous A), and a COGNOMEN, a sort of nickname, often referring to some physical or mental trait and sometimes identifying a branch of a family ("Trophimus" was a Greek word meaning "foster child," suggesting that the man here may have been a lībertīnus, or "freedman," of the Julius family). Venustus was a relatively common cognomen, related to the name of the goddess Venus and meaning "Charming" or "Attractive"; the ship motif is seen in several other Pompeian graffiti, including the Fortuna graffito in Capvt II above.

ETYMOLOGIA

Following are some of the Romance words you can recognize based on your study of this chapter's Vocābula:

Latin	Italian	Spanish	French	Portuguese
amīcus	amico	amigo	ami	amigo
fīlius	figlio	hijo	fils	filho
numerus	numero	número	numéro	número populus	popolo	pueblo	peuple	povo
paucī	poco	poco	peu	pouco
semper	sempre	siempre		sempre
habēre	avere	haber	avoir	haver
dē	di	de	de	de

Occitan (Occ.) is another Romance language spoken, chiefly as a second language, only in the south of France (in a dialect known as Provençal), Monaco, and some districts of northern Spain and the Italian Alps; you too can read Occitan (!), or at least these words from Old Occ. (the language of the troubadour literature of the 11th–12th centuries): amic, filh, nombre, pople, pauc, sempre, aver (loss of initial h- and the shift from b to v were common in the evolution of the Romance languages from Lat.), and de. And here are the Romanian (Rom.) derivatives for some of these same words; you can easily determine which is which: amic, fiu, număr, popor, avea, de.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, amīcae et amīcī! Quid hodiē agitis? Well, if you are in the Coast Guard, you are semper parātus, always prepared, or if you're a U.S. Marine, it's semper fidēlis, always faithful (from the same Latin root as "Fido," your trusty hound). These are just two (suggested by this chapter's Vocābula) of countless Latin mottoes representing a wide range of modern institutions and organizations. Valēte et habēte fortūnam bonam!

CAPVT IV

Second Declension Neuters; Adjectives; Present of Sum; Predicate Nominatives; Substantives

GRAMMATICA

SECOND DECLENSION NEUTERS

In the first declension there are no nouns of neuter gender but in the second declension there are many. They are declined as follows, again by adding endings to a base:

	dōnum, gift	cōnsilium, plan	magnum, great	Endings
Base:	dōn-	cōnsili-	magn-
Singular
Nom.	dōnum	cōnsílium	mágnum	-um
Gen.	dōnī	cōnsílii (cōnsilī)	mágnī	-ī
Dat.	dōnō	cōnsíliō	mágnō	-ō
Acc.	dōnum	cōnsílium	mágnum	-um
Abl.	dōnō	cōnsíliō	mágnō	-ō
Plural
Nom.	dōna	cōnsília	mágna	-a
Gen.	dōnōrum	cōnsiliōrum	magnōrum	-ōrum
Dat.	dōnīs	cōnsíliīs	mágnīs	-īs
Acc.	dōna	cōnsília	mágna	-a
Abl.	dōnīs	cōnsíliīs	mágnīs	-īs

Second declension neuter endings are the same as the masculine, except that the nominative, accusative, and vocative are identical to one another (true of all neuters of all declensions): -um in the singular, -a in the plural. Word order and context will enable you to distinguish between a neuter noun used as a subject and one used as an object (vocatives are even more easily distinguished, of course, as they are regularly set off from the rest of the sentence by commas). The plural -a ending might be mistaken for a first declension nominative singular, so you can see again how important it is to memorize vocabulary entries completely, including the gender of nouns. In spelling the genitive singular of neuter (and masculine) nouns with a base ending in -i- the Romans sometimes dropped that vowel, e.g., cōnsilī for cōnsiliī (see above) and fīlī for fīliī; in this book, however, the stem vowel is regularly retained. Second declension neuter nouns will be abbreviated in the notes as follows: dōnum, -ī (= dōnum, dōnī), n.

DECLENSION AND AGREEMENT OF ADJECTIVES

The paradigms of magnus presented in Capita II–IV illustrate the point that, while the base remains constant, the adjective has masculine, feminine, and neuter endings to match the gender of the noun it modifies, with which it likewise agrees in number and case. The full declension of magnus below provides an overview of the first two declensions.

	M.	F.	N.
Singular
Nom.	mágnus	mágna	mágnum
Gen.	mágnī	mágnae	mágnī
Dat.	mágnō	mágnae	mágnō
Acc.	mágnum	mágnam	mágnum
Abl.	mágnō	mágnā	mágnō
Voc.	mágne	mágna	mágnum
Plural
Nom.	mágnī	mágnae	mágna
Gen.	magnṓrum	magnā́rum	magnṓrum
Dat.	mágnīs	mágnīs	mágnīs
Acc.	mágnōs	mágnās	mágna
Abl.	mágnīs	mágnīs	mágnīs
Voc.	mágnī	mágnae	mágna

Such first/second declension adjectives will be abbreviated in the notes as follows: magnus, -a, -um, meus, -a, -um, etc.

PRESENT INFINITIVE AND INDICATIVE OF Sum

As the English verb "to be" is irregular, so is the important Latin verb sum. Although the personal endings are familiar, the stem varies so much in the present tense that the forms must be memorized. Note that, since sum is an INTRANSITIVE LINKING VERB (i.e., often connecting its subject with a predicate noun or adjective), we do not refer to its voice as either active or passive.

Present infinitive: esse, to be

Present Indicative:

Singular	Plural
1. sum, I am	súmus, we are
2. es, you are	éstis, you are
3. est, he (she, it) is, there is	sunt, they are, there are

Some sample sentences: Fīlia tua est bona, Your daughter is good. Amīcī meī estis, You are my friends. Sunt multī agricolae in agrīs, There are many farmers (many farmers are) in the fields.

PREDICATE NOUNS AND ADJECTIVES

As an intransitive verb, sum cannot take a direct object but instead, like other linking verbs to be introduced later, serves to connect the subject of a clause with a noun or adjective in the PREDICATE (the main divisions of a sentence are the subject, with its modifiers, and the predicate, which consists of the verb and all its dependent words and phrases). Such predicate nouns and adjectives—or PREDICATE NOMINATIVES, as they are often called—are connected or even equated with the subject by the linking verb, and so they naturally agree with the subject in number and case (usually the nominative, of course) and, wherever possible, in gender as well. In the case of compound subjects of different gender, a predicate adjective usually agrees in gender with the nearest, though the masculine often predominates. Study the following examples:

Vergilius est poēta. Vergil is a poet.
Vergilius est magnus. Vergil is great.
Fāma Vergiliī est magna. The fame of Vergil is great.
Amīcae sunt bonae. The girlfriends are good.
Puerī dēbent esse bonī. The boys ought to be good.
Puer et puella sunt bonī. The boy and girl are good.
Dōnum est magnum. The gift is large.
Dōna sunt magna. The gifts are large.
Sumus Rōmānī. We are Romans (Roman men).
Sumus Rōmānae. We are Roman women.

SUBSTANTIVE ADJECTIVES

You learned about ATTRIBUTIVE ADJECTIVES (e.g., vir Rōmānus and fēmina bona) in Capvt II, and PREDICATE ADJECTIVES have just been introduced (porta est antīqua). The Romans also often used an adjective as a SUBSTANTIVE, i.e., in place of a noun, just as we do in English ("the meek shall inherit the earth"—i.e., "the meek people"). Such adjectives can sometimes be translated as English substantives, but for natural idiom you will often need to supply man or men, woman or women, thing or things, in accordance with the word's number and gender; compare the following examples:

Multī sunt stultī. Many (men) are foolish.
Puerī mala nōn amant. The boys do not love bad things.
Paucī dē perīculō cōgitant. Few (men) are thinking about the danger.

VOCĀBVLA

The vocabulary for this chapter introduces several neuter nouns, easily identified by the nominative -um and of course by the gender abbreviation "n."; the neuter noun nihil (reintroduced from Capvt I, now that you understand the concepts of declension and gender) is identified as INDECLINABLE, meaning that the one form could be used as subject, direct object, etc. Vocābula itself, by the way, is the plural of vocābulum, a neuter noun originally meaning what we "call" (from vocāre) a person or thing and ultimately giving us our word "vocabulary." Practice your mastery of neuters by declining a noun-adjective pair from the list (e.g., remedium bonum) and checking your work against the paradigms provided above. Memorize the entire entry for each new word, and review words from the preceding three chapters as well, ideally by listening to the CDs or the audio lists at www.wheelockslatin.com.

sum, ésse, fúī, futūrum, to be, exist (essence, essential, future, futurity)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Be sure you have memorized the paradigms and Vocābula, practiced declining some of the new neuter nouns and adjectives, and completed some of the Self-Tutorial Exercises, before attempting the readings; find some second declension nouns in the sentences, and identify their case, number, gender, and function (and beware of neuters ending in -a: they're plural, of course, but students often confuse them with first declension singulars in -a); also identify all forms of sum, esse in the readings, and any predicate nominatives and substantives. Finally, as you read the sentences, the Cicero passage (listen to this on the CDs, if you have them), and the graffito, read aloud and for comprehension, before translating. And always choose meanings for words that best suit the context; e.g., cares/worries/anxieties would be a better choice than attentions or cautions for cūrīs in Ex. 5, and plan makes more sense than wisdom for cōnsiliō in Ex. 6.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Ōtium est bonum, sed ōtium multōrum est parvum.
2. Bella (from bellum, -ī, n.) sunt mala et multa perīcula habent.
3. Officium nautam dē ōtiō hodiē vocat.
4. Paucī virī multās fōrmās perīculī in pecūniā vident–nōn dēbēmus esse avārī!.
5. Sī multam pecūniam habētis, saepe nōn estis sine cūrīs.
6. Puellae magistram dē cōnsiliō malō sine morā monent.
7. Ō magne poēta, sumus vērī amīcī; mē iuvā, amābō tē!
8. Fēmina et agrōs et portam agricolae videt.
9. You (sg.) are in great danger.
10. My son's opinions are often foolish. sententiae filii saepe stultae sunt
11. The daughters and sons of great men and women are not always great.
12. Without wisdom the sailors' good fortune is nothing and they are paying the penalty. sine sapientiā bona fortuna nautae nihil est et poenam dant.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Fortūna caeca est. (*Cicero.—caecus, -a, -um, blind; "Cecil.")
2. Sī perīcula sunt vēra, īnfortūnātus es. (Terence.—īnfortūnātus, -a, -um, unfortunate.)
3. Salvē, Ō amīce; vir bonus es. (Terence.)
4. Nōn bella est fāma fīliī tuī. (Horace.)
5. Errāre est hūmānum. (Seneca.—As an indecl. n. verbal noun, an infin. can be the subj. of a verb.)
6. Nihil est omnīnō beātum. (Horace—omnīnō, adv., wholly.—beātus, -a, -um, happy, fortunate; "beatify," "beatitude.")
7. Remedium īrae est mora. (Seneca.)
8. Bonus Daphnis, amīcus meus, ōtium et vītam agricolae amat. (Vergil.—Daphnis is a pastoral character.)
9. Magistrī parvīs puerīs crūstula et dōna saepe dant. (Horace.—crūstulum, -ī, n., cookie; "crouton," "crustacean.")
10. Amīcam meam magis quam oculōs meōs amō. (Terence.—magis quam, more than.)
11. Salvē, mea bella puella—dā mihi multa bāsia, amābō tē! (Catullus.—mihi, dat., to me.)
12. Īnfīnītus est numerus stultōrum. (Ecclesiastes.—īnfīnītus, -a, -um = Eng.; "infinity.")
13. Officium mē vocat. (Persius.)
14. Malī sunt in nostrō numerō et dē exitiō bonōrum virōrum cōgitant. Bonōs adiuvāte; cōnservāte patriam et populum Rōmānum. (Cicero.—nostrō, our; "nostrum," "paternoster.")

The Rarity of Friendship

Paucī virī vērōs amīcōs habent, et paucī sunt dignī. Amīcitia vēra est praeclāra, et omnia praeclāra sunt rāra. Multī virī stultī dē pecūniā semper cōgitant, paucī dē amīcīs; sed errant: possumus valēre sine multā pecūniā, sed sine amīcitiā nōn valēmus et vīta est nihil.

Cicero Amīc. 21.79–80: The Roman lawyer and statesman Cicero (Marcus Tullius Cicero, 106–43 B.C.) is one of the best known figures from the ancient world, thanks in large measure to the enormous number of his writings that have survived, including hundreds of letters on both political and personal matters, dozens of political and courtroom speeches, and several philosophical treatises. Written in 45 B.C. when Cicero was in his early 60's, the Dē Amīcitiā, On Friendship, remains one of the most popular and influential of those philosophical works.—dignus, -a, -um, worthy, deserving; "deign," "dignify." amīcitia, -ae, f., friendship.—omnia: all [things]; "omnipotent," "omniscient."—praeclārus, -a, -um, splendid, remarkable; "clarity."—rārus, -a, -um = Eng.; "rarefy," "rarity."—possumus: we are able; "posse," "possible.")

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What observations does Cicero make here on the rarity of friendship, and how is his perspective similar to that of Horace in the passage from his satires which you read in the preceding chapter?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Prīme, av<ē>, valē.

CIL 4.8615: Salutation to a friend named "Primus," a common Roman cognomen, from a column in the colonnade around the Large Palaestra near the amphitheater in Pompeii's Region II; we have seen avē before, also in its contracted form av', in the graffito in Capvt I; and avē et valē was a widely used expression of greeting and farewell, best known today from the poet Catullus' lament (in his poem 101) to his deceased brother: frāter, avē atque [= et] valē. Seen in the drawing is the common use of the letter form || for E.

Some Romance derivatives:

Here are some of the Old Occ. derivatives: perilh, ofíci, bos, vęr, maïstre, bel, umaṇ, beat, bais, rar. And cf. Rom.: ochi, pericol, oficiu, bun, magistru, uman, beat (in Rom. the word actually means "drunk"!), rar.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvē, amīce (or amīca)! There are countless Latin expressions in current English usage (remember sub rosā?); one of them, related to an adjective encountered in this chapter, is rāra avis, literally a rare bird, but used for an exceptional or unusual individual or a rarity. The student of Latin in the United States was becoming a rāra avis in the 1960s and early 70s, but there has been a remarkable resurgence of interest since then."Oculus," an architectural term for a circular opening in the apex of a dome, or a round window, is one of thousands of English words that come directly from Latin with no spelling change at all—an imaginative derivation, since Latin oculus, as seen in this chapter's Vocābula, means eye. Ergō, therefore, is another Latin word that has come straight into English; ergo, you now know what Descartes meant in his Discourse on Method when he said cōgitō ergō sum. Semper cōgitā, amīce, et valē!

CAPVT V

First and Second Conjugations: Future and Imperfect; Adjectives in -er

GRAMMATICA

THE FUTURE AND IMPERFECT TENSES

The Romans indicated future time in the first two conjugations by inserting the future TENSE SIGN (-bi- in most forms) between the present stem and the personal endings. The tense sign -bā- was similarly employed (in all four conjugations) for the imperfect tense, a past tense generally equivalent to the English past progressive. Along with the present tense, the future and imperfect make up the PRESENT SYSTEM, all of whose forms, as seen in the following paradigms, are based on the present stem:

Future and Imperfect Active of Laudō and Moneō

Future	Imperfect
Singular
1. laudā́-bō, I will /shall praise	laudā́-ba-m, I was praising, kept praising, used to praise, (often/always/usually) praised
2. laudā́-bi-s, you will praise	laudā́-bā-s, you were praising, etc.
3. laudā́-bi-t, he, she, it will praise	laudā́-ba-t, he was praising, etc.
Plural
1. laudā́bimus, we will /shall praise	laudābā́mus, we were praising, etc.
2. laudā́bitis, you will praise	laudābā́tis, you were praising, etc.
3. laudā́bunt, they will praise	laudā́bant, they were praising, etc.

Singular
1. monē-bō, I will/shall advise	monē-ba-m, I was advising, kept advising, used to advise, (often/always/usually) advised
2. monē-bi-s, you will advise	monē-bā-s, you were advising, etc.
3. monē-bi-t, he, she, it will advise	monē-ba-t, he was advising, etc.
Plural
1. monēbimus, we will/shall advise	monēbāmus, we were advising, etc.
2. monēbitis, you will advise	monēbātis, you were advising, etc.
3. monēbunt, they will advise	monēbant, they were advising, etc.

Notice the vowel change in the first person singular and third plural future tense sign (chant out loud bō/bi/bi/bi/bi/bu—sounds like baby talk!), and the shortened -a- in the first and third singular and third plural of the imperfect (remember that vowels which are normally long are regularly shortened before -m, -r, and -t at the end of a word, and before nt or another vowel in any position).

The INFIXES -bi- and -bā- (with the distinctive -i- and -ā-) can be easily remembered as signs of the future and imperfect tenses by associating them with the English auxiliary verbs "will" and "was," which are also spelled with -i- and -a- and are generally used to translate those two tenses. Note that, where English requires three separate words for the ideas he will praise or he was praising, Latin requires only a single word with the three components of stem + tense sign + personal ending (laudā + bi + t = praise-will-he or laudā-ba-t = praising-was-he).

Translation

Translation of the future tense, usually with will (shall is less common in current English), should present no difficulty: dē amīcō cōgitābō, I will think about my friend; multam sapientiam habēbunt, they will have much wisdom. The imperfect tense commonly indicates an action that was continuing or progressive in the past, as suggested by the term "imperfect" (from imperfectum, not completed), including actions that were going on, repeated, habitual, attempted, or just beginning. All the following translations are possible, depending upon the context in which the sentence appears:

Nautam monēbam. I was warning (kept warning, used to warn, tried to warn, was beginning to warn) the sailor.
Poētae vītam agricolae laudābant. Poets used to praise the farmer's life.
Magister puerōs vocābat. The teacher kept calling (was calling) the boys.

Occasionally the imperfect may be translated as a simple past tense, especially with an adverb that in itself indicates continuing action: nautam saepe monēbam,

I often warned (kept warning) the sailor; magister puellās semper laudābat, the teacher always praised (used to praise) the girls.

ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSION IN -er

There are several first/second declension adjectives whose masculine nominative singular ends with -er rather than -us; some, like the noun puer retain the -e- in the base, and others, like the noun ager, drop the -e-. This should present no difficulty, since, as with all adjectives, the base, whether with or without the -e-, appears in the feminine and the neuter nominative forms, as seen in the following examples; likewise, just as with the -er nouns, your familiarity with derivatives can assist in remembering the base ("liberal" from līber, "pulchritude" from pulcher, "miserable" from miser, etc.).

līber	līber-a	līber-um	free
pulcher	pulchr-a	pulchr-um	beautiful

The rest of the paradigm continues with the base and the regular endings:

	M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
Nom.	līber	lībera	līberum	púlcher	púlchra	púlchrum
Gen.	līberī	līberae	līberī	púlchrī	púlchrae	púlchrī
Dat.	līberō	līberae (etc.)	līberō	púlchrō	púlchrae (etc.)	púlchrō

For the singular of these samples fully declined, see the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 496, and remember to refer to this section of the Appendix whenever reviewing declensions and conjugations.

VOCĀBVLA

The Vocābula list for this chapter, as always, includes in parentheses at the end of most entries a number of English words derived from the Latin term; to boost your English Word Power (!), always take note of these derivatives—and see if you can think of others. Nearly all Latin nouns are declined on the principle of base + endings; a few, however, like satis, enough, in the list below, are indeclinable, a concept discussed in connection with nihil in the previous chapter's vocabulary. Satis is remarkably versatile, in fact, as it can function not only as a noun, when it is often construed with a genitive, as in satis pecūniae, enough (of) money, but also as an adjective, meaning sufficient, and even an adverb, sufficiently. The conjunction igitur, therefore, is identified below as POSTPOSITIVE, meaning that it ordinarily does not appear as the first word of a sentence, but instead is positioned (positum) after (post) the first word or phrase. Tē, like mē (Capvt I), is the form of the accusative and ablative cases; the other forms of these personal pronouns are introduced in Capvt XI. As you learn the newly introduced verbs, test your mastery by conjugating one or two of them in all three PRESENT SYSTEM tenses, then comparing your work with the paradigms; practice declining a noun-adjective pair too, such as animus noster or caelum pulchrum—or both!

adulēscéntia, adulēscéntiae, f., youth, young manhood; youthfulness (adolescence, adolescent) ánimus, ánimī, m., soul, spirit, mind; ánimī, ánimṓrum, high spirits, pride, courage (animus, animosity, magnanimous, unanimous, pusillanimous) caélum, caélī, n., sky, heaven (ceiling, celestial, Celeste, cerulean) cúlpa, cúlpae, f., fault, blame (cf. culpō below; culpable, culprit, exculpate, inculpate) glṓria, glṓriae, f., glory, fame (glorify, glorification, glorious, inglorious) vérbum, vérbī, n., word (verb, adverb, verbal, verbiage, verbose, proverb) tē, abl. and acc. sg., you; yourself; cf. mē líber, líbera, líberum, free (liberal, liberality, libertine) nóster, nóstra, nóstrum, our, ours (nostrum, paternoster) púlcher, púlchra, púlchrum, beautiful, handsome; fine (pulchritude, pulchritudinous) sā́nus, sā́na, sā́num, sound, healthy, sane (sanity, sanitary, sanitation, sanitarium, insane) ígitur, conj., postpositive, therefore, consequently
-ne, interrog. suffix attached to the first word of a sentence, typically the verb or another word on which the question hinges, to introduce a question whose answer is uncertain. (For other types of direct questions, see nōnne and num in Capvt XL.)
própter, prep. + acc., on account of, because of (post hoc, ergo propter hoc, "after this, therefore on account of this"—a type of fallacious argument in logic) crās, adv., tomorrow (procrastinate, procrastination) heri, adv., yesterday
quándō, interrog. and rel. adv. and conj., when; sī quándō, if ever sátis, indecl. noun, adj., and adv., enough, sufficient (-ly) (cf. satiō; satisfy, satisfactory, satiate, insatiable, sate; assets, from ad, up to + satis) tum, adv., then, at that time; thereupon, in the next place cḗnō, cēnā́re, cēnā́vī, cēnā́tum, to dine (cenacle) cúlpō, culpā́re, culpā́vī, culpā́tum, to blame, censure (cf. culpa above) máneō, manḗre, mā́nsī, mā́nsum or remáneō, remanḗre, remā́nsī, remā́nsum, to remain, stay, stay behind, abide, continue (mansion, manor, permanent, remnant, immanent—do not confuse with "imminent") súperō, superā́re, superā́vī, superā́tum, to be above (cf. super, adv. and prep. +

abl. or acc., above), have the upper hand, surpass; overcome, conquer (superable, insuperable)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

The essential activities for these Lēctiō et Trānslātiō sections are to read aloud, read for comprehension, and then translate (listening to the Latin too, if you have the CDs); but for practice identifying the newly introduced verb forms, you should scan the readings for all the verbs and identify the tense, person, number, voice, mood, and whether the verb is first or second conjugation. An important translation tip is to always choose the meaning for a word that best suits the context: in the "Thermopylae" passage below, e.g., courage would be a better choice for animīs, in view of the military context, than minds or even pride. And don't forget the variety of options for translating the imperfect tense.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Officium līberōs virōs semper vocābat.
2. Habēbimusne multōs virōs et fēminās magnōrum animōrum?
3. Perīcula bellī nōn sunt parva, sed patria tua tē vocābit et agricolae adiuvābunt.
4. Propter culpās malōrum patria nostra nōn valēbit.
5. Mora animōs nostrōs superābat et remedium nōn habēbāmus.
6. Multī in agrīs heri manēbant et Rōmānōs iuvābant.
7. Paucī virī dē cūrā animī cōgitābant.
8. Propter īram in culpā estis et crās poenās dabitis.
9. Vērum ōtium nōn habēs, vir stulte!
10. Nihil est sine culpā; sumus bonī, sī paucās habēmus.
11. Poēta amīcae multās rosās, dōna pulchra, et bāsia dabat.
12. Will war and destruction always remain in our land?
13. Does money satisfy the greedy man?
14. Therefore, you (sg.) will save the reputation of our foolish boys.
15. Money and glory were conquering the soul of a good man.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

His Only Guest Was a Real Boar!

Nōn cēnat sine aprō noster, Tite, Caeciliānus:
bellum convīvam Caeciliānus habet!

*Martial Epig. 7.59: This is the first of several selections included in this book from the Epigrammata of Martial (Marcus Valerius Martialis, A.D. 45–104), who today remains one of the most popular of Roman writers. Most of Martial's 1500 epigrams are quite short, like this two-line elegiac couplet, with a satirical punch-line at the end, and targeted at specific, but usually fictitious, characters, here the glutton Caecilianus.—Titus: the poem's addressee, but not its target.—aper, aprī, m., boar, pig.—convīva, -ae, m., one of a few m. first decl. nouns, dinner-guest; "convive," "convivial.")

QUAESTIŌNĒS: What effect does Martial achieve by positioning the subject at the end of the sentence in the epigram's opening verse? Gluttony—one of the "seven deadly sins"—was a frequent target of Roman satire, as was stinginess; who (or what) seems to have been Caecilianus' only dinner-guest here, and what is the comic image?

Thermopylae: A Soldier's Humor

"Exercitus noster est magnus," Persicus inquit, "et propter numerum sagittārum nostrārum caelum nōn vidēbitis!" Tum Lacedaemonius respondet: "In umbrā, igitur, pugnābimus!" Et Leōnidās, rēx Lacedaemoniōrum, exclāmat: "Pugnāte cum animīs, Lacedaemoniī; hodiē apud īnferōs fortasse cēnābimus!"

Cicero Tusc. 1.42.101: This passage adapted from the "Tusculan Disputations," another of Cicero's philosophical treatises, relates an anecdote about the battle of Thermopylae

(see Map 3), 480 B.C., in which the invading Persian army under king Xerxes defeated a courageous band of 300 Spartans under the leadership of Leonidas; all 300 Spartans fell in battle, but not before slaying thousands of the enemy and delaying their advance long enough for other Greek forces to ready themselves for what proved to be a decisive victory at the Battle of Salamis (Map 3) later in the year.—exercitus, army; "exercise."—Persicus, -ī, m., a Persian.—inquit, says.—sagitta, -ae, f., arrow; "Sagittarius," "sagittate."—Lacedaemonius, -ī, m., a Spartan.—respondēre: = Eng.—umbra, -ae, f., shade, shadow; ghost; "umbrage" and "umbrella," which, with its DIMINUTIVE suffix "-ella," lit. means "little shade/shadow." —pugnāre, to fight; "pugilist," "pugnacious."—rēx, king; "regal," "regalia."—exclāmāre, to shout; "exclaim," "exclamation."—cum + abl., with.—apud + acc., among.—īnferī, -ōrum, m. pl., those below, the dead; "inferior," "inferiority."—fortasse, adv., perhaps.)

QVAESTIŌ: Both king Leonidas and his soldiers—the famed "300," who fought to the death to resist the Persian invasion of Greece—were apparently not only courageous but quick-witted as well; comment on the humor in their remarks, as Cicero reports them here.

Aureus est, Danaē.
CIL 4.5303: Many graffiti from Pompeii echo literary texts or otherwise allude to Greco-Roman myths, some of them the work of school children (as we know, e.g., from the height at which they were written on walls), and all of them important to our understanding of the nature and extent of literacy in the Roman world. This graffito, found near a doorway in a house in Reg. IX, Ins. 8, alludes to the myth of Danaë, the legendary Greek princess who was impregnated by Jupiter in the form of a golden shower of rain, a mystical encounter that resulted in the birth of the hero Perseus; some scholars think the writer here had in mind a phrase from Ovid Met. 6.113.—aureus, -a, -um, golden; "Au" (symbol for the element gold, from the Lat. noun aurum), "auriferous."—est: sc. "Jupiter" as subject.—Danaē: a Gk. voc. form.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, et amīcī et amīcae meae! Quid hodiē agitis? In fact, I hope you are sānī et sānae, both physically and spiritually; if so, you have attained what the 1st century A.D. Roman satirist Juvenal suggested was the highest good in life, mēns sāna in corpore sānō, a healthy mind in a healthy body (you'll encounter the two third declension nouns mēns and corpus later on, but in the meantime you can keep this famous quotation in mente). It's rumored, by the way, that the athletic gear brand-name ASICS is an acronym for animus sānus in corpore sānō; with a glance back at the Vocābula you can figure that one out too. NIKE, an ASICS competitor, takes its name from the Greek word for "victory," which in Latin is victōria, a winning name for a queen or any powerful lady (whose male counterpart might well be dubbed "Victor," from Latin victor).

You may have encountered the expressions verbum sap and mea culpa before; if not, you will. The former is an abbreviation of verbum satis sapientī est: sapientī is dative of the third declension adjective sapiēns, wise, used here as a noun (remember substantives from Capvt IV?), so you should already have deduced that the phrase means a word to the wise is sufficient. If you couldn't figure that out, just shout "mea culpa!" and (here's a verbum sap) go back and review the Vocābula in Capita I–V. Valēte!

CAPVT VI

Sum and Possum; Complementary Infinitive

GRAMMATICA

FUTURE AND IMPERFECT INDICATIVE OF Sum

The best procedure for learning the future and imperfect tenses of sum, esse, as for the present tense introduced in Capvt IV, is simply to memorize the paradigms below (listening to the audio CDs, if you have them); these forms are more regular than those for the present, however, each formed on the stem er- and with the familiar present system personal endings (-ō/-m, -s, -t, -mus, -tis, -nt).

	Future Indicative	Imperfect Indicative
	1. érō, I shall be	éram, I was
Sg.	2. éris, you will be	érās, you were
	3. érit, he (she, it, there) will be	érat, he (she, it, there) was
	1. érimus, we shall be	erāmus, we were
Pl.	2. éritis, you will be	erātis, you were
	3. érunt, they (there) will be	érant, they (there) were

IRREGULAR Possum, posse, potuī, to be able, can, could

The very common verb possum, posse, potuī, is simply a compound of pot-, from the irregular adjective potis (able, capable; cf. "potent," "potential") + sum. Before forms of sum beginning with s-, the -t- was altered or ASSIMILATED to -s- (hence possum from potsum); otherwise the -t- remained unchanged. The irregular present infinitive posse developed from an earlier, uncontracted form which followed this rule (potesse).

	Present Indicative I am able, can	Future Indicative I shall be able	Imperfect Indicative I was able, could
	1. pós-sum	pót-erō	pót-eram
Sg.	2. pót-es	pót-eris	pót-erās
	3. pót-est	pót-erit	pót-erat
	1. póssumus	potérimus	poterāmus
Pl.	2. potéstis	potéritis	poterātis
	3. póssunt	póterunt	póterant

For both sum and possum it is helpful to note the similarity of the future and imperfect endings, -ō/-is/-it, etc., and -am/-ās/-at, etc., to the regular first and second conjugation future and imperfect endings, -bō/-bis/-bit, etc., and -bam/-bās/-bat, etc., which were introduced in the previous chapter.

COMPLEMENTARY INFINITIVE

Possum, like English to be able, requires an infinitive to "complete" its meaning, hence the term COMPLEMENTARY (not "compl*i*mentary") INFINITIVE, which simply means "completing" infinitive. You have already seen the complementary infinitive used with dēbeō, and you will find it employed with audeō, audēre, to dare, and other verbs.

Our friends were able to overcome (could overcome) many dangers.
Amīcī nostrī poterant superāre multa perīcula.
My friend is not able to remain (cannot remain).
Amīcus meus remanēre nōn potest.
You ought to save your money.
Dēbēs cōnservāre pecūniam tuam.

Note that a complementary infinitive has no separate subject of its own; its subject is the same as that of the verb on which it depends.

VOCĀBVLA

Most nouns follow the pattern of base + endings, but some few, like dea and deus in this list (and fīlia in Capvt III), have one or more irregular forms; īnsidiae is exceptional too in having plural forms with singular meanings. Pay careful attention to these and other sorts of irregularities when you encounter them in any of the chapter Vocābula. Some further caveats for this list: you will not confuse ibi and ubi, if you recall that there precedes where alphabetically, just as ibi precedes ubi; thinking "alphabetically" should also help you distinguish noster/our from vester/your; and note that -que suffixed to a word generally equates to et before the word. The importance of learning macrons as part of a word's spelling and pronunciation is again seen in the case of the noun liber (pronounced "LIH-ber"), meaning book, in this chapter's vocabulary, which you would not want to confuse with the adjective līber ("LEE-ber"), free, introduced in Capvt V—another reminder that you should study all new vocabulary, not silently, but by listening to and pronouncing each word aloud: vocābula semper audī et prōnūntiā!

déus, -ī, m., voc. sg. deus, nom. pl. dī, dat. and abl. pl. dīs (the plurals deī and deīs became common during the Augustan Period), god, and déa, déae, f., dat. and abl. pl. deābus, goddess (adieu, deify, deity) discípulus, discípulī, m., and discípula, discípulae, f., learner, pupil, student (disciple, discipline, disciplinary) secúndus, secúnda, secúndum, second; favorable (secondary) véster, véstra, véstrum, your (pl., i.e., used in addressing more than one person, vs. tuus, -a, -um), yours

-que, ENCLITIC (essentially = "suffixed") conj., and; appended to the second of two words to be joined: fāma glōriaque, fame and glory

úbi: (1) rel. adv. and conj., where, when; (2) interrog. adv. and conj., where? (ubiquitous, ubiquity)

íbi, adv., there (ib. or ibid.)

nunc, adv., now, at present (quidnunc) quārē, adv., lit. because of which thing (quā rē), but more commonly therefore, wherefore, why póssum, pósse, pótuī, to be able, can, could, have power (posse, possible, potent, potentate, potential, omnipotent) tólerō, tolerāre, tolerāvī, tolerātum, to bear, endure (tolerate, toleration, tolerable, intolerable, intolerance)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

By now, you know the ideal regimen: before attempting these readings, memorize paradigms and vocabulary, and assess your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises. Listen to the readings, if you have the CDs, read them aloud once or twice for comprehension, and then write out your translations–which should always be reasonably literal but within the bounds of natural English idiom; for practice with the new grammar, scan the readings and identify (1) the tense, person, and number of all forms of sum and possum that occur, and (2) all complementary infinitives.

"I Do Not Love Thee, Dr. Fell"

Nōn amo tē, Sabidī, nec possum dīcere quārē.
Hoc tantum possum dīcere: nōn amo tē.

*Martial Epig. 1.32: For Martial's Epigrams, see notes to "His Only Guest," in Capvt V. The "Dr. Fell" title here derives from an anecdote, perhaps apocryphal, about a 17th cent. Oxford University student named Tom Brown (who later gained some acclaim as a translator and satirist) and Dr. John Fell, a Latinist, Dean of Christ Church, and Bishop of Oxford, who had threatened the young man with expulsion. Fell told Brown he would give him a reprieve if he could properly translate this epigram, and Brown came up with the following version on the spot: "I do not love thee, Dr. Fell, the reason why I cannot tell; but this I know, and know full well: I do not love thee, Dr. Fell." Meter: elegiac couplet.—amo: final -ō was often shortened in Lat. poetry, for metrical reasons but also as a reflection of actual pronunciation habits.—Sabidius, -iī: the name of Martial's perhaps fictitious target.—nec: = et nōn.—dīcere, to say; "dictate," "diction."—hoc, this; "ad hoc;" acc. case.—tantum, adv., only.) QVAESTIŌNĒS: Though quite brief, this little epigram makes its point and is neatly stylized. What seems to you most striking in terms of its DICTION (choice and use of words)? Next, look at the poem's structure—two lines, four clauses—and note that the clauses are set in a reverse ABBA order, an arrangement known as CHIASMUS that was commonly employed in Latin verse to achieve some sort of emphasis, often to underscore contrasting ideas; what do you see as its effect here?

Livy Urbe Cond. Preface: The Augustan writer Livy (Titus Livius, 59 B.C.–A.D. 17) authored the monumental Ab Urbe Conditā, From the Founding of the City, a history of Rome from its legendary founding in 753 B.C. down to the reign of the emperor Augustus; only 35 of the original 142 volumes have survived. The passage excerpted here is drawn from his preface to the work.—nec . . . nec, conj., neither . . . nor.

ETYMOLOGIA

Eng. "library" is clearly connected with liber. Many European languages, however, derive their equivalent from bibliothēca, a Lat. word of Gk. origin meaning in essence the same thing as our word. What, then, do you suppose biblos meant in Greek?—cf. the Bible. Fr. y in the common phrase il y a (there is) derives from ibi. And the following Fr. words are also derived from Lat.: êtes = estis; nôtre = noster; vôtre = vester; goûter = gustāre. What, then, is one thing which the Fr. circumflex accent indicates?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulī et discipulae! Quid hodiē agitis, Ō amīcī? Cōgitātisne dē linguā Latīnā? Well, I assume by now that your etymological sense will tell you that lingua Latīna means. . . the Latin language or just "Latin," your favorite subject. Now that you've developed a taste for the language, I know that you study with great "gusto"! (If you missed that bit of etymologizing, see S.A. 2 above.) The new Vocābula item deus turns up in the expression deus ex machinā, god from a machine, which refers (in drama and other contexts) to any person or mechanism that performs an amazing rescue from some seemingly hopeless dilemma.

Do you know that sub is a preposition meaning under, as in "subterranean," under the terra, earth; if so, you can laugh at this old favorite: semper ubi sub ubi! (Good hygiene and prevents rash!) And speaking of ubi, it asks the question that ibi answers; a compound form of the latter constructed with the intensifying suffix -dem, the same (see Capvt XI for a similar use of -dem), ibidem, gives us ibid., in the same place cited, just one of many Latin-based abbreviations commonly employed in English. Here are some others:

cf. = cōnfer, compare
cp. = comparā, compare e.g. = exemplī grātiā, for the sake of example et al. = et aliī/aliae, and others (of persons) etc. = et cētera, and others (of things) i.e. = id est, that is n.b. = nōtā bene, note carefully (i.e., pay close attention)
v.i. and v.s. = vidē īnfrā and vidē suprā, see below and see above

Semper ubi sub ubi AND the scholarly ibid. both in the same lesson? Well, that's what the title means: Latīna EST gaudium—ET ūtilis! Valēte!

CAPVT VII

Third Declension Nouns

GRAMMATICA

THIRD DECLENSION NOUNS

The third of Latin's five declensions contains nouns of all three genders with a great variety of nominative singular endings, but all characterized by the genitive singular in -is; because of this variety of gender and nominative form, it is especially important to memorize the full vocabulary entry. The declension itself follows the same principles learned for first and second declension nouns: find the base (by dropping the genitive singular -is) and add the endings. Because the vocative is identical to the nominative (with the sole exception of second declension -us/-ius words), it will not appear in subsequent paradigms.

Abl.	rḗg-ibus	virtū́tibus	homínibus	corpóribus	-ibus	-ibus

Gender

Since the third declension contains nouns of all three genders, memorizing gender as part of the vocabulary entry remains imperative. Nouns denoting human beings, however, are typically masculine or feminine according to sense (e.g., rēx, king, m., and uxor, wife, f.), and the following rules also have few or no exceptions:

Masculine (including a large group of AGENT NOUNS, i.e., for persons performing actions, such as: actor, one who acts, actor; amātor, one who loves, lover)

-or, -ōris (amor, -mōris; labor, -bōris; victor, -tōris; scrīptor, -tōris; the long ō vowel of the base is short in the nominative, as usual before final -r)

Feminine (including a large group of ABSTRACT NOUNS, for abstract concepts)

-tās, -tātis (vēritās, -tātis; lībertās, -tātis)
-tūs, -tūtis (virtūs, -tūtis; senectūs, -tūtis)
-tūdō, -tūdinis (multitūdō, -tūdinis; pulchritūdō, -tūdinis)
-tiō, -tiōnis (nātiō, -tiōnis; ōrātiō, -tiōnis)

Neuter

-us (genus, generis; corpus, corporis; tempus, temporis: in contrast to masculine nouns, for neuters with a base ending in or the o is short)
-e, -al, -ar (mare, maris; animal, -mālis; exemplar, -plāris)
-men (carmen, -minis; nōmen, -minis)

Noun-Adjective Agreement

In declining, note that a third declension noun may be modified by a first or second declension adjective; e.g., great king in Latin is magnus rēx, magnī rēgis, etc., true peace is pāx vēra, pācis vērae, etc. While an adjective and noun must agree in number, gender, and case, the spelling of their endings will not necessarily be identical—as seen before in such noun-adjective pairs as agricola bonus.

VOCĀBVLA

In this list of new words you can see how essential it is to look at a noun's genitive ending, not the nominative, in order to identify its declension; otherwise, e.g., -us nouns like corpus and tempus might easily be mistaken as second declension. Likewise recall that a noun's base is best determined from its genitive form; this is especially true with third declension nouns, whose nominatives frequently do not reveal the base, as with the chapter's paradigm nouns, rēx/rēgis, virtūs/virtūtis, homō/hominis, corpus, corporis. English derivatives can be helpful in remembering a noun's base; e.g., iter, itineris, journey: itinerary; cor, cordis, heart: cordial; custōs, custōdis, guard: custodian. Since the third declension contains nouns of all genders, it remains imperative that you memorize gender as part of the entry; as you learn this list, practice declining some noun-adjective pairs, e.g., amor novus, carmen nostrum, uxor bona. You'll see that two nouns in this list (mōs and littera) have special, idiomatic meanings in the plural; we've seen this before, with animus, and it's something to note carefully.

As you learn this new vocabulary, you should also review words learned in Capita I–VI (capita, by the way, is from caput, capitis, n., head; heading, chapter); for review you can use vocabulary cards or cumulative vocabulary lists (available at www.wheelockslatin.com, or you can compile your own), but in memorizing this new list, be sure to use the CDs or the online audio, and . . . audī prōnūntiāque—the verb prōnūntiō, by the way, is an exception to the general rule, introduced in Capvt I, that vowels are generally short before nt, so be sure you are "pronouncing" it correctly!

ámor, amṓris, m., love (amorous, enamored; cf. amō, amīcus) cármen, cárminis, n., song, poem (charm) cívitās, cīvitā́tis, f., state, citizenship (city) córpus, córporis, n., body (corps, corpse, corpuscle, corpulent, corporal, corporeal, corporate, corporation, incorporate, corsage, corset) hómō, hóminis, m., human being, man (homicide, homage; homo sapiens, but not the prefix homo-; cf. hūmānus and vir) lábor, labṓris, m., labor, work, toil; a work, production (laboratory, belabor, laborious, collaborate, elaborate) líttera, lítterae, f., a letter of the alphabet; lítterae, litterā́rum, pl., a letter (epistle), literature (literal, letters, belles-lettres, illiterate, alliteration) mōs, mṓris, m., habit, custom, manner; mṓrēs, mṓrum, pl., habits, morals, character (mores, moral, immoral, immorality, morale, morose) nṓmen, nṓminis, n., name (nomenclature, nominate, nominative, nominal, noun, pronoun, renown, denomination, ignominy, misnomer) pāx, pā́cis, f., peace (pacify, pacific, pacifist, appease, pay) rēgī́na, rēgī́nae, f., queen (Regina, regina, reginal) rēx, rḗgis, m., king (regal, regalia, regicide, royal; cf. rajah) témpus, témporis, n., time; occasion, opportunity (tempo, temporary, contemporary, temporal, temporize, extempore, tense [of a verb]) térra, térrae, f., earth, ground, land, country (terrestrial, terrace, terrier, territory, inter [verb], parterre, subterranean, terra cotta) úxor, uxṓris, f., wife (uxorial, uxorious, uxoricide) vírgō, vírginis, f., maiden, virgin (virgin, virginal, virginity, Virginia) vírtūs, virtū́tis, f., manliness, courage; excellence, character, worth, virtue (virtuoso, virtuosity, virtual; cf. vir) nóvus, nóva, nóvum, new; strange (novel, novelty, novice, innovate) post, prep. + acc., after, behind (posterity, posterior, posthumous, post mortem, P.M. = post meridiem, preposterous, post- as a prefix, postgraduate, postlude, postpositive, postwar, etc.)

sub, prep. + abl. with verbs of rest, + acc. with verbs of motion, under, up under, close to; down to/into, to/at the foot of (sub- or, by ASSIMILATION, suc-, suf-, sug-, sup-, sus-, in countless compounds: subterranean, suburb, succeed, suffix, suggest, support, sustain) aúdeō, audḗre, aúsus sum (the unusual third principal part of this SEMI-DEPONENT verb is explained in Capvt XXXIV), to dare (audacious, audacity)

nḗcō, necā̆re, necā̆vī , necā̆tum, to murder, kill (internecine; cf. nocēre, to harm)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

A new challenge to reading comprehension and translation is that some third declension endings resemble the endings of different cases in other declensions, e.g., -ī can be the ending for a third declension dative singular or a second declension genitive singular or masculine nominative/vocative plural; -us could be a second declension masculine nominative or a third declension neuter accusative; etc. The key is careful vocabulary study, first and foremost, though word order and context can also be a help when dealing with ambiguous endings. For practice, use the Self-Tutorial Exercises for this chapter, of course, but also scan through the following readings and identify number, case/use, and gender for all the third declension nouns. And don't forget, when translating, to supply articles and possessives, choose meanings for words that best suit the context, and strive for as accurate and reasonably literal a rendering as possible within the bounds of natural English idiom.

The Rape of Lucretia

Tarquinius Superbus erat rēx Rōmānōrum, et Sextus Tarquinius erat fīlius malus tyrannī. Sextus Lucrētiam, uxōrem Collātīnī, rapuit, et fēmina bona, propter magnum amōrem virtūtis, sē necāvit. Rōmānī antīquī virtūtem animōsque Lucrētiae semper laudābant et Tarquiniōs culpābant.

Livy Urbe Cond. 1.58: For Livy's history of Rome, see "The Historian Livy Laments the Decline of Roman Morals," in Capvt VI above. Lucius Tarquinius Superbus was Rome's last king and an Etruscan, Collatinus a Roman nobleman; according to legend, the rape of Lucretia was a precipitating factor that led to the overthrow of the Tarquin dynasty, the end of Etruscan rule and of the monarchy itself, and the establishment of the Roman Republic in 509 B.C.—rapuit: raped; "rapacious," "rapture."—sē: herself.—necāvit: a past tense form.—Tarquiniōs: i.e., the entire royal family.

The Rape of Lucretia. Felice Ficherelli, 1605–1660. Oil on tinned copper. The Wallace Collection, London, Great Britain

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Livy's moralizing tone was evident in the passage adapted from his preface, which you read in the last chapter, and throughout his work it seems he was as interested in drawing moral lessons as he was in reporting facts. Based on this brief, adapted passage, what were some of the virtues Romans most admired? What is your personal view of Lucretia's suicide, and of the Roman response to it, as suggested in this passage? Compare Ficherelli's painting above with the manuscript illustration on p. 53.

Catullus Dedicates His Poetry Book

Cornēliō, virō magnae sapientiae, dabō pulchrum librum novum. Cornēlī, mī amīce, librōs meōs semper laudābās, et es magister doctus litterārum! Quārē habē novum labōrem meum: fāma librī (et tua fāma) erit perpetua.

Catullus Carm. 1: For Catullus, Cornelius Nepos, and other Roman writers presented in these chapter readings, be sure to review the "Brief Survey of Latin Literature" in the Introd. (above, p. xxx–xxxv); and cf. "Catullus Bids His Girlfriend Farewell," in Capvt II. Catullus dedicated his poetry book, in the opening poem from which this prose passage is adapted, to the historian and biographer Cornelius Nepos; the entire, unadapted poem appears later in this text (Locī Im. I, p. 363–64).—doctus, -a, -um, learned, scholarly; "doctor," "indoctrinate."

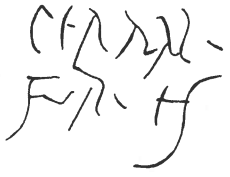
QVAESTIŌNĒS: Cornelius Nepos (ca. 110–24 B.C.), the author of some 400 biographies of famous Greeks and Romans, is not today regarded as one of the great Roman classic writers, but he was nevertheless respected by Catullus. Based on this prose excerpt from his dedicatory poem, what qualities did the young poet most admire in Nepos?—and what else had the biographer done to earn this honor in Catullus' dedication?

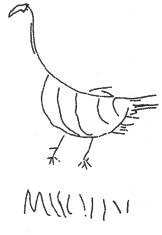
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Perārī, fūr es!



CIL 4.4764 (Reg. VII, Ins. 7): Personal insults like this one from the House of the Cissonii were common in ancient graffiti, just as they are today. What case must Perārī be?—and so, what was his name, i.e., was the nom. form?—fūr, fūris, m., thief; "furtive," "furtively."

Mulviu<s>



CIL 4.4885: The Pompeian responsible for this graffito found in a house in Reg. VIII, Ins. 2, was about as talented at drawing as he was at spelling: he tried twice, and failed, to write MVLVIVS (?), and while Mulvius was in fact a Lat. word—the name of a Roman gēns (family)—it seems more likely, in view of the drawing, that he was trying to label his bird mīluus or mīlvus, kite, a common bird of prey, proverbial in ancient Rome for its rapacity and the vast distances it could fly. Our artist's fine-feathered friend, alas, looks more like a coot, or a goose, than a kite!

ETYMOLOGIA

What Lat. word do you suppose gives us It. uomo, Sp. hombre, Fr. homme and on, Port. homem, Rom. om, and Old Occ. ome?

"Tense" meaning the "time" of a verb comes from tempus through Old Fr.

tens; but "tense" meaning "stretched tight" goes back to tendō, tendere, tetendī, tēnsum, to stretch.

In late Lat., cīvitās came to mean city rather than state, and thus it became the parent of the Romance words for city: It. città, Sp. ciudad, Fr. cité, Port. cidade, and Occ. ciutat.

Here are the Romance and Eng. equivalents of three common Lat. suffixes introduced in this chapter:

Latin	Italian	Spanish	French	English
-tās, -tātis	-tà	-dad	-té	-ty vēritās	verità	verdad	vérité	verity (truth)
antīquitās	antichità	antigüedad	antiquité	antiquity
-tiō, -tiōnis	-zione	-ción	-tion	-tion
nātiō	nazione	nación	nation	nation
ratiō	razione	ración	ration	ration
-tor, -tōris	-tore	-tor	-teur	-tor
inventor	inventore	inventor	inventeur	inventor
actor	attore	actor	acteur	actor

Cf. Port. -dade (verdade, antiguidade), -ção/-zão (nação, razão), -tor (inventor, actor/ator); Rom. antichitate, naţie/naţiune, raţiune, inventator, actor; Old Occ. vęr, antiquitat, naciọn, razọn, autor.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, et discipulī et discipulae! Quid nunc agitis? You are beginning to see by now that Latin is living everywhere in our language; in fact, it's a rāra avis these days who considers Latin a dead language. To anyone who does, you might quip, quot hominēs, tot sententiae—an old proverb from the 2nd century B.C. comic playwright Terence meaning, freely, there are as many opinions as there are men. Notice terra in the Vocābula: we met "subterranean" in the last chapter, now do you think of "ET"? In the 1980s the little guy was everybody's favorite Extra-Terrestrial (from extrā, prep. + acc., beyond, + terra). Until he became familiar with the terrain, he was in a terra incognita; but once he'd learned the territory he felt he was on terra firma (look up all these earth-words in your Funk and Wagnall's—if you need to!). And, speaking of movies, Stephen Spielberg's top-grossing Jurassic Park reminded us all that Tyrannosaurus rex was truly both a "tyrant" and a "king" (though Spielberg's "velociraptors" were certainly terrifying "swift-snatchers," from the Latin adjective vēlōx, fast, as in "velocity," + raptor, a third declension noun based on the verb rapere, to seize, snatch, grab). Latīnam semper amābitis—valēte!

CAPVT VIII

Third Conjugation: Present System

GRAMMATICA

THIRD CONJUGATION VERBS

The third conjugation, in its present system tenses (present, future, and imperfect), is somewhat less regular than the other conjugations. Because the stem vowel was short (-e-), unlike those of the other three conjugations (-ā- in the first, -ē- in the second, and -ī- in the fourth, introduced in Capvt X—cf. laudā́re, monḗre, and audī́re with ágere), it had undergone a number of sound and spelling changes by the classical period. The surest procedure, as always, is to memorize the following paradigms (listening to the CDs, if you have them); note in particular the vowel alternation in the present tense endings, and the new future tense endings.

Present Indicative Active

Sg.	1. ág-ō	(I lead)
	2. ág-is	(you lead)
	3. ág-it	(he, she, it leads)
Pl.	1. ágimus	(we lead)
	2. ágitis	(you lead)
	3. águnt	(they lead)

Future Indicative Active

Sg.	1. ág-am	(I will lead)
	2. ág-ēs	(you will lead)
	3. ág-et	(he, she, it will lead)
Pl.	1. agḗmus	(we will lead)
	2. agḗtis	(you will lead)
	3. ágent	(they will lead)

Imperfect Indicative Active

	1. ag-ēbam	(I was leading, used to lead, etc.)
Sg.	2. ag-ēbās	(you were leading, etc.)
	3. ag-ēbat	(he, she, it was leading, etc.)
	1. agēbāmus	(we were leading, etc.)
Pl.	2. agēbātis	(you were leading, etc.)
	3. agēbant	(they were leading, etc.)

Present Imperative Active

2. Sg. āge (lead!) 2. Pl. āgite (lead!)

Present Infinitive

As the infinitive endings -āre and -ēre indicate the first and second conjugations respectively, so -ere indicates the third. Once again you can see the importance of meticulous vocabulary study, including attention to macrons: you must be especially careful to distinguish between second conjugation verbs in -ēre and third conjugation verbs in -ere, something you can practice right now by glancing ahead at this chapter's Vocābula.

Present Stem and Present Indicative

According to the normal rule for finding the present stem, you would drop the infinitive ending -re from agere and have age- as the present stem. To this you would expect to add the personal endings to form the present indicative. But in fact the short, unaccented stem vowel disappears altogether in the first person singular, and it was altered to -i- in the second and third persons singular and the first and second persons plural, and appears as -u- in the third plural. The most practical procedure is to memorize the present tense paradigm, paying close attention to the altered stem vowel plus personal endings; it should be helpful to note that the vowel alternation ō/is/it/imus/itis/unt is exactly the same as that seen in the future endings of first and second conjugation verbs (-bō, -bis, -bit, -bimus, -bitis, -bunt).

Future Indicative

Most striking in the future tense of the third conjugation (and the fourth, introduced in Capvt X) is the lack of the tense sign -bi-. Here -ē- is the sign of the future in all forms except the first singular, and by contraction the stem vowel itself has disappeared.

Imperfect Indicative

The imperfect tense is formed precisely according to the rules learned for the first two conjugations (present stem + -bam, -bās, etc.), except that the stem vowel has been lengthened to -ē-, yielding forms analogous to those in the first and second conjugations.

Present Imperative

Also in accordance with the rule already learned, the second person singular of the present imperative is simply the present stem; e.g., mitte (from mittere, to send), pōne (pōnere, to put). In the plural imperative, however, we see again the shift from short, unaccented -e- to -i-: hence, mittite and pōnite (not mittete or pōnete).

Irregular forms: The singular imperative of dūcere was originally dūce, a form seen in the early writer Plautus. Later, however, the -e was dropped from dūce, as it was from the singular imperatives of three other common third conjugation verbs: dīc (dīcere, to say), fac (facere, to do), and fer (ferre, to bear). The other verbs of this conjugation follow the rule as illustrated by age, mitte, and pōne; the four irregulars, dīc, dūc, fac, and fer, should simply be memorized.

VOCĀBVLA

Macrons can be mighty important: an -ēre verb is second conjugation, while the new -ere verbs, with the short stem vowel, are third conjugation and therefore have a great many different forms. So as you memorize each new vocabulary entry, pay close attention to the macrons, as a part of the word's spelling, listen carefully to its pronunciation on the CDs or online audio, and then repeat the word correctly yourself from the very outset. When you carefully pronounce aloud first docēre, with its long, accented stem vowel, and then dūcere, with the short, unaccented vowel, it will be impossible not to notice which is the second conjugation verb, and which is third. All the more reason to remember, whenever you study or review vocabulary: semper audī et prōnūntiā! And be sure to practice conjugating a first, second, and third conjugation verb from this new list; write out the forms for all three tenses, check them against the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 501, and recite them aloud.

Cícerō, Ciceṓnis, m., (Marcus Tullius) Cicero (Ciceronian, cicerone) cṓpia, cṓpiae, f., abundance, supply; cṓpiae, cōpiā́rum, pl., supplies, troops, forces (copious, copy, cornucopia) frā́ter, frā́tris, m., brother (fraternal, fraternity, fraternize, fratricide) laus, laúdis, f., praise, glory, fame (laud, laudable, laudation, laudatory, magna cum laude; cf. laudō) lībértās, lībertā́tis, f., liberty (cf. līber) rátiō, ratiṓnis, f., reckoning, account; reason, judgment, consideration; system; manner, method (ratio, ration, rational, irrational, ratiocination)

scrī́ptor, scrīptṓris, m., writer, author (scriptorium; cf. scrībō below)

sóror, sorṓris, f., sister (sororal, sororicide, sorority) victṓria, victṓriae, f., victory (victorious, Victoria; see Latīna Est Gaudium, Capvt V, and cf. vincō below)

dum, conj., while, as long as, at the same time that; + subjunct., until ad, prep. + acc., to, up to, near to, in the sense of "place to which" with verbs of motion; contrast the dat. of ind. obj., also translated with "to," but in a different sense (administer, ad hoc, ad hominem). In compounds the d is sometimes ASSIMILATED to the following consonant so that ad may appear, for instance, as ac- (accipiō: ad-capiō), ap- (appellō: ad-pellō), a- (aspiciō: ad-spiciō): see App., p. 485.

ex or ē, prep. + abl., out of, from, from within; by reason of, on account of; following cardinal numbers, of (exact, except, exhibit, evict). The Romans used ex before consonants or vowels; ē (like "a" vs. "an" in Eng.) before consonants only. Like ad and many other prepositions, ex/ē was often used as a prefix in compounds, sometimes with the x assimilated to the following consonant; e.g., excipiō, ēdūcō, ēventus, efficiō from ex + faciō, etc.; App., p. 486.

númquam, adv., never támen, adv., nevertheless, still

ágō, ágere, ḗgī, ā́ctum, to drive, lead, do, act; pass, spend (life or time); grā́tiās ágere + dat. for the person being thanked, to thank (someone), lit., to give thanks to (agent, agenda, agile, agitate, active, actor, action, actual, actuate) dēmṓnstrō, dēmōnstrā́re, dēmōnstrā́vī, dēmōnstrā́tum, to point out, show, demonstrate (demonstrable, demonstration, demonstrative)

díscō, díscere, dídicī, to learn (disciple, disciplinary; cf. discipulus, discipula) dóceō, docḗre, dócuī, dóctum, to teach (docent, docile, document, doctor, doctrine, indoctrinate)

dṹcō, dṹcere, dṹxī, dúctum, to lead; consider, regard; prolong (ductile, abduct, adduce, deduce, educe, induce, produce, reduce, seduce)

gérō, gérere, géssī, géstum, to carry; carry on, manage, conduct, wage, accomplish, perform (gerund, gesture, gesticulate, jest, belligerent, congeries, digest, suggest, exaggerate, register, registry)

scrī́bō, scrī́bere, scrī́psī, scrī́ptum, to write, compose (ascribe, circumscribe, conscript, describe, inscribe, proscribe, postscript, rescript, scripture, subscribe, transcribe, scribble, scrivener, shrive) tráhō, tráhere, trā́xī, tráctum, to draw, drag; derive, acquire (attract, contract, retract, subtract, tractor, etc.)

víncō, víncere, vī́cī, víctum, to conquer, overcome (convince, convict, evince, evict, invincible, Vincent, victor, Victoria, vanquish)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

As always, before attempting these readings, memorize the paradigms and vocabulary, and check your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises. Then listen to the readings, if you have the CDs, read them aloud for comprehension, and write out your translations; for practice with the new grammar, scan through the readings and identify the person, number, and tense of all third conjugation verbs. A common translation error involves misconstruing future tense third conjugation forms like aget in S.A. 1 below as present tense, since they resemble second conjugation forms like monet, dēbet, etc.; you can avoid such problems by carefully studying vocabulary. Another common mistake occurs in translating "to" in English-to-Latin exercises; with a verb of motion, use the newly introduced preposition ad; use the dative when "to" indicates an indirect object. The noun error in S.A. 6 is one of countless Latin words whose meanings are easily understood from English derivatives; here and in similar instances elsewhere in the notes, English definitions are omitted, sometimes with the note "= Eng.," and you'll be expected to deduce the meanings.

Cicero on the Ethics of Waging War

Cīvitās bellum sine causā bonā aut propter īram gerere nōn dēbet. Sī fortūnās et agrōs vītāsque populī nostrī sine bellō dēfendere poterimus, tum pācem cōnservāre dēbēbimus; sī, autem, nōn poterimus esse salvī et servāre pātriam lībertātemque nostram sine bellō, bellum erit necessārium. Semper dēbēmus dēmōnstrāre, tamen, magnum officium in bellō, et magnam clēmentiam post victōriam.

Cicero Off. 1.11.34–36 and Rep. 3.23.34–35 (see Locī Ant. VII for a fuller adaptation): The views expressed by Cicero here are adapted from his political treatise on the ideal state, the Dē Rē Pūblicā (On the Republic), written in the late 50s, before his governorship in Cilicia, and from another of his philosophical works, the Dē Officiīs (On Moral Responsibilities), written in 45–44 B.C., when he was semi-retired from politics and living in self-imposed exile during the dictatorship of Julius Caesar and its aftermath (the same period during which he composed the Tusculan Disputations and On Friendship, selections from which you read in Capita IV and V above).—causa, -ae, f.; "causal," "accuse."—aut, conj., or.—dēfendere: = Eng.; "defendant" "defensive."—poterimus . . . dēbēbimus: The fut. tense in the PROTASIS, or "if-clause," of a CONDITIONAL SENTENCE may be translated as pres. tense, since Eng. typically employs the pres. in such conditions, the "if" itself implying fut. action; similarly the auxiliary verb "ought" in Eng. often implies futurity and so the fut. of dēbēre can often be translated as a pres., though here dēbēbimus strictly has the fut. sense of we will have an obligation (to).—autem, conj., however.—necessārius, -a, -um: = Eng.; "necessity."—clēmentia, -ae, f., mildness, gentleness, mercy; "clemency," "inclement."

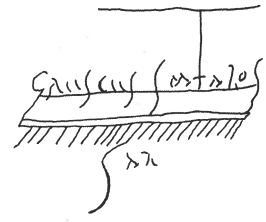
QVAESTIŌNĒS: What specific ethical views on waging war are set forth here, do you agree or disagree with them, and how do they compare with modern American attitudes and practices? Based on this reading, does Cicero seem to have been a hawk, a dove, or a pragmatist?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Crēscē<n>s Spatalō sal(ūtem)!



CIL 4.4742: From the House of the Cissonii, Reg. VII, Ins. 7. Romans often scribbled a "hello" to their friends—on any convenient wall, or in this case on a column, in a favorite hangout; for the nautical form, cf. the graffiti in Capita II–III above. "Crescens" (from Crēscēns, Crēscentis, m., but often spelled and doubtless therefore pronounced, as here, without the -n-) and "Spatalus" are both cognomina.—salūs, salūtis, f., health, safety; greeting(s); "salutation," "salute"; the word was commonly abbreviated in inscriptions, as here; salūtem = ACCUSATIVE OF EXCLAMATION, a grammatical construction indicating emotion and generally with some transitive verb understood, here, e.g., dīcō.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! With this chapter's copious new vocabulary, you can see again what a veritable linguistic cornucopia (a "horn of plenty," from cōpia + cornū, horn, which is cognate with "cornet"!) you have in Latin. Scrīptor is one of a large group of masculine third declension nouns formed by replacing the -um of a verb's fourth principal part with -or, a suffix meaning essentially one who performs the action of the verb. So, a monitor, -tōris, is one who advises, i.e., an advisor; an amātor is a lover; etc. What would be the similarly formed nouns from docēre and agō? Look at the other verbs introduced in this chapter and at the vocabularies in the previous chapters; what other such -or nouns can you form and recognize? The point is that if you know one Latin root word, then you will often discover and be able to deduce the meanings of whole families of words: the verb discere, e.g., is related to discipulus and discipula, of course, and also to the noun disciplīna. I like to point out that "discipline" is not "punishment" but "learning." If you saw the popular 1993 film Man Without a Face, you heard lots of Latin, including a favorite old injunction and the motto of England's Winchester College, aut disce aut discēde, either learn or leave (I have this posted on my office door). You'll be learning, not leaving, I have no doubt, but for now, valēte, discipulī et discipulae!

CAPVT IX

Demonstratives Hic, Ille, Iste; Special -īus Adjectives

GRAMMATICA

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS (sg. prōnōmen, pl. prōnōmina) AND ADJECTIVES

DEMONSTRATIVES (from dēmōnstrāre, to point out) are adjectives and pronouns that in general "point" to persons or things that are relatively near to, or far from, a speaker or an addressee. The Latin demonstratives hic, iste, and ille are variously equivalent to English "this/these" and "that/those"; their declensions generally follow that of magnus, -a, -um (Capvt IV), with the exception of the forms underlined in the following paradigms (which, as always, should be memorized by repeating the forms aloud, from left to right, hic, haec, hoc; huius, huius, huius; etc.).

	ille, that, those			hic, this, these
	M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
Singular
Nom.	ílle	ílla	íllud	hic	haec	hoc
Gen.	illíus	illíus	illíus	húius	húius	húius
Dat.	íllī	íllī	íllī	huic	huic	huic
Acc.	íllum	íllam	íllud	hunc	hanc	hoc
Abl.	íllō	íllā	íllō	hōc	hāc	hōc
Plural
Nom.	íllī	íllae	ílla	hī	hae	haec
Gen.	illṓrum	illárum	illṓrum	hṓrum	hárum	hṓrum
Dat.	íllīs	íllīs	íllīs	hīs	hīs	hīs
Acc.	íllōs	íllās	ílla	hōs	hās	haec
Abl.	íllīs	íllīs	íllīs	hīs	hīs	hīs

Iste, that (near you), that of yours, follows the declension of ille:

	M.	F.	N.
Singular
Nom.	íste	ísta	ístud
Gen.	istíus	istíus	istíus
Dat.	ístī	ístī	ístī
Acc.	ístum	ístam	ístud
Abl.	ístō	ístā	ístō
Plural
Nom.	ístī	ístae	ísta etc.

Declension

Again, all three demonstratives follow the pattern of magnus, -a, -um quite closely, entirely in the plural with the exception of the neuter haec. The most striking differences are the genitive and dative singular forms (shared by the nine other special adjectives discussed below) and the -c in several forms of hic, a shortened form of the demonstrative enclitic -ce. Note that huius and huic are among the few words in which ui functions as a diphthong; for the special pronunciation of huius (= huí-yus) see the Introductiō (p. xxxvii—and listen to the CDs, if you have them).

Usage, Translation, and Word Order

In general the demonstratives point out persons or things either near the speaker (hic liber, this book = this book of mine, this book here) or near the addressee (iste liber, that book, that book of yours, that book next to you), or distant from both (ille liber, that book = that book over there, that book of his or hers). Ille and hic are sometimes equivalent to the former and the latter, respectively, and occasionally they have little more force than our personal pronouns, he, she, it, they; ille can also mean the famous (ille rēx Philippus, that famous/well-known king Philip); iste is sometimes best translated such (as you speak of/refer to), and occasionally has a disparaging sense, as in ista īra, that awful anger of yours, iste tyrannus, that despicable tyrant.

When demonstratives modify nouns, they function as adjectives; since they are by nature emphatic, they regularly precede the nouns they modify. The following examples provide practice with some of the various forms:

hic liber, this book
ille liber, that book

hanc cīvitātem, this state huic cīvitātī, to this state

illīus librī, of that book illī librī, those books
illī librō, to that book illō librō, by that book istīus amīcī, of that friend (of yours) istī amīcī, those friends (of yours) istī amīcō, to that friend (of yours)

illī cīvitātī, to that state illae cīvitātēs, those states
haec cīvitās, this state haec cōnsilia, these plans hoc cōnsilium, this plan hōc cōnsiliō, by this plan huic cōnsiliō, to this plan

When used alone, demonstratives function as PRONOUNS (words used prō nōmine, "in place of a noun," and referring, less specifically than a noun, to a person, place, or thing) and are often best translated as this man, that woman, these things, etc., according to their gender, number, and context. (Generally the neuter was used as a pronoun only in the nominative and accusative; in the other cases the demonstrative was usually employed as an adjective agreeing with the noun for "thing," e.g., huius reī, of this thing.)

hic, this man
hanc, this woman
hunc, this man
haec, this woman
haec, these things
istum, that man
istārum, of those women

ille, that man
illa, that woman
illa, those things
huius, of this man or woman illī, to that man or woman
illī, those men

SPECIAL -īus ADJECTIVES

Nine common first/second declension adjectives have the genitive singular ending -īus and dative singular ending -ī, following the pattern of illīus and illī. Elsewhere in the singular and throughout the plural these are regular adjectives, following the pattern of magnus, -a, -um, except for the neuter singular aliud (cf. illud) and the common use of alterīus, borrowed from alter, for the genitive singular of alius, alia, aliud, instead of the regular alīus.

	sōlus, -a, -um, alone, only			alius, alia, aliud, another, other
Singular
Nom.	sōlus	sōla	sōlum	álius	ália	áliud
Gen.	sōlīus	sōlīus	sōlīus	~~alterīus~~	alterīus	alterīus
Dat.	sōlī	sōlī	sōlī	áliī	áliī	áliī
Acc.	sōlum	sōlam	sōlum	álium	áliam	áliud
Abl.	sōlō	sōlā	sōlō	áliō	áliā	áliō
Plural
Nom.	sōlī	sōlae	sōla	áliī	áliae	ália
	etc.			etc.

The nine adjectives in this group can be easily remembered via the acronym UNUS NAUTA, each letter of which represents the first letter of one of the adjectives (and which at the same time includes one of the nine words, ūnus, and even reminds you that nauta, though a first declension noun, is masculine, hence the masculine form ūnus). Note, too, that each of the nine words indicates some aspect of number:

U	ūnus, -a, -um (ūnīus, etc.), one
N	nūllus, -a, -um (nūllīus, etc.), no, none
U	ūllus, -a, -um, any
S	sōlus, -a, -um, alone, only
N	neuter, neutra, neutrum, neither
A	alius, -a, -ud, another, other
U	uter, utra, utrum, either, which (of two)
T	tōtus, -a, -um, whole, entire
A	alter, altera, alterum, the other (of two)

VOCĀBVLA

We have seen a few Latin nouns that have irregularities, including variant endings or special meanings for the plural; locus in the list below has both masculine and neuter endings in the plural, with some different meanings for each gender, so take careful note. Note too the exceptional -ud neuter endings seen in illud, istud, aliud. The adverb nimis is also unusual in having two essentially opposite meanings, excessively, which has negative connotations, and—usually when modifying an adjective or another adverb—exceedingly, which can have a positive connotation: choose the one that suits the context. In, like sub, takes an accusative with verbs of motion (virōs in hunc locum dūcēbās, you were leading the men into this place), an ablative with verbs of rest (illī in agrō sunt, those men are in the field).

Remember, as always, to learn these new words by listening and saying them aloud—audī et prōnūntiā!—and continue reviewing vocabulary from prior chapters as well. Practice the new forms by declining some noun-adjective phrases of different genders, such as ille rēx alius, ista soror sōla, and hoc studium tōtum.

lócus, lócī, m., place; passage in literature; pl., lóca, locōrum, n., places, region; lócī, locōrum, m., passages in literature (allocate, dislocate, locality, locomotion) mórbus, mórbī, m., disease, sickness (morbid, morbidity, morbidness, morbose) stúdium, stúdiī, n. eagerness, zeal, pursuit, study (studio, studious; cf. studēre, to be eager for, study) hic, haec, hoc, this; the latter; at times weakened to he, she, it, they (ad hoc) ílle,ílla, íllud, that; the former; the famous; he, she, it, they íste, ísta, ístud, that of yours, that; such (as you have, as you speak of); sometimes with contemptuous force, e.g., that despicable, that wretched álius,ália, áliud, other, another; áliī . . . áliī, some . . . others (alias, alibi, alien) álter, áltera, álterum, the other (of two), second (alter, alteration, alternate, alternative, altercation, altruism, adulterate, adultery) neúter, neútra, neútrum, not either, neither (neutrality, neutralize, neutron) nūllus, nūlla, nūllum, not any, no, none (null, nullify, nullification, annul) sōlus, sōla, sōlum, alone, only, the only; nōn sōlum . . . sed étiam, not only . . . but also (sole, solitary, soliloquy, solo, desolate, sullen) tōtus, tōta, tōtum, whole, entire (total, totality, factotum, in toto) ūllus, ūlla, ūllum, any ūnus, ūna, ūnum, one, single, alone (unit, unite, union, onion, unanimous, unicorn, uniform, unique, unison, universal, university) úter, útra, útrum, either, which (of two) énim, postpositive conj., for, in fact, truly in, prep. + acc., into, toward; against (also in + abl., in, on, see Capvt III); in compounds in- may also appear as il-, ir-, im-; and it may have its literal meanings or have simply an intensive force (intend, invade, impugn): contrast the inseparable negative prefix in-, not, un-, in-, and for these and other prefixes, see the App., p. 485–89

nímis or nímium, adv., too, too much, excessively; in a positive sense, esp. with adjectives and adverbs, exceedingly, very (nimiety)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After completing some of the Self-Tutorial Exercises, check your mastery of the newly introduced demonstratives and -īus adjectives by identifying the number, gender, case, and use of those in the chapter's readings. Reminder: when hic, iste, and ille have no noun to modify, it is often necessary, in order to avoid ambiguity, to supply "man/men," "woman/women," or "thing(s)," depending on the word's number and gender; thus hic . . . dūcet in S.A. 2 should be translated this man will lead, and not this will lead.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Hic tōtus liber multōs locōs litterārum Rōmānārum laudat.
2. Hī igitur illīs deābus heri grātiās agēbant.
3. Illud dē vitiīs istīus rēgīnae nunc scrībam, et ista poenās dabit.
4. Neuter alterī plēnam cōpiam pecūniae tum dabit.
5. Potestne laus ūllīus terrae esse perpetua?
6. Labor ūnīus numquam poterit hās cōpiās vincere.

7. Mōrēs istīus scrīptōris erant nimis malī.
8. Nūllī magistrī, tamen, sub istō vēra docēre audēbant.
9. Valēbuntne pāx et lībertās in patriā nostrā post hanc victōriam?
10. Dum illī ibi remanent, aliī nihil agunt, aliī discunt.
11. Cicero was writing about the glory of the other man and his wife.
12. The whole state was thanking this man's brother alone.
13. On account of that courage of yours those (men) will lead no troops into these places tomorrow.
14. Will either new book be able to point out and overcome the faults of these times?

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Ubi illās nunc vidēre possum? (Terence.)
2. Hic illam virginem in mātrimōnium dūcet. (Terence.—mātrimōnium, -iī, n.)
3. Huic cōnsiliō palmam dō. (Terence.—palma, -ae, f., palm branch of victory; "palmetto," "impalm.")
4. Virtūtem enim illīus virī amāmus. (Cicero.)
5. Sōlus hunc iuvāre potes. (Terence.)
6. Poena istīus ūnīus hunc morbum cīvitātis relevābit sed perīculum semper remanēbit. (Cicero.—relevāre, to relieve, diminish; "relevant," "relief.")
7. Hī enim dē exitiō huius cīvitātis et tōtīus orbis terrārum cōgitant. (Cicero.—orbis, -is, m., circle, orb; "orbicular" "orbit." orbis terrārum, idiom, the world.)
8. Est nūllus locus utrī hominī in hāc terrā. (Martial.)
9. Nōn sōlum ēventus hoc docet—iste est magister stultōrum!—sed etiam ratiō. (Livy.—ēventus, outcome; "event," "eventual.")

When I Have . . . Enough!

Habet Āfricānus mīliēns, tamen captat.
Fortūna multīs dat nimis, satis nūllī.

*Martial Epig. 12.10: This epigram targets one of those scoundrels known in ancient Rome as captātōrēs, lit. grabbers, men who practically made a career of kissing up to wealthy patrons—esp. those who were old or sick—with an eye to gaining a favorable place in their wills. The legacy-hunter satirized here, Africanus, is already a millionaire, but is still on the lookout for inheritances; Martial helps emphasize the paradox by FRAMING the first verse with the contrasting verbs—a rhetorical device common in Lat. poetry. Meter: choliambic.—mīliēns: from the Lat. word mīlle, thousand, but often used hyperbolically, as here; freely = millions; "millennium," "millipede."—captāre, to hunt for legacies; "captive," "captor."—Fortūna: here PERSONIFIED; like the Greek goddess Tyche, Fortuna was deified and worshiped in temples throughout the Roman empire.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Identify the CHIASMUS in line 2 (if you do not recall the meaning of the term, see the notes on "Dr. Fell," in Capvt VI above); what is the intended effect?

Sī vīs studēre philosophiae animōque, hoc studium nōn potest valēre sine frūgālitāte. Haec frūgālitās est paupertās voluntāria. Tolle, igitur, istās excūsātiōnēs: "Nōndum satis pecūniae habeō. Sī quandō illud 'satis' habēbō, tum mē tōtum philosophiae dabō." Incipe nunc philosophiae, nōn pecūniae, studēre.

Seneca Ep. 17.5: Seneca "the Younger" (Lucius Annaeus Seneca, ca. 4 B.C.–A.D. 65), Stoic philosopher, tutor to the young Nero, and author of numerous moralizing essays, epistles, and tragedies, here urges his reader to pursue the life of the mind; accused of involvement in a conspiracy against Nero, he was forced by the emperor to commit suicide.—vīs: irreg. form, you wish.—studēre: one of several Lat. verbs that take a dat. "object" (formally introduced in Capvt XXXV), to be eager (for), devote oneself (to), pursue; related to studium in the above Vocābula; you will be happy to note that a "student" is one "eager" for learning!—frūgālitās -tātis, f.: recall that many Lat. third decl. -tās nouns become "-ty" nouns in Eng., like "liberty" from lībertās.—paupertās, -tātis, f., small means, poverty; "pauper," "impoverish"—voluntārius, -a, -um: = Eng.; "volunteer," "involuntary."—tollere, to take away; "extol," "extolment."—excūsātiō, -ōnis, f., excuse; "excusable."—nōndum, adv., not yet.— tōtum: Lat. often uses an adj. in the pred., where Eng. would employ an adv.; hence entirely is a good option here, but what would be a more lit. translation?—incipe: imperat., begin; "incipient," "inception."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What, in Seneca's opinion, often stands in the way of living a philosophically sound lifestyle? What solution does he propose? What special force does istās have here?

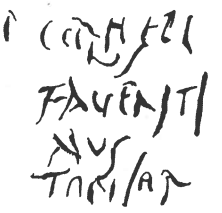
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

P. Cornēlius Faventīnus, tōnsor



CIL 4.8741: Numerous graffiti from Pompeii, like this one scrawled on a column in the Large Palaestra, near the amphitheater (Reg. II), advertised a variety of services available, from architects to tailors, perfumers, and launderers. It was also common in graffiti (and other types of inscriptions as well), esp. when space was limited, to continue a word begun on one line onto the following line, as here with CORNELI/VS FAVENTI/NUS.—P. = Pūblius; praenomina, as noted before, were commonly abbreviated.—tōnsor, -sōris, m., barber, "tonsorial"; barbers were an essential profession in the Roman empire as they are today, and archaeologists have even found in Pompeii a painted campaign notice announcing the support of a barbers' guild for a favorite political candidate.

ETYMOLOGIA

A few examples of in- as a prefix connected with the preposition: invoke, induce, induct, inscribe, inhibit, indebted. Some examples of in- as an inseparable negative prefix: invalid, innumerable, insane, insuperable, intolerant, inanimate, infamous, inglorious, impecunious, illiberal, irrational. For both prefixes, see Appendix, p. 487.

Lat. ille provided the Romance languages with the definite article ("the") and with pronouns of the third person; and Lat. ūnus provided these languages with the indefinite article ("a," "an"). Some of these forms and a few other derivatives are shown in the following table:

Latin	It.	Sp..	Port.	Fr.	Old Occ.	Rom.
ille, illa	il, la	el, la	o, a	le, la	lo, la	ăla, aia
ille, illa	egli, ella	él, ella	ele, ela	il, elle	ẹl, ẹla	el, ea
ūnus, ūna	un(o), una	un(o), una	um, uma	un, une	uns, una	un
tōtus	tutto	todo	todo	tout	totz	tot sōlus	solo	solo	só	seul	sols	solo
alter	altro	otro	outro	autre	autre	alt

Fr. là (there) comes from illāc (viā), an adverbial form meaning there (that way); similarly, It. là, Sp. allá, Port. lá/acolá/ali, Old Occ. lai/la, Rom. acolo.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Here is a mysterious old inscription, found on a hitching post out west in Dodge City:

Aha!—looks like the newly learned dat. of tōtus + emul, like simul, simultaneously? + some form of sum, es, est, the exotic future imperative, perhaps? (NOT!—that old post was just "to tie mules to"!)

Here are some more vocabulary items useful for Latin conversation and other classroom activities: surgere, to rise, stand up (surge, resurgence, insurgence); cōnsīdere, to sit down (sedentary); ambulāre, to walk (ambulatory, amble, ambulance); aperīre (fourth conjugation), to open (aperture); claudere, to close (clause, closet); dēclīnāre; coniugāre; crēta, -ae, chalk (cretaceous); ērāsūra, -ae, eraser; stilus, -ī, pen or pencil (actually a stylus); tabula, -ae, chalkboard (tabular, tabulate); tabella, -ae, the DIMINUTIVE form of tabula, notebook, writing pad (tablet); iānua, -ae, door (janitor, Janus, January); fenestra, -ae, window; cella, -ae, room (cell); sella, -ae, chair; mēnsa, -ae, table; podium, -ii. Now you'll know just what to do when your instructor says to you, Salvē, discipula (or discipule)! Quid hodiē agis? Surge ex sellā tuā, ambulā ad tabulam, et dēclīnā "hic, haec, hoc." Next thing you know, you'll be speaking Latin—not so difficult (even Roman toddlers did!): semper valēte, amīcae amīcīque!

GRAMMATICA

FOURTH CONJUGATION AND THIRD CONJUGATION -iō VERBS

This chapter introduces the active voice of the last of the regular conjugations, the fourth conjugation (illustrated here by audiō, audīre, audīvī, audītum, to hear) and -iō verbs of the third (illustrated by capiō, capere, cēpī, captum, to take, seize). Like the first two conjugations, the fourth is characterized by a long stem vowel; as seen in the paradigm below, the -ī- is retained through all the present system tenses (present, future, imperfect), although it is shortened before vowels as well as before final -t. Certain third conjugation verbs are formed in the same way in the present system, except that the -i- is everywhere short and e appears as the stem vowel in the singular imperative (cape) and the present active infinitive (capere). Agō is presented alongside these new paradigms for comparison and review (see Capvt VIII).

Present Active Indicative

	1. ágō	aúdi-ō	cápi-ō	(I hear, take)
Sg.	2. ágis	aúdī-s	cápi-s	(you hear, take)
	3. ágit	aúdi-t	cápi-t	(he, she, it hears, takes)
	1. ágimus	audīmus	cápimus	(we hear, take)
Pl.	2. ágitis	audītis	cápitis	(you hear, take)
	3. águnt	aúdiunt	cápiunt	(they hear, take)

Future Active Indicative

	1. ágam	aúdi-am	cápi-am	(I will hear, take)
Sg.	2. ágēs	aúdi-ēs	cápi-ēs	(you will hear, take)
	3. áget	aúdi-et	cápi-et	(he, she, it will hear, take)
	1. agḗmus	audiḗmus	capiḗmus	(we will hear, take)
Pl.	2. agḗtis	audiḗtis	capiḗtis	(you will hear, take)
	3. ágent	aúdient	cápient	(they will hear, take)

Imperfect Active Indicative

	1. agḗbam	audi-ḗbam	capi-ḗbam	(I was hearing, taking)
Sg.	2. agḗbās	audi-ḗbās	capi-ḗbās	(you were hearing, taking)
	3. agḗbat	audi-ḗbat	capi-ḗbat	(he, she, it was hearing, taking)
	1. agēbā́mus	audiēbā́mus	capiēbā́mus	(we were hearing, taking)
Pl.	2. agēbā́tis	audiēbā́tis	capiēbā́tis	(you were hearing, taking)
	3. agḗbant	audiḗbant	capiḗbant	(they were hearing, taking)

Present Active Imperative

Sg.	2. áge	aúdī	cápe	(hear, take!)
Pl.	2. ágite	audī́-te	cápi-te	(hear, take!)

Conjugation of Audiō

The -īre distinguishes the infinitive of the fourth conjugation from those of the other conjugations (laud-ā́re, mon-ḗre, ág-ere, aud-ī́re, cáp-ere).

As in the case of the first two conjugations, the rule for the formation of the present indicative is to add the personal endings to the present stem (audī-). In the third person plural this rule would give us audi-nt but the actual form is audi-unt, an ending reminiscent of águnt.

For the future of audiō a good rule of thumb is this: shorten the ī of the present stem, audi-, and add the future endings of agō: -am, -ēs, -et, -ēmus, -ētis, -ent. Once again, as in the third conjugation, -ē- is the characteristic vowel of the future.

The imperfect is formed with -iē-, instead of simply the stem vowel -ī-, before the -bā- tense sign, so that the forms are audiēbam, audiēbās, etc. (rather than audībam, etc., as might be expected).

The imperatives, however, follow exactly the pattern of the first and second conjugations, i.e., the singular is identical to the present stem (audī) and the plural adds -te (audīte).

Conjugation of Capiō

As seen from its short e stem vowel, capere is clearly an infinitive of the third conjugation, not of the fourth. The imperative forms also show that this is a verb of the third conjugation.

The present, future, and imperfect indicative of capiō follow the pattern of audiō, except that capiō, like agō, has a short -i- in cápis, cápimus, cápitis.

Note carefully again that -i- appears in all present system active indicative forms for both fourth conjugation and third -iō verbs, and remember that two vowels, -iē-, appear before the -bā- in the imperfect.

Remember this!

VOCĀBVLA

Without careful vocabulary study, third conjugation -iō verbs and fourth conjugation verbs may be easily confused; the second principal part is a sure indicator: when you see, and hear and say (semper audī et prōnūntiā!), the accented, long-ī stem vowel, you'll know the verb is fourth conjugation. Some other words you should beware of confusing: via and vīta, dīcō and dūcō (and don't forget those irregular imperatives, dīc, dūc, fac, fer).

You'll see from the list below that the preposition cum, with, frequently appears in one form or another as a prefix; for this, and numerous other prefixes and suffixes that appear commonly in both Latin words and their English derivatives, take a close look now at "Some Etymological Aids," in the App., p. 485–91. After memorizing this new vocabulary, practice with some of the new verbs by writing out conjugations of vīvo, fugiō, and veniō in the three tenses you have learned, plus the imperatives; compare your work with the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 501, and recite all the forms aloud.

cupíditās, cupiditā́tis, f., desire, longing, ~~passion~~; cupidity, ~~avarice~~ (Cupid) hṓra, hṓrae, f., hour, ~~time~~ (horoscope: from Lat., via Fr., but ultimately Gk.)
nātū́ra, nātū́rae, f., nature (natural, preternatural, supernatural) senéctūs, senectū́tis, f., old age (senescent, senility) tímor, timṓris, m., fear (timorous, timid) vḗritās, vēritā́tis, f., truth (verify, veritable, verity) vía, víae, f., way, road, ~~street~~ (via, viaduct, deviate, devious, obvious, pervious, impervious, previous, trivial, voyage, envoy) volúptās, voluptā́tis, f., pleasure (voluptuary, voluptuous, voluptuosity) beā́tus, beā́ta, beā́tum, happy, fortunate, blessed (beatific, beatify, beatitude, Beatrice) quóniam, conj., since, ~~inasmuch as~~ cum, prep. + abl., with. As a prefix cum may appear as com-, con-, cor-, col-, co-, and means with, together, completely, or simply has an intensive force (complete, connect, corroborate, collaborate; see App., p. 486)

aúdiō, audīre, audīvī, audītum, to hear, listen to (audible, audience, audit, audition, auditory; obey, through Fr. obéir from Lat. obēdīre = ob + audīre)

cápiō, cápere, cēpī, cáptum, to take, capture, seize, get. In compounds the -a- becomes -i-, -cipiō (see App., p. 484): ac-cipiō, ex-cipiō, in-cipiō, re-cipiō, etc. (capable, capacious, capsule, captious, captive, captor)

dīcō, dīcere, dīxī, díctum, to say, tell, speak; ~~name~~, call (dictate, dictum, diction, dictionary, dight, ditto, contradict, indict, edict, verdict)

fáciō, fácere, fēcī, fáctum, to make, do, ~~accomplish~~. In compounds the -a- becomes -i-, -ficiō (App., p. 484): cōn-ficiō, per-ficiō, etc. (facile, fact, faction, factotum, facsimile, faculty, fashion, feasible, feat, hacienda; cf. officium)

fúgiō, fúgere, fūgī, fúgitūrum, to flee, hurry away; escape; go into exile; ~~avoid~~, ~~shun~~ (fugitive, fugue, centrifugal, refuge, subterfuge)

véniō, venīre, vēnī, véntum, to come (advent, adventure, avenue, convene, contravene, covenant, event, inconvenient, intervene, parvenu, prevent, provenience, venue) invéniō, invenīre, invēnī, invéntum, to come upon, find (invent, inventor, inventive, inventory)

vīvō, vīvere, vīxī, víctum, to live (convivial, revive, survive, vivacity, vivid, vivify, viviparous, vivisection, victual, vittle; cf. vīta)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After memorizing the paradigms and vocabulary, and practicing with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, search for all -iō verbs in the chapter's readings, and identify their person, number, tense, mood (indicative or imperative), and whether they are third or fourth conjugation. Remember to read each sentence and passage aloud, think what the Latin is saying, and then write out translations that are at once accurate and idiomatic.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Quid discipulae hodiē discere dēbent?
2. Frātrēs nihil cum ratiōne heri gerēbant.
3. Ille magnam virtūtem labōris et studiī docēre saepe audet.
4. Hic dē senectūte scrībēbat; ille, dē amōre; et alius, dē lībertāte.
5. Ex librīs ūnīus virī nātūram hārum īnsidiārum dēmōnstrābimus.
6. Istī sōlī victōriam nimis amant; neuter dē pāce cōgitat.
7. Ubi cīvitās ūllōs virōs magnae sapientiae audiet?
8. Ex illīs terrīs in haec loca cum amīcīs vestrīs venīte.

9. Tamen post paucās hōrās sorōrem illīus invenīre poterāmus.
10. Cōpiae vestrae utrum virum ibi numquam capient.
11. Alter Graecus remedium huius morbī inveniēbat.
12. Carmina illīus scrīptōris sunt plēna nōn sōlum vēritātis sed etiam virtūtis.
13. We shall then come to your land without any friends.
14. While he was living in that place, nevertheless, we were able to have no peace.
15. The whole state now shuns and will always shun these vices.
16. He will, therefore, thank the queen and the whole people.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Cupiditātem pecūniae glōriaeque fugite. (Cicero.)
2. Officium meum faciam. (*Terence.)
3. Fāma tua et vīta fīliae tuae in perīculum crās venient. (Terence.)
4. Vīta nōn est vīvere sed valēre. (Martial.)
5. Semper magnō cum timōre incipiō dīcere. (Cicero.—incipiō, -ere, to begin; "incipient," "inception.")
6. Sī mē dūcēs, Mūsa, corōnam magnā cum laude capiam. (Lucretius.—Mūsa, -ae, f., Muse; "museum," "music."—corōna, -ae, f., crown; "coronation," "coronary.")

Marble statue of Calliope, muse of epic poetry. Hadrianic copy, probably of a 2nd cent. B.C. original by Philiskos of Rhodes Museo Nazionale Romano (Palazzo Altemps), Rome, Italy

7. Vīve memor mortis; fugit hōra. (Persius.—memor, adj., nom. sg., mindful; "memorial," "commemorate."—mors, mortis, f., death; "mortify," "postmortem.")
8. Rapite, amīcī, occāsiōnem dē hōrā. (Horace.—rapiō, -ere, to snatch, seize; "rapid," "rapture," "ravage."—occāsiō, -ōnis, f., opportunity; "occasion," "occasional.")
9. Paucī veniunt ad senectūtem. (*Cicero.)
10. Sed fugit, intereā, fugit tempus. (Vergil.—intereā, adv., meanwhile.—Why is the verb repeated?)
11. Fāta viam invenient. (*Vergil.—fātum, -ī, n., fate; "fatal," "fateful.")
12. Bonum virum nātūra, nōn ōrdō, facit. (*Publilius Syrus.—ōrdō, -dinis, m., rank; "ordain," "ordinary.")
13. Obsequium parit amīcōs; vēritās parit odium. (Cicero.—obsequium, -ī, n., compliance; "obsequent," "obsequious."—pariō, -ere, to produce; "parent," "postpartum."—odium, -ī, n., hate; "odious," "annoy.")

The Incomparable Value of Friendship

Nihil cum amīcitiā possum comparāre; dī hominibus nihil melius dant. Pecūniam aliī mālunt; aliī, corpora sāna; aliī, fāmam glōriamque; aliī, voluptātēs—sed hī virī nimium errant, quoniam illa sunt incerta et ex fortūnā veniunt, nōn ex sapientiā. Amīcitia enim ex sapientiā et amōre et mōribus bonīs et virtūte venit; sine virtūte amīcitia nōn potest esse. Sī nūllōs amīcōs habēs, habēs vītam tyrannī; sī inveniēs amīcum vērum, vīta tua erit beāta.

Cicero Amīc. (see Locī Ant. VI for more extensive excerpts): Before reading this selection, look back at the passage from "On Friendship" that was introduced in Capvt IV, and you will realize how much your Latin skills have improved over the course of just the past few chapters.—comparāre: = Eng.; "comparable," "comparison." A common mistranslation of the opening clause is "nothing can compare with . . .": before you make this mistake, look at the ending of possum.—melius: better; "ameliorate."—mālunt: prefer.—incertus, -a, -um, uncertain; "certitude."—inveniēs: as noted before, a fut. tense verb in the "if-clause," or PROTASIS, of a CONDITIONAL SENT. may be translated as pres. tense, in keeping with Eng. idiom.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What major points is Cicero making here? What are the full implications of his remark about the personal attributes that form the basis of friendship (amīcitia . . . venit); do you agree, as an ancient Stoic would, that genuine friendship cannot truly exist in the absence of these traits? What does Cicero mean when he compares a friendless existence to a vīta tyrannī? Identify one or two of the most striking stylistic devices in the passage, and comment on their rhetorical effect.

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Pompeiānīs ubique sal(ūtem)!

CIL 4.9143: The person who scribbled this graffito in the atrium of the House of Fabius Rufus (Reg. VII, Ins. 16) was quite generous in his good wishes for one and all! The mark between POMPEIANIS and VBIQVE seems to be a PUNCTUM, a mark of punctuation used only occasionally in graffiti, but often in other types of inscriptions, to indicate the separation between two words. The welcoming sentiment of this graffito inspired the title of a musical score for flute and voice, "Pompeianis Ubique Salutem," by the early 20th-century composer Wolfgang Hildemann.—Pompeiānus, -a, -um, at/of Pompeii, Pompeian.—ubique, adv., anywhere; everywhere; "ubiquitous."—salūtem: do you recall the meaning of salūs, and why the acc. is employed here, from the graffito in Capvt VIII? The word is related to salveō.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Do you remember being introduced in Capvt VIII to masculine -or nouns formed from the fourth principal parts of verbs? Well, there are lots of others related to the new verbs in this chapter: audītor, auditor, listener, is one; can you find others? Look at the section on Etymological Aids in the App., p. 489–90 below, and you'll learn a great deal more about word families, including another group of third declension nouns, mostly feminine, formed by adding the suffix -iō (-iōnis, -iōnī, etc.) to the same fourth principal part. Such nouns generally indicate the performance or result of an action, e.g., audītiō, audītiōnis, f., listening, hearing, and many have English derivatives in -ion (like "audition"). Another example from this chapter's Vocābula is dictiō, (the act of) speaking, public speaking, which gives us such derivatives as "diction" (the manner or style of one's speaking or writing), "dictionary," "benediction," "contradiction," etc. How many other Latin nouns and English derivatives can you identify from the new verbs in this chapter? Happy hunting, but in the meantime tempus fugit, so I'll have to say valēte!

CAPVT XI

Personal Pronouns Ego, Tū, and Is; Demonstratives Is and Īdem

GRAMMATICA

PERSONAL PRONOUNS

A PERSONAL PRONOUN is a word used "in place of a noun" (the literal meaning of prōnōmen) to designate a particular person, from the speaker's point of view: the first person pronoun indicates the speaker herself or himself (ego/nōs, I/me, we/us), the second person pronoun indicates the person(s) addressed by the speaker (tū/vōs, you), and the third person indicates the person(s) or thing(s) the speaker is talking about (is, ea, id, and their plurals, he/him, she/her, it, they/them). You should keep a list of the types of pronouns you have learned, including the demonstratives hic, iste, ille introduced in Capvt IX.

The First and Second Person Pronouns Ego/Nōs, Tū/Vōs

While the first and second person pronouns are irregular in form, their declensions are similar to one another and are easily memorized; note that there are two different forms for the genitive plural.

	Singular		Plural
1st Person—Ego, I/we
Nom.	égo	(I)	nōs	(we)
Gen.	méī	(of me)	nóstrum	(of us) - partitive
			nóstrī	(of us) - objective
Dat.	míhi	(to/for me)	nōbīs	(to/for us)
Acc.	mē	(me)	nōs	(us)
Abl.	mē	(by/with/from me)	nōbīs	(by/with/from us)

2nd Person—Tū, You

Nom.	tū	(you)	vōs	(you)
Gen.	túī	(of you)	véstrum	(of you)
			véstrī	(of you)
Dat.	tíbi	(to/for you)	vṓbīs	(to/for you)
Acc.	tē	(you)	vōs	(you)
Abl.	tē	(by/with/from you)	vṓbīs	(by/with/from you)

The Third Person Pronoun Is, Ea, Id

The declension of the pronoun is, ea, id is comparable to those of hic and ille (Capvt IX), i.e., the pattern is that of magnus, -a, -um (Capvt IV), with the exception of the ten forms underlined below; note that the base is e- in all but the four forms underlined and in bold below (including the alternate nominative plural iī). For the pronunciation of eius, something like "ei-yus," review the discussion of consonantal i in the Intrōductiō (and listen to the Capvt XI pronoun declensions on the CDs, if you have them).

	Masculine		Feminine		Neuter
Singular
N.	is	(he, this man)	éa	(she, this woman)	id	(it, this thing)
G.	éius	(of him, his)	éius	(of her, her)	éius	(of it, its)
D.	éī	(to/for him)	éī	(to/for her)	éī	(to/for it)
A.	éum	(him)	éam	(her)	id	(it)
A.	éō	(by/with/from him)	éā	(by/with/from her)	éō	(by/with/from it)
Plural
N.	éī, iī	(they, m.)	éae	(they, f.)	éa	(they, n.)
G.	eṓrum	(of them, their)	eā́rum	(of them, their)	eṓrum	(of them, their)
D.	éīs	(to/for them)	éīs	(to/for them)	éīs	(to/for them)
A.	éōs	(them)	éās	(them)	éa	(them)
A.	éīs	(by/with/from them)	éīs	(by/with/from them)	éīs	(by/with/from them)

Usage and Translation

Since these pronouns are employed as substitutes for nouns, they are in general used as their corresponding nouns would be: as subjects, direct objects, indirect objects, objects of prepositions, etc.:

Ego tibi (vōbīs) librōs dabō. I shall give the books to you.
Ego eī (eīs) librōs dabō. I shall give the books to him or her (to them).

Tū mē (nōs) nōn capiēs. You will not capture me (us).
Eī id ad nōs mittent. They (m.) will send it (this thing) to us.
Vōs eōs (eās, ea) nōn capiētis. You will not seize them (those men/women/things).
Eae ea ad tē mittent. They (f.) will send them (those things) to you.

Note, however, that the Romans used the nominatives of the pronouns (ego, tū, etc.) only when they wished to stress the subject. Commonly, therefore, the pronominal subject of a Latin verb is not indicated except by the verb's ending.

Eīs pecūniam dabō. I shall give them money.
Ego eīs pecūniam dabō; quid tū dabis? I shall give them money; what will you give?

Another point of usage: when cum was employed with the ablative of the personal pronouns, it was generally suffixed to the pronoun, rather than preceding it as a separate preposition: eōs nōbīscum ibi inveniēs, you will find them there with us.

Note also that the genitives of ego and tū (namely meī, nostrum, nostrī; tuī, vestrum, vestrī) were employed in constructions to be introduced later in the book and were not used to indicate possession, for which the Romans preferred instead to employ the POSSESSIVE ADJECTIVES you have already learned:

meus, -a, -um, my	tuus, -a, -um, your noster, -tra, -trum, our	vester, -tra, -trum, your

English usage is comparable: just as Latin says liber meus, not liber meī, so English says my book, not the book of me.

The genitives of is, ea, id, on the other hand, were quite commonly used to indicate possession. Hence, while eius can sometimes be translated of him/of her/of it, it is very often best translated his/her/its; likewise eōrum/eārum/eōrum can be rendered of them, but its common possessive usage should be translated their. Study the possessives in the following examples, in which mittam governs all the nouns:

Mittam (I shall send)

pecūniam meam (my money).	amīcōs meōs (my friends).
pecūniam nostram (our money).	amīcōs nostrōs (our friends).
pecūniam tuam (your money).	amīcōs tuōs (your friends).
pecūniam vestram (your money).	amīcōs vestrōs (your friends).
pecūniam eius (his, her money).	amīcōs eius (his, her friends).
pecūniam eōrum (their money).	amīcōs eōrum (their friends).
pecūniam eārum (their money).	amīcōs eārum (their friends).

The possessive pronominal adjectives of the first and the second persons naturally agree with their noun in gender, number, and case, as all adjectives agree with their nouns. The possessive genitives eius, eōrum, and eārum, being pronouns, remain unchanged regardless of the gender, number, and case of the noun on which they depend.

A last important reminder regarding possessives is the fact that Latin routinely omits them, except for emphasis or to avoid ambiguity. English, on the other hand, employs possessives regularly, and so you will often need to supply them in translating from Latin (just as you do the articles "a," "an," and "the"), in order to produce an idiomatic translation; e.g., patriam amāmus, we love our country.

Is, ea, id AS DEMONSTRATIVE

While commonly serving as Latin's third person pronoun, is/ea/id was also used as a demonstrative, somewhat weaker in force than hic or ille and translatable as either this/these or that/those. In general you should translate the word in this way when you find it immediately preceding and modifying a noun, i.e., in the same number, gender, and case; contrast the following:

Is est bonus. He is good.
Is amīcus est vir bonus. This friend is a good man.
Vidēsne eam. Do you see her?
Vidēsne eam puellam. Do you see that girl?

THE DEMONSTRATIVE Īdem, eadem, idem

The common demonstrative īdem, eadem, idem, the same (man, woman, thing), is formed simply by adding -dem directly to the forms of is, ea, id, e.g., gen. eiusdem, dat. eīdem, etc.; besides the singular nominatives īdem (m., for isdem) and idem (n., rather than iddem), the only forms not following this pattern exactly are those shown below, where final -m changes to -n- before the -dem suffix (for the full declension of īdem, see the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 498 below).

	Masculine	Feminine	Neuter
Singular
Acc.	eúndem	eándem	ídem
Plural
Gen.	eōrúndem	eārúndem	eōrúndem

Like other demonstratives, īdem may function as an adjective or a pronoun: eōsdem mittō, I am sending the same men; dē eādem ratiōne cōgitābāmus, we were thinking about the same plan.

VOCĀBVLA

One unusual item in this list is the noun nēmō, which–logically, since it means no one–occurs only in the singular. A further irregularity is that nūllīus and nūllō or nūllā, forms of nūllus, -a, -um (Capvt IX), were usually employed instead of the expected nēminis and nēmine, an example of a linguistic phenomenon called SUPPLETION, the use of one word as part of the form set of another, though the two are not cognate; examples in English include the verb "go, went, gone" ("went" being originally past tense of "to wend") and irregular adjective comparisons such as "good, better, best." The conjunction autem is also exceptional in that (like nimis, discussed in the Capvt IX Vocābula) it has two quite opposite meanings, however and moreover: choose the former if the statement the word introduces seems contrary to what might be expected from the preceding statement, the latter if the second statement reinforces the first. Practice with some of the new words by writing out declensions of id caput and īdem cōnsul and comparing your work with the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 498.

cáput, cápitis, n., head; leader; beginning; life; heading; chapter (cape = headland, capital, capitol, capitulate, captain, chief, chieftain, chef, cattle, chattels, cadet, cad, achieve, decapitate, recapitulate, precipice, occiput, sinciput, kerchief) cṓnsul, cṓnsulis, m., consul (consular, consulate, consulship; cf. cōnsilium) nḗmō, nūllīus, nḗminī, nḗminem, nṓllō or nṓllā, m. or f., no one, nobody (Jules Verne's "Captain Nemo," nullify; cf. nūllus)

égo, méī, I (ego, egoism, egotism, egotistical; cf. meus, noster) tū, túī, you (cf. tuus, vester) is, éa, id, this, that; he, she, it (i.e. = id est, that is) ídem, éadem, ídem, the same (the bibliographic abbreviation id. = idem, identical, identity, identify) amī́cus, amī́ca, amī́cum, friendly (amicable, amiable, amiably—cf. amō and the nouns amīcus, amīca, and amīcitia).

cā́rus, cā́ra, cā́rum, dear (caress, charity, charitable, cherish) quod, conj., because

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Before translating, scan through the readings for the newly introduced personal pronouns and demonstratives and identify the number, gender, case, and use of each. Reminder: when a form of is, ea, id precedes a noun and agrees with it in number, gender, and case, it functions as a demonstrative and should be translated as "this" or "that," e.g., eam discipulam in Ex. 5; otherwise the word functions as a pronoun, as in Ex. 1. Remember that tēcum, nōbīscum, etc., were regularly employed instead of cum tē and cum nōbīs. And don't forget to read aloud and for comprehension, before attempting to translate.

Cicero Denounces Catiline in the Senate

Quid facis, Catilīna? Quid cōgitās? Sentīmus magna vitia īnsidiāsque tuās. Ō tempora! Ō mōrēs! Senātus haec intellegit, cōnsul videt. Hic tamen vīvit. Vīvit? Etiam in senātum venit; etiam nunc cōnsilia agere audet; oculīs dēsignat ad mortem nōs! Et nōs, bonī virī, nihil facimus! Ad mortem tē, Catilīna, cōnsul et senātus dūcere dēbent. Cicero Cat. 1.1.ff: Lucius Sergius Catilina, "Catiline" as he is commonly called, masterminded a political conspiracy during Cicero's consulship; Catiline had raised an army and his plans involved a violent take-over of the government and assassination of Cicero himself; this excerpt is adapted from the In Catilīnam I, Cicero's first oration "Against Catiline," which he delivered, after uncovering the plot, in an emergency meeting of the senate, in October of 63 B.C. Catiline, as a Roman senator, was himself present, and the excerpt here is alternately addressed to him and to the other senators. You will read more excerpts from the Catilinarian orations—Cicero delivered four altogether—in Capita XIV and XX, below, and extensive unadapted excerpts appear in Locī Im. V–VI, p. 366–74.—senātus: senate; "senescence," "senility."—dēsignāre: = Eng.; "design," "designation."—mors, mortis, f., death; "postmortem," "rigor mortis."—apertē, adv., openly; "aperture," "overt.") QVAESTIŌNĒS: What course of action does Cicero believe he and the senate should ultimately take? But what is he urging Catiline to do? What range of emotions does he attempt to arouse in his fellow senators? in Catiline? One device Cicero employs extensively here is ANAPHORA, the emphatic repetition of words or phrases; identify several instances of this device and comment on their effect. What other rhetorical strategies does he employ here in order to arouse his audience?

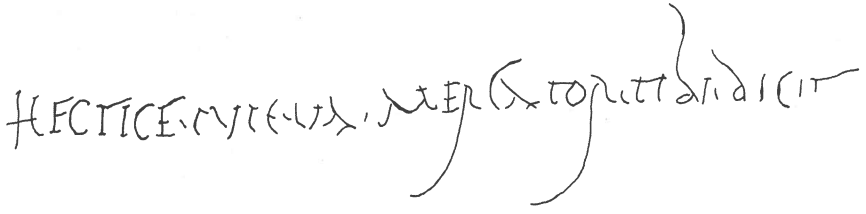
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Hecticē, pūpe, "va(lē)" Mercātor tibi dīcit.

CIL 4.4485 (Reg. VI, Ins. 13, House of Sextus Pompeius Axiochus): Mercator wrote this note carefully in tall, 4"-high letters, with puncta (see CIL 4.9143 in Capvt X) separating all the words, to his ladyfriend Hectice: both names are likely cognomina (unless mercātor is simply a common noun, = merchant; "mercantile," "merchandise"); Hecticē is Greek, suggesting the lady may have been a slave or a freedwoman, and voc. case. —pūpe: = pūpa, from pūpa, -ae, f., girl, doll; "pupa," "pupal."

ETYMOLOGIA

Cārus, in this chapter's Vocābula, sometimes meant expensive, like Eng. "dear" and Fr. cher. The rōstra mentioned in S.A. 9 were in origin the ramming beaks of ships captured in a naval battle at Antium (Anzio) in 338 B.C. and affixed to the speakers' platform in the Roman Forum to attest the victory; the beaks ultimately gave their name to the platform, and both "rostrum" and "rostra" continue in Eng. usage today as terms for a dais or pulpit for public speakers.

Some Romance derivatives from the Lat. personal pronouns follow:

Latin	Italian	Spanish	Portuguese	French
ego, tū	io, tu	yo, tu	eu, tu	je, tu
mihi, tibi	mi, ti		me/mim, te/ti
mē, tē	me, te	me, te	me, te	me, moi, te, toi
nōs, vōs (nom.)	noi, voi	nosotros, vosotros	nós, vós	nous, vous
nōs, vōs (acc.)		nos, os	nos, vos	nous, vous

Fr. moi, toi came from accented Lat. mē, tē, and Fr. me, te came from unaccented Lat. mē, tē; the Sp. suffix -otros derived from alterōs. Cf. Old Occ. eu; me; me; nos/noṣ, vos/voṣ; nos; vos; and Rom. eu, tu; mie, ţie; mie, ţie; noi, voi; noi, voi.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulī et discipulae cārae! Notice the ending on that adjective cārae?—remember that when adjectives modify two nouns of different gender, one solution in classical Latin was to have it agree with the one closer to it in the sentence. By the way, now you know the source of Freud's ego and id, and the meaning of the salutation pāx vōbīscum/pāx tēcum. And, you Caesar fans, can you believe that all of the following phrases/sentences have the same translation (well. . .sort of!): Caesar, Caesar! Caesar eam videt. Caesar, cape eam! Caesaris convulsiō (that last one is, I'll admit, a bit of a stretch: Caesar's seizure!). According to tradition, Caesar's last words to the assassin Brutus were et tū, Brūte?—to which Brutus hungrily replied, according to the late great comedian Brother Dave Gardner, "Nah, I ain't even et one yet!" Did you notice in the Vocābula the origin of the abbreviations i.e. and id.? There are dozens of Latin abbreviations in current usage; for some others, besides those at the end of Capvt VI, scan through the list on p. 538–39. And remember those -or/-iō nouns? From the verbs in this Vocābula come missor, missōris, m., a shooter (of "missiles"—lit., a sender) and missiō, missiōnis, f., literally a sending forth and used in classical Latin for release from captivity, liberation (itself from līberāre, to free), discharge (from military service), dismissal, and, of course, mission; from compounds of mittō come a host of Latin nouns with further English derivatives such as "admission," "commission," "emission," "permission," etc. Can you think of others, both the Latin nouns and the English derivatives, from mittō? And how about sentiō? Well, tempus fugit, so pāx vōbīscum et valēte!

CAPVT XII

The Perfect Active System; Synopsis

GRAMMATICA

THE PERFECT ACTIVE SYSTEM

You are already familiar with the formation and translation of the present, future, and imperfect tenses, the three tenses that constitute the present system, so-called because they are all formed on the present stem and all look at time from the absolute perspective of the present. In Latin, as in English, there are three other tenses, the perfect, the future perfect, and the pluperfect, which constitute the PERFECT SYSTEM, so-called because they are formed on a perfect (active or passive) stem and look at time from a somewhat different perspective.

Learning the forms for these three tenses in the active voice (the perfect passive system is taken up in Capvt XIX) is an easy matter, since verbs of all conjugations follow the same simple rule: perfect active stem + endings.

Principal Parts

To identify the perfect active stem of a Latin verb you must know the verb's principal parts, just as you must know the principal parts of an English verb if you want to use English correctly. As you have seen from your vocabulary study, most regular Latin verbs have four principal parts, as illustrated by laudō:

1. Present Active Indicative: laúdō, I praise
2. Present Active Infinitive: laudā́re, to praise
3. Perfect Active Indicative: laudā́vī, I praised, have praised
4. Perfect Passive Participle: laudā́tum, praised, having been praised

The principal parts of the other verbs that have appeared in the paradigms are as follows:

Pres. Indic.	Pres. Infin.	Perf. Indic.	Perf. Pass. Partic.
móneō	monḗre	mónuī, I advised	mónitum, (having been) advised
ágō	ágere	ḗgī, I led	ā́ctum, (having been) led cápiō	cápere	cḗpī, I took	cáptum, (having been) taken

aúdiō	audīre	audīvī, I heard	audītum, (having been) heard sum	ésse	fúī, I was	futūrum, about to be póssum	pósse	pótuī, I was able	———

The first two principal parts, necessary for conjugating a verb in the present system, have been dealt with extensively already. As the first person singular of the perfect active indicative, which always ends in -ī, a verb's third principal part is analogous to its first (which is, of course, the first person singular of the present active indicative and regularly ends in -ō). The fourth principal part, while given in its neuter form in this book, is for regular transitive verbs the perfect passive participle, a fully declinable verbal adjective of the -us/-a/-um variety (laudātus, -a, -um, etc.—some uses of participles will be explained in Capita XIX and XXIII–XXIV). Verbs lacking a perfect passive participle substitute the accusative supine (see Capvt XXXVIII), and some verbs like sum and other intransitives substitute a future active participle (e.g., futūrum = futūrus, -a, -um), while others like possum have no fourth principal part at all.

While the first and second principal parts for regular verbs follow a very consistent pattern, there are no simple rules to cover the many variations in the third and fourth principal parts (though, as we have seen, most first conjugation verbs do follow the -ō/-āre/-āvī/-ātum pattern of laudō, and many second and fourth conjugation verbs follow the patterns of moneō and audiō); hence, as pointed out earlier, it is crucial to memorize all the principal parts in the vocabulary entry for each verb by both saying them aloud and writing them out. Your knowledge of English will help you in this memorization, since there are many derivatives from both the present stem and the perfect participial stem, as you have already discovered (e.g., "docile" and "doctor," "agent" and "action," etc.).

The Perfect Active Stem

Once you know a verb's principal parts, finding the PERFECT ACTIVE STEM is easy: simply drop the final -ī which characterizes the third principal part of every verb. The stems for the sample verbs in the preceding list are: laudāv-, monu-, ēg-, cēp-, audīv-, fu-, and potu-. The following paradigms show you the endings for the three perfect system tenses.

Perfect Active Indicative

	I praised, have praised	I led, have led	I was, have been	Endings
	1. laudāv-ī	ēg-ī	fú-ī	-ī
Sg.	2. laudāv-ístī	ēg-ístī	fu-ístī	-istī
	3. laudāv-it	ēg-it	fú-it	-it
	1. laudāvimus	ēgimus	fúimus	-imus
Pl.	2. laudāvístis	ēgístis	fuístis	-istis
	3. laudāvḗrunt	ēgḗrunt	fuḗrunt	-ērunt, -ēre

	Pluperfect Active Indicative		Future Perfect Active Indicative
	I had praised	I had been	I shall have praised	I shall have been
	1. laudāv-eram	fú-eram	laudāv-erō	fú-erō
Sg.	2. laudāv-erās	fú-erās	laudāv-eris	fú-eris
	3. laudāv-erat	fú-erat	laudāv-erit	fú-erit
	1. laudāverāmus	fuerāmus	laudāvérimus	fuérimus
Pl.	2. laudāverātis	fuerātis	laudāvéritis	fuéritis
	3. laudāverant	fúerant	laudāverint	fúerint

The perfect endings (-ī, -istī, -it, etc.) are new and must be memorized; the alternate ending -ēre (laudāvēre, ēgēre, fuēre), while fairly common, especially in Latin poetry, appears only once or twice in this book. The pluperfect is in effect the perfect stem + eram, the imperfect of sum. The future perfect is in effect the perfect stem + erō, the future of sum, except that the third person plural is -erint, not -erunt.

Usage, Translation, and Distinction from the Imperfect

One might ask why there are more than three tenses, since there are only three times, i.e., the past, the present, and the future. Simply put, the perfect system presents a different way of looking at time, focusing on actions that, at some given point, have been completed (perfectum, perfect, is from perficiō, perficere, perfēcī, perfectum, to do thoroughly, complete), and typically considering the consequences of the completed action. The following chart illustrates how this works in English, which employs the auxiliary verbs "had," "has," and "will have" (the past, present, and future tenses of "to have") to convey the sense of completed actions, and the concept in Latin is comparable:

Pluperfect	Perfect	Future Perfect
I had studied this (previously)	I have studied this (already)	I will have studied (by tomorrow)
\	\	\
and so I understood it	and so I understand it	and so I will understand it
Past	Present	Future

The pluperfect (plūperfectum = plūs quam perfectum, more than complete), sometimes called the PAST PERFECT, describes an action completed in the distant past and with consequences on some action in the more recent past: "you had studied the material previously, and so by last Friday you already understood it well." The future perfect (futūrum perfectum) describes an act that will have been completed at some future point and its consequences on a more distant point in the future: "by this weekend you will have studied the material, and so you will understand it thoroughly for Monday's quiz." The perfect tense describes a completed act that has consequences for the present (and hence is sometimes called the "present perfect"): "by now you have studied this chapter thoughtfully, and so you understand the concepts." You can see from these examples how the three perfect system tenses parallel the three tenses of the present system; in the latter we simply look at events of the past, present, or future, while in the former we look at completed actions with an eye to their consequences on some subsequent time in the past, present, or future.

The perfect tense, though often functioning as a pure PRESENT PERFECT, sometimes serves as a SIMPLE PAST TENSE; thus puer amīcum monuit can in some contexts, when not thinking specifically of the action's consequences, mean simply the boy warned his friend. While the imperfect tense (imperfectum, not completed, i.e., continuing) is like a video of the past, the perfect tense is more like a still photograph: with the imperfect the action is viewed as going on, repeated, or habitual, so a more exact translation of puer amīcum monēbat, depending upon the context, might be the boy was warning/kept warning/used to warn his friend. The more static perfect tense looks back at an action as a single, completed event (he warned his friend once), or as an event that, although completed, has consequences for the present; in this latter case, you should translate with the auxiliary "has/have" (he has warned his friend, and so his friend is now prepared).

SYNOPSIS

To test your ability to conjugate a Latin verb completely, you may be asked to provide a labeled SYNOPSIS of the verb in a specified person and number, in lieu of writing out all of the verb's forms. Following is a sample third person singular synopsis of agō in the indicative mood, active voice:

	Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut. Perf.	Pluperf.
Lat.	ágit	áget	agḗbat	ḗgit	ḗgerit	ḗgerat
Eng.	he drives	he will drive	he was driving	he has driven	he will have driven	he had driven

VOCĀBVLA

Be sure to distinguish between pater, father, in this new list and patria, fatherland, learned previously; and don't give the s in Caesar the "z" sound it has in English. As you study this new vocabulary, you should also check your mastery of words learned in Capita I–XI; for review you can use vocabulary cards or cumulative vocabulary lists (available at www.wheelockslatin.com—or make your own), but in memorizing this new list, be sure to listen to the CDs or the online audio, and . . . audī et prōnūntiā! After memorizing this list, practice with its three new verbs by writing out a synopsis, each in a different person and number, then check your work by comparing the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 501.

adulēscēns, adulēscéntis, m. and f., young man or woman (adolescent, adolescence, adult; cf. adulēscentia) ánnus, ánnī, m., year (annals, anniversary, annuity, annual, biennial, perennial, centennial, millennium, superannuated)
Ásia, Ásiae, f., Asia, commonly referring to Asia Minor (see Map 3) Caésar, Caésaris, m., Caesar (Caesarian, Caesarism, kaiser, czar, tsar) mā́ter, mā́tris, f., mother (maternal, maternity, matriarchy, matrimony, matricide, matriculate, matrilineal, matrix, matron) médicus, médicī, m., and médica, médicae, f., doctor, physician (medic, medical, medicate, medicine, medicinal) páter, pátris, m., father (paternal, paternity, patrician, patrimony, patron, patronage, patronize, patter, padre, père; cf. patria) patiéntia, patiéntiae, f., suffering; (patience) endurance (patient, impatient) prīncípium, prīncípiī, n., beginning (principal, principle) acérbus, acérba, acérbum, harsh, bitter, ~~grievous~~ (acerbic, acerbity, exacerbate) prō, prep. + abl., in front of, before, on behalf of, for the sake of, in return for, instead of, ~~for, as;~~ also as prefix (pros and cons; for pro- as a prefix, see App., p. 488) díū, adv., long, for a long time nūper, adv., recently āmíttō, āmíttere, āmīsī, āmíssum, to send away; lose, let go (amissible; cf. omit, omission) cádō, cádere, cécidī, cāsūrum, to fall (cadence, case, casual, cascade, chance, accident, incident, decadence, decay, deciduous) créō, creā́re, creā́vī, creā́tum, to create (creation, creativity, creature, procreate)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After learning the new paradigms and vocabulary and testing yourself with some of the Self-Tutorial Exercises, scan through the following readings for examples of perfect system verbs, identifying the tense, number, and person of each. Listen to the CDs, if you have them, and read each sentence and passage aloud. In translating the perfect tense, remember the options: e.g., which is the better choice for āmīsit in the selection "Pliny Writes to Marcellinus" the simple past tense "lost" or the pure present perfect "has lost," and why?

9. Rēgēs Rōmam ā prīncipiō habuēre; lībertātem Lūcius Brūtus Rōmānīs dedit. (Tacitus.—ā + abl., from.–habuēre: though this may resemble an infin., it is one of the newly introduced perf. system forms.)

10. Sub Caesare autem lībertātem perdidimus. (Laberius.—perdō, -ere, -didī, -ditum, to destroy, lose; "perdition," "perdue.")
11. Quandō lībertās ceciderit, nēmō līberē dīcere audēbit. (Publilius Syrus.)

Pliny Writes to Marcellinus about the Death of Fundanus' Daughter

Salvē, Marcellīne! Haec tibi scrībō dē Fundānō, amīcō nostrō, quod is fīliam cāram et bellam āmīsit. Illa puella nōn XIII annōs vīxerat, sed nātūra eī multam sapientiam dederat. Quoniam illa autem magnōs animōs habuit, morbum nimis malum cum patientiā tolerāvit. Nunc, mī amīce, mitte Fundānō nostrō litterās dē fortūnā acerbā fīliae eius. Valē.

Pliny Ep. 5.16 (for a longer, unadapted excerpt, see Locī Im. XL): Pliny the Younger (Gaius Plinius Caecilius Secundus, ca. A.D. 61–112) was a senator, consul, and provincial governor, and an important literary figure during the reigns of Domitian, Nerva, and Trajan. Among his surviving works are 10 volumes of letters that provide us with invaluable insights into the society and politics of the period.—XIII annōs, for 13 years, ACC. QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is (grimly) humorous about Diaulus' career change?—how were his two professions strikingly different, and yet alike? Comment on the different word order strategies employed in each verse; what is "suspenseful" in the arrangement of line 1? Lūcius pīnxit.

CIL 4.7535: Of the thousands of wall paintings in Pompeii, only those in the outside dining area of the large and richly decorated house of Octavius Quartio (Reg. II, Ins. 5.2, on the Via dell'Abbondanza) are signed by the artist; on a bench situated near his murals of Narcissus, in one panel, and of Pyramus and Thisbe, in another, Lucius painted his own signature about 5″ wide in bold white letters on a red background.—pingō, -ere, pīnxī, pictum, to decorate with color, paint (a picture); "picture," "depict."

Further examples of how your knowledge of Eng. words can assist in learning the principal parts of Lat. verbs, as well as vice-versa:

Latin Verb	Pres. Stem in Eng. Word	Perf. Partic. Stem in Eng. Word
videō	provide (vidēre)	provision (vīsum)
maneō	permanent (manēre)	mansion (mānsum)
vīvō	revive (vīvere)	victuals (vīctum)
sentiō	sentiment (sentīre)	sense (sēnsum)
veniō	intervene (venīre)	intervention (ventum)
faciō	facile (facere)	fact (factum)

The connection between Lat. pater and patria (father-land) is obvious. However, although Eng. "patriarch," "patriot," and "patronymic" contain the stem patr-, which is meaningful to one who knows the Lat. words, nevertheless these Eng. words are actually derived from Gk., in which the stem patr- is cognate with the Lat. stem; cf. Gk. patḗr, father, pátrā or patrís, fatherland, patriá, lineage.

And here are several other derivatives from fundere, the root verb of prō-fundere in S.A. 8: confound, confuse, effuse, effusive, fuse, fusion, refund, transfusion.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulae discipulīque cārī! As we saw in S. A. 2 above, Caesar is said to have proclaimed vēnī, vīdī, vīcī in propagandizing his victory at Zela—a good example of the perfect tense, a "snapshot" of the action whose rapid conclusion the general wanted to emphasize. There are now some 20th-cent. variants on this boast: from the mall-masters, VENI, VIDI, VISA, "I came, I saw, I shopped!" and from the vegetarians, VENI, VIDI, VEGI, "I came, I saw, I had a salad"; and how about VENI, VIDI, VELCRO, "I came, I saw, I stuck around"? Are you groaning?!!—but remember, patientia est virtūs, and there may yet be worse to come: meantime, rīdēte (from rīdēre, to smile) et valēte!

CAPVT XIII

Reflexive Pronouns and Possessives; Intensive Pronoun

GRAMMATICA

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS differ from other pronouns in that they are used ordinarily only in the predicate and refer back to the subject. "Reflexive" derives from reflectō, -ere, -flexī, -flexum, to bend back: reflexive pronouns "bend back" to the subject, i.e., they "reflect" or refer to the subject. Here are some English examples, contrasted with personal pronouns:

Reflexive Pronouns	Personal Pronouns
I praised myself.	You praised me.
Cicero praised himself.	Cicero praised him (Caesar).

Declension of Reflexives

Since reflexive pronouns refer to the subject, they cannot be the subject (except, as you will see in Capvt XXV, as accusative subject of an infinitive phrase, as in English "He considered himself to be a good student"), and hence they have no nominative case. Otherwise, the declension of the reflexives of the first and the second persons is the same as that of the corresponding personal pronouns.

The third person reflexive pronoun, however, has its own peculiar forms; these are easily recognizable because, as seen from the following chart, they are identical to the singular of tū, except that the nominative is lacking and the forms begin with s- rather than t-. Note also that the singular and plural are identical, or, to put it another way, singular and plural were not distinguished and did not need to be, since reflexives in fact "reflect" the number (as well as the gender) of the subject; e.g., sē is easily understood to mean herself in the sentence fēmina dē sē cōgitābat

(the woman was thinking about herself) and themselves in the sentence virī dē sē cōgitābant (the men were thinking about themselves).

	1st Pers.	2nd Pers.	3rd Pers.
Singular
Nom.	—	—	—
Gen.	méī (of myself)	túī	súī (of himself, herself, itself)
Dat.	míhi (to/for myself)	tíbi	síbi (to/for himself, etc.)
Acc.	mē (myself)	tē	sē (himself, herself, itself)
Abl.	mē (by/with/from myself)	tē	sē (by/with/from himself, etc.)
Plural
Nom.	—	—	—
Gen.	nóstrī (of ourselves)	véstrī	súī (of themselves)
Dat.	nṓbīs (to/for ourselves)	vṓbīs	síbi (to/for themselves)
Acc.	nōs (ourselves)	vōs	sē (themselves)
Abl.	nṓbīs (by/with/from ourselves)	vṓbīs	sē (by/with/from themselves)

Comparison of First and Second Person Reflexive and Personal Pronouns

1. Tū tē laudāvistī. *You praised yourself.
2. Cicerō tē laudāvit. *Cicero praised you.
3. Nōs laudāvimus *nōs. *We praised ourselves.
4. Cicerō nōs laudāvit. *Cicero praised us.
5. Ego mihi litterās scrīpsī. *I wrote a letter to myself.
6. Cicerō mihi litterās scrīpsit. *Cicero wrote a letter to me.

Comparison of Third Person Reflexive and Personal Pronouns

1. Cicerō sē laudāvit. *Cicero praised himself.
2. Cicerō eum laudāvit. *Cicero praised him (e.g., Caesar).
3. Rōmānī sē laudāvērunt. *The Romans praised themselves.
4. Rōmānī eōs laudāvērunt. *The Romans praised them (e.g., the Greeks).
5. Puella sē servāvit. *The girl saved herself.
6. Puella eam servāvit. *The girl saved her (i.e., another girl).

REFLEXIVE POSSESSIVE ADJECTIVES

The REFLEXIVE POSSESSIVE ADJECTIVES of the first and the second persons are identical with the regular possessives already familiar to you: meus, tuus, noster, vester (i.e., my, my own; your, your own; etc.): Meum librum habēs; you have my book. Meum librum habeō; I have my own book.

The third person reflexive possessive, however, is a new word, suus, sua, suum, his (own), her (own), its (own), their (own). While easily declined (just like tuus, -a, -um, a regular first/second declension adjective), some important points must be kept in mind regarding the word's usage and translation. First, like any adjective, suus, -a, -um, must agree with the noun it modifies in number, gender, and case. Its English translation, however, like that of the reflexive pronoun, must naturally reflect the gender and number of the subject to which it refers; e.g., vir fīlium suum laudat, the man praises his (own) son, vs. fēmina fīlium suum laudat, the woman praises her (own) son, and virī patriam suam laudant, the men praise their (own) country. Finally, the reflexive possessive adjective suus, -a, -um must be carefully distinguished from the nonreflexive possessive genitives eius, eōrum, eārum (his/her, their: see Capvt XI), which refer to some person(s) other than the subject.

1. Cicerō amīcum suum laudāvit. Cicero praised his (own) friend.
2. Cicerō amīcum eius laudāvit. Cicero praised his (Caesar's) friend.
3. Rōmānī amīcum suum laudāvērunt. The Romans praised their (own) friend.
4. Rōmānī amīcum eōrum laudāvērunt. The Romans praised their (the Greeks') friend.
5. Fēmina amīcīs suīs litterās scrīpsit. The woman wrote a letter to her (own) friends.
6. Fēmina amīcīs eius litterās scrīpsit. The woman wrote a letter to his (or her, i.e., someone else's) friends.
7. Fēmina amīcīs eōrum litterās scrīpsit. The woman wrote a letter to their (some other persons') friends.

THE INTENSIVE PRONOUN Ipse, ipsa, ipsum

The INTENSIVE PRONOUN ipse, ipsa, ipsum follows the declensional pattern of the demonstratives in the genitive and the dative singular (i.e., gen. ipsīus, ipsīus, ipsīus, dat. ipsī, ipsī, ipsī: see App., p. 497); otherwise, it is like magnus, -a, -um. The Romans used the intensive pronoun to emphasize any noun or pronoun in either the subject or the predicate of a sentence; consequently its possible translations include myself/ourselves (1st pers.), yourself/yourselves (2nd pers.), and himself/herself/itself/themselves (3rd pers.), as well as the very and the actual, as illustrated in the following examples:

Cicerō ipse mē laudāvit. Cicero himself praised me.
Cicerō mē ipsum laudāvit. Cicero praised me myself (i.e., actually praised me)
Ipse* amīcum eius laudāvī. I myself praised his friend.
Fīlia vōbīs ipsīs litterās scrīpsit. Your daughter wrote a letter to you yourselves.
Cicerō litterās ipsās Caesaris vīdit. Cicero saw Caesar's letter itself (i.e., Caesar's actual letter).

VOCĀBVLA

This chapter's vocabulary list introduces another noun, dīvitiae, which, like īnsidiae in Capvt VI and others you'll encounter later on, has plural forms with essentially singular meaning—though in this case the singular, wealth, is a "collective," implying amassed riches; language has lots of twists and turns like this, all of them intriguing. Per, as you will see, is another preposition that turns up frequently, in a variety of forms, as a prefix, both in Latin words and in such English derivatives as "perfect," "perspire," and "pellucid"; review again the several common Latin prefixes and suffixes listed in "Some Etymological Aids," in the App., p. 485–89. Ōlim, with its seemingly opposite meanings of long ago and some day (in the future), is related to ille and like it refers to something distant, i.e., a time in either the distant past or the distant future. Once you have memorized the new vocabulary, practice by writing out the declension of ipsum factum and doing a synopsis of one of the newly introduced verbs, then compare your work with the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 497 and 501.

dīvítiae, dīvítiārum, f. pl., riches, wealth

fáctum, fáctī, n., deed, act, achievement (fact, factual, faction, feat; cf. faciō) sígnum, sígnī, n., sign, signal, indication; seal (assign, consign, countersign, design, ensign, insignia, resign, seal, signet) ípse, ípsa, ípsum, intensive pron., myself, yourself, himself, herself, itself, etc., the very, the actual (ipso facto, solipsistic) quísque, quídque (gen. cuiúsque; dat. cuíque), indefinite pron., each one, each person, each thing

súī, reflexive pron. of 3rd pers., himself, herself, itself, themselves (suicide, per se) dóctus, dócta, dóctum, taught, learned, skilled (doctor, doctorate, doctrine, indoctrinate; cf. doceō) fortūnātus, fortūnāta, fortūnātum, lucky, fortunate, happy (unfortunate; cf. fortūna) súus, súa súum, reflexive possessive adj. of 3rd pers., his own, her own, its own, their own (sui generis) nam, conj., for

ánte, prep. + acc., before (in place or time), in front of; adv., before, previously; not to be confused with Greek anti, against (antebellum, antedate, ante-room, anterior, antediluvian, A.M. = ante merīdiem/"before midday," advance, advantage)

per, prep. + acc., through; with reflexive pron., by; per- (assimilated to pel- before forms beginning with l-), as a prefix, through, through and through = thoroughly, completely, very (perchance, perforce, perhaps, perceive, perfect, perspire, percolate, percussion, perchloride, pellucid)

ōlim, adv., once (upon a time), long ago, formerly; some day, in the future

álō, álere, áluī, áltum, to nourish, support, sustain, increase; cherish (aliment, alimentary, alimony, coalesce, adolescence; the adj. altus, -a, -um, = tall, high, because what is "nourished" grows) dīligō, dīlígere, dīlēxī, dīlēctum, to esteem, love (diligent, diligence) iúngō, iúngere, iūnxī, iūnctum, to join (join, joint, junction, juncture, adjunct, conjunction, enjoin, injunction, subjunctive) stō, stāre, stétī, státum, to stand, stand still or firm (stable, state, station, statue, stature, statute, establish, instant, instate, reinstate, stay)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Before attempting these readings, remember to test your mastery of the new material by writing out your answers to several of the Self-Tutorial Exercises (p. 421–22), including some of the translations, and then checking your work against the Answer Key (p. 455). Next listen to the readings, if you have the CDs, read them aloud once or twice for comprehension, and then write out your translations; for practice with the new grammar, scan through the readings for all the reflexives and intensives and identify the number, gender, case, and use of each. Translation tips: when an intensive modifies a noun or pronoun, simply translate accordingly, e.g., mē ipsum in Ex. 3 means me myself, but when there is no modified noun/pronoun, you must supply "he, she, they," etc., e.g., in Ex. 6 ipsī is clearly masculine nominative plural and must be the subject, hence they themselves or the men themselves. In the case of a reflexive possessive, when the antecedent is clear from the context and no particular emphasis is intended, you may sometimes omit "own" for more natural English idiom; in Ex. 10, e.g., it is acceptable to translate litterās suās simply as her letter, understanding of course that the reference is to her own, not someone else's, letter.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

15. Cicero, therefore, will never join his (Caesar's) name with his own.
16. Cicero always esteemed himself and even you esteem yourself.
17. Cicero used to praise his own books and I now praise my own books.
18. The consul Cicero himself had never seen his (Caesar's) book.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Ipse ad eōs contendēbat equitēsque ante sē mīsit. (Caesar.—contendō, -ere, to hasten; "contender," "contention."—eques, equitis, m., horseman; "equestrian"; cf. equus, horse.)
2. Ipsī nihil per sē sine eō facere potuērunt. (Cicero.)
3. Ipse signum suum et litterās suās ā prīncipiō recognōvit. (Cicero.—recognōscō, -ere, -cognōvī, -cognitum, to recognize; "recognizance," "reconnaissance.")
4. Quisque ipse sē dīligit, quod quisque per sē sibi cārus est. (Cicero.)
5. Ex vitiō alterīus sapiēns ēmendat suum. (*Publilius Syrus.—sapiēns, -entis, m., wise man, philosopher; "savant," "homo sapiens."—ēmendāre, to correct; "amend," "emend," "mend.")
6. Recēde in tē ipsum. (*Seneca.—recēdō, -ere, to withdraw; "recede," "recess.")
7. Animus sē ipse alit. (*Seneca.)
8. Homō doctus in sē semper dīvitiās habet. (Phaedrus.)

Alexander the Great and the Power of Literature

Magnus ille Alexander multōs scrīptōrēs factōrum suōrum sēcum semper habēbat. Is enim ante tumulum Achillis ōlim stetit et dīxit haec verba: "Fuistī fortūnātus, Ō adulēscēns, quod Homērum laudātōrem virtūtis tuae invēnistī." Et vērē! Nam, sine Īliade illā, īdem tumulus et corpus eius et nōmen obruere potuit. Nihil corpus hūmānum cōnservāre potest; sed litterae magnae nōmen virī magnī saepe cōnservāre possunt.

Cicero Arch. 10.24: The Prō Archiā, In Defense of Archias, is one of the best known of Cicero's dozens of surviving speeches; in it Cicero defended his friend, the Greek poet Archias, against legal challenges to his Roman citizenship status. As just one means of persuading the court, Cicero spoke eloquently on the benefits that poets and poetry could provide a society and its citizens, including its ruling class. Alexander the Great, son of Philip of Macedon, became king when his father died in 336 and by the time of his own premature death in 323 at the age of 33 had led his Macedonian army in the conquest of Greece, much of the near east, and Egypt, marching even into India. He had been educated by Aristotle and himself clearly understood the power of poetry, and of the written word in general, as this anecdote makes clear. —ille: what special sense of the demonstrative is particularly apt here, and in the phrase Īliade illā below as well?—tumulus, -ī, m., tomb, grave; "tumulus," "tumular."—sē: here, as often, "-self" can be omitted, both for more natural Eng. idiom and because the reflexive force is sufficiently clear from the context.—Achillēs, -lis, m.—Homērus, -ī. m.—laudātor, -tōris, m., lit., one who praises (see Capvt VIII, Latīna Est Gaudium, for the basic sense of nouns ending in -or), eulogist, chronicler; "laud," "laudatory." —vērē: adv. of vērus; "verify," "verity."—Īlias, -adis, f., Iliad.—et . . . et: take careful note of what the conjunctions here must be linking; the potential for misconstruing derives from the fact that corpus is an ambiguous form, but the ambiguity is resolved with the sg. verb potuit.—obruō, -ere, to overwhelm, bury; "ruin," "ruination."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Explain what Alexander felt had made Achilles so fortunate, despite his legendary early death. What point does Cicero draw from this anecdote, how was it appropriate to his own political position, and would a U.S. senator today likely agree?

The Authority of a Teacher's Opinion

Magistrī bonī discipulīs sententiās suās nōn semper dīcere dēbent. Discipulī Pȳthagorae in disputātiōnibus saepe dīcēbant: "Ipse dīxit!" Pȳthagorās, eōrum magister philosophiae, erat "ipse": sententiae eius etiam sine ratiōne valuērunt. In philosophiā autem ratiō sōla, nōn sententia, valēre dēbet.

Cicero Nat. D. 1.5.10: The Dē Nātūrā Deōrum (whose Lat. title you can easily translate) was one of three religious treatises (the others being Dē Fātō, On Fate, and Dē Dīvinātiōne, On Divination) authored by Cicero in 45–44 B.C. and dealing with the major views then prevalent of the nature of the gods (Cicero himself believed in the existence of a divine being), the validity of divination (which he rejected), and the free will/determinism debate (in which he argued for the former). In this passage he comments on dogmatism and the fallacy of arguments based on an "expert's" authority.—Pȳthagorās, -ae, m.; Pythagoras was a 6th cent. B.C. Greek scientist, mathematician, philosopher, and religious leader known for his doctrine of the transmigration of souls into other humans, animals, and plants, as well as such discoveries as the Pythagorean theorem and theories of musical harmonies.—disputātiō, -ōnis, f., argument, debate; "disputable," "disputation."—ipse dīxit: sc. id as direct obj.

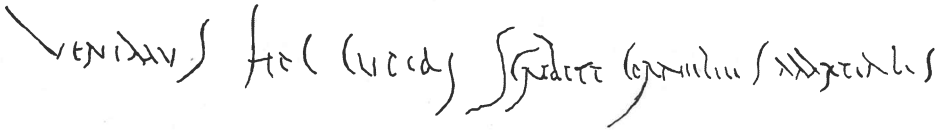
QVAESTIŌNĒS: On what basis does Cicero criticize Pythagoras and, less directly, his followers as well? Have you ever had a teacher yourself whose "authority" in a sense diminished the true effectiveness of his or her teaching?

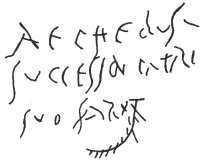
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



"Vēnimus hōc cupidī!" Scrībit{t} Cornēlius Mārtiālis.

CIL 4.8891 (Reg. III, Ins. 5): The first sentence of this graffito, written near the entrance to a shop, is the opening of an amatory poem found in several other locations in Pompeii (e.g., CIL 4.1227 and 6697); the meter is ELEGIAC COUPLET, so we know the verb must be vēnimus and not venīmus: what are the two different tenses? The scribbler was so pleased with recalling and writing out this half verse that he signed his work—unfortunately misspelling the verb scrībit: remember that the brackets {. . .} are conventionally employed to indicate letters added to a word's spelling in error.—hōc (more commonly hūc), adv., to this place, hither (related to hic, haec, hoc).—cupidus, -a, -um, desirous, eager, fond; "Cupid," "cupidity."

Aephēbus Successō patrī suō salūt(em).



CIL 4.4753: Inscribed by a lad to his dad, on a column in the house of L. Cissonius Secundus (Reg. VII, Ins. 7) ; both names are cognomina, or aephēbus (more often spelled ephēbus), -ī, m., may just be the common noun = boy, young man.—Successō: the end of the name is not quite legible and illustrates one sort of challenge faced by editors working with graffiti; CIL's editors think the writer first wrote -N (an odd mistake), then corrected it to -O; but it has also been suggested that the correct reading, with the last three letters squeezed together, may be SVCCESSORI, dat. of Successor (also a Roman cognomen).—salūtem: if you do not recall the meaning, see CIL 4.4742 in Capvt VIII. Though a tad sloppy writing his father's name, the young fellow did embellish the tail of his T with a decorative flourish—ever do something like that when you were signing a greeting card, maybe even a Father's Day card?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! If you've spent much time in court, or even reading John Grisham novels, you've doubtless encountered some legal Latin. Ipse turns up more than once in the lawyer's lexicon: there's ipsō factō, by that very fact; ipsō jūre (classical iūre), by the law itself; and rēs ipsa loquitur, the matter speaks for itself. And from the third person reflexive possessive there's suī jūris (iūris), literally of his own right, i.e., legally competent to manage one's own affairs. Not a legal term, but from the reflexive and common in English is suī generis, literally of his/her/its own kind (from genus, generis), used of a person or thing that is unique. Another common English phrase, seen in the above reading on Pythagoras, is ipse dīxit, used of any dogmatic or arbitrary statement; likewise from the intensive pronoun are the phrase ipsissima verba, the very words (of a person being quoted), the medical term "ipsilateral," meaning "on or affecting the same side of the body" (from latus, lateris, n., side), and the word "solipsism," for the philosophical theory that the self alone is the only reality or that it conditions our perception of reality. By now you've had all the vocabulary needed to translate the famous quotation from Constantine, in hōc signō vincēs (under this standard—i.e., the cross—you shall prevail), seen in more recent decades on a well-known brand of cigarettes, where, freely, it means, You'll win with this brand (but would the U.S. Surgeon General agree?). Well, tempus iterum fūgit: valēte!

CAPVT XIV

I-Stem Nouns of the Third Declension; Ablatives of Means, Accompaniment, and Manner

GRAMMATICA

THIRD DECLENSION i-STEM NOUNS

Some third declension nouns have a characteristic i in certain case endings and are thus called I-STEM NOUNS, as distinct from those introduced in Capvt VII, ~~which are sometimes called CONSONANT STEMS.~~ As you will see from the following paradigms, the only new ending shared by all i-stems is the genitive plural in -ium rather than simply -um; neuters have, in addition, -ī instead of -e in the ablative singular and -ia instead of -a in the nominative, accusative, and vocative plural; vīs is a common irregular i-stem and should be memorized (its genitive and dative singular forms, given in parentheses, are rarely used).

A.	rḗgibus	cīvibus	nūbibus	úrbibus	máribus	vī́ribus

An alternate masculine and feminine accusative plural ending in -īs (e.g., cīvīs for cīvēs), though rarely appearing in this book, was frequently employed throughout Republican literature and into the Augustan period and should be remembered.

Besides learning these few new endings, it is also important to be able to recognize that a noun is an i-stem when you encounter it in a vocabulary list or a reading. The following three rules will enable you to do so and should be memorized.

Masculine and Feminine i-Stems

1. Most masculine and feminine nouns that have a nominative singular in -is or -ēs and the same number of syllables in both the nominative and genitive (and hence called "parisyllabic," from pār, equal, + syllaba).

hostis, hostis, m.; gen. pl. hostium; enemy nāvis, nāvis, f.; nāvium; ship mōlēs, mōlis, f.; mōlium; mass, structure cīvis, cīvis, and nūbēs, nūbis, above

2. Masculine and (chiefly) feminine nouns with a nominative singular in -s or -x which have a base ending in two consonants; most, like the following, have monosyllabic nominatives.

ars, art-is, f.; artium; art, skill dēns, dent-is, m.; dentium; tooth nox, noct-is, f.; noctium; night
urbs, urb-is, above

Again, the only ending ordinarily distinguishing these masculine and feminine nouns from consonant stems is the genitive plural in -ium.

Neuter i-Stems

3. Neuter nouns with a nominative singular ending in -al, -ar, or -e have the characteristic i not only in the genitive plural -ium but also in the ablative singular -ī and the nominative/accusative/vocative plural -ia.

animal, animālis, n., animal exemplar, exemplāris, n., model, pattern, original

Irregular Vīs

The common irregular i-stem vīs must be memorized and carefully distinguished from vir. Note that the characteristic long ī appears in most forms of vīs, vs. the short i of vir; contrast the following: virī, virōs, vīrēs, virīs, vīrium, virum, vīribus.

ABLATIVE CASE USES

You have frequently encountered in the readings ablative nouns and pronouns employed simply as objects of prepositions; there are several more distinct uses of the ablative, some requiring a preposition and some not. Following are three of the most common, and others will be introduced in later chapters, so you may wish to maintain a list in your notebook or computer file, with the name, a definition, and examples for each (you should keep similar lists for all the other cases as well).

Ablative of Means or Instrument

As you continue to learn new syntactical constructions, always keep in mind these three things: DEFINITION (what is it?), RECOGNITION (how do I recognize one when I see it in a sentence), TRANSLATION (how do I translate it into English?). For the ABLATIVE OF MEANS/INSTRUMENT, a usage you have actually already encountered a few times in the readings, it's as simple as this:

Definition: a noun or pronoun that answers the question "by means of what (instrument)?/by what?/with what?" is the action of the verb performed.

Recognition: a noun/pronoun in the ablative without a preposition.

Translation: Supply the English prepositions by (means of), with.

Litterās stilō scrīpsit. He wrote the letter with a pencil (stilus, -ī).
Cīvēs pecūniā vīcit. He conquered the citizens with/by money.
Id meīs oculīs vīdī. I saw it with my own eyes.
Suīs labōribus urbem cōnservāvit. By his own labors he saved the city.

Ablatives of Accompaniment and Manner

You have also already encountered the ABLATIVE OF ACCOMPANIMENT (DEFINITION: an ablative noun/pronoun, usually a person, that answers the question "in whose company/with whom is the action performed"; RECOGNITION: an ablative with the preposition cum; TRANSLATION: translate cum as "with," followed by the noun/pronoun, e.g., cum agricolā labōrat, he is working with the farmer) and the ABLATIVE OF MANNER (DEF.: a noun that answers the question "how/in what manner" is the action performed; REC.: cum + an ablative noun, regularly an abstract noun; TRANS.: e.g., cum cūrā labōrat, she works with care/carefully).

Cum amīcīs vēnērunt. They came with friends (= with whom?)
Cum celeritāte vēnērunt. They came with speed (= how?; speedily.—celeritās, -tātis).
Id cum eīs fēcit. He did it with them (= with whom?).
Id cum virtūte fēcit. He did it with courage (= how?; courageously).

Each of these three constructions may be translated using the English preposition "with" (among other possibilities), but the three usages are conceptually different and must be distinguished. Recall that ablatives generally function adverbially, telling you something about the action of the verb; in these three instances they tell you, respectively, by what means the action was performed, with whom the action was performed, and in what manner the action was performed. The only challenge comes in translating from English to Latin: if with tells with whom or in what manner, use cum + ablative; if with tells by what means/with what instrument, use the ablative without a preposition.

VOCĀBVLA

As you learn this chapter's vocabulary (by listening and repeating aloud, right?—semper audī et prōnūntiā!), keep in mind the rules for recognizing third declension i-stems and identify those you find in this list; practice by declining at least one of each gender—or, better yet, decline some noun-adjective phrases like animal ipsum and urbs sōla—and comparing with the paradigms. A few of the nouns require special attention: cīvis, citizen, is one of a small group of nouns that can, for obvious reasons, be either feminine or masculine (another is canis, dog, "canine"); and be careful not to confuse mors with mora or mōs, or vīs with vir. The new prepositions introduced here, ā/ab and trāns, also commonly function as prefixes: see "Some Etymological Aids," App., p. 485–89.

ánimal, animālis, n., a living creature, animal (related to anima, breath, air, spirit, soul, and animus; animate, animation)

áqua, áquae, f., water (aquatic, aquarium, Aquarius, aqueduct, subaqueous, ewer, sewer, sewage, sewerage) ars, ártis, f., art, skill (artifact, artifice, artificial, artisan, artist, inert) aúris, aúris, f., ear (aural, auricle, auricular, auriform; not to be confused with "auric," "auriferous," from aurum, gold) cī̆vis, cī̆vis, m. and f., citizen (civic, civil, civilian, civility, civilize; cf. cīvitās) iūs, iūris, n., right, justice, law (jurisdiction, jurisprudence, juridical, jurist, juror, jury, just, justice, injury)

máre, máris, n., sea (marine, mariner, marinate, maritime, submarine, cormorant, rosemary, mere = Eng. cognate, archaic for "small lake")

mors, mórtis, f., death (mortal, immortal, mortify, mortgage; murder = Eng. cognate) nūbēs, nūbis, f., cloud (nubilous, nubilose, nuance)

ōs, ōris, n., mouth, face (oral, orifice, orator; cf. ōrāre, to speak, plead) pars, pártis, f., part, share; direction (party, partial, partake, participate, participle, particle, particular, partisan, partition, apart, apartment, depart)

Rŏma, Rŏmae, f., Rome (romance, romantic, romanticism; cf. Rōmānus) túrba, túrbae, f., uproar, disturbance; mob, crowd, multitude (cf. turbāre, to disturb, throw into confusion; turbid, turbulent, turbine, turbo, disturb, perturb, imperturbable, trouble) urbs, úrbis, f., city (urban, urbane, urbanity, suburb, suburban) vīs, vīs, f., force, power, violence; vīrēs, vīrium, pl., strength (vim, violate, violent; do not confuse with vir) ā (before consonants, like Eng. "a," vs. "an"), ab (before vowels or consonants), prep. + abl., away from, from; by (personal agent); frequent in compounds (aberration, abject, abrasive, absolve, abstract, abundant, abuse) trāns, prep. + acc., across; also a prefix (transport, transmit, transfer) appéllō, appellāre, appellāvī, appellātum, to speak to, address (as), call, name (appellation, appellative, appeal, appellant, appellate) cúrrō, cúrrere, cucúrrī, cúrsum, to run, rush, move quickly (current, cursive, cursory, course, coarse, discursive, incur, occur, recur) mūtō, mūtāre, mūtāvī, mūtātum, to change, alter; ~~exchange~~ (mutable, immutable, mutual, commute, permutation, transmutation, molt) téneō, tenēre, ténuī, téntum, to hold, keep, possess; ~~restrain;~~ -tineō, -ēre, -tinuī, -tentum in compounds, e.g., contineō (tenable, tenacious, tenant, tenet, tenure, tentacle, tenor, continue, content, continent, pertinent, pertinacity, lieutenant, appertain, detain, retain, sustain) vītō, vītāre, vītāvī, vītātum, to avoid, shun; not to be confused with vīvō (inevitable)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After memorizing the paradigms and vocabulary, and practicing with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, listen to the readings, if you have the CDs, read them aloud for comprehension, and then write out your translations. For practice with the new grammar, scan through the readings and, first, find all the i-stem nouns; next, find all the ablative nouns and pronouns and identify the specific usage of each (means, manner, accompaniment, or simply object of a preposition).

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Magnam partem illārum urbium post multōs annōs vī et cōnsiliō capiēbat.
2. Ante Caesaris ipsīus oculōs trāns viam cucurrimus et cum amīcīs fūgimus.
3. Nēmō vitia sua videt, sed quisque illa alterīus.
4. Monuitne nūper eōs dē vīribus illārum urbium in Asiā?
5. Ipsī autem lībertātem cīvium suōrum magnā cum cūrā aluerant.

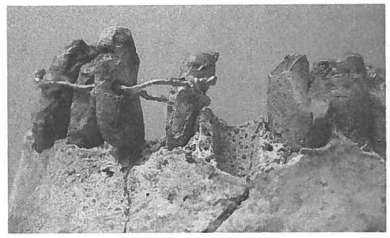
6. Nōmina multārum urbium ab nōminibus urbium antīquārum trāximus.
7. Pars cīvium dīvitiās cēpit et per urbem ad mare cucurrit.
8. Hodiē multae nūbēs in caelō sunt signum īrae acerbae deōrum.
9. Illud animal heri ibi cecidit et sē trāns terram ab agrō trahēbat.
10. That wicked tyrant did not long preserve the rights of these citizens.
11. Great is the force of the arts.
12. His wife was standing there with her (own) friends and doing that with patience.
13. Cicero felt and said the same thing concerning his own life and the nature of death.

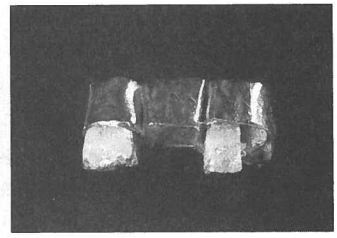
SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Et Deus aquās "maria" in prīncipiō appellāvit. (Genesis; aquās is dir. obj.; maria is an OBJECTIVE COMPLEMENT, a construction common with such verbs as appellō, to call, as in "to call him a friend," and faciō, to make, as in "to make her the leader.")
2. Terra ipsa hominēs et animālia ōlim creāvit. (Lucretius.)
3. Pān servat ovēs et magistrōs fortūnātōs ovium. (Vergil.—Pan, the god of pastures and shepherds.—ovis, ovis, f., sheep; "ovine.")
4. Parva formīca onera magna ōre trahit. (Horace.—formīca, -ae, f., ant; "formic acid," "formaldehyde."—onus, oneris, n., load; "onerous," "exonerate.")
5. Auribus teneō lupum. (*Terence.—a picturesque, proverbial statement of a dilemma, like Eng. "to have a tiger by the tail."—lupus, -ī, m., wolf; "lupus," the disease, "lupine.")
6. Ille magnam turbam clientium sēcum habet. (Horace.—cliēns, -entis, m., client, dependent; "clientage," "clientele.")
7. Hunc nēmō vī neque pecūniā superāre potuit. (Ennius.)
8. Animus eius erat ignārus artium malārum. (Sallust.—ignārus, -a, -um, ignorant; "ignorance," "ignore.")
9. Magna pars meī mortem vītābit. (Horace.—meī, partitive gen., Capvt XV.)
10. Vōs, amīcī doctī, exemplāria Graeca semper cum cūrā versāte. (Horace.—exemplar, -plāris, n., model, original; "exemplary," "example."—versāre, to turn; study; "versatile," "verse.")
11. Nōn vīribus et celeritāte corporum magna gerimus, sed sapientiā et sententiā et arte. (Cicero.—celeritās, -tātis, swiftness; "celerity," "accelerate.")
12. Istī caelum, nōn animum suum, mūtant, sī trāns mare currunt. (Horace.)

Store Teeth

Thāis habet nigrōs, niveōs Laecānia dentēs.
Quae ratiō est? Ēmptōs haec habet, illa suōs.





Ancient Roman and Etruscan dental appliances

*Martial Epig. 5.43: Yes, the Romans DID have dentures—made of ivory, wood, or even their own teeth, with roots removed, of course! Meter: elegiac couplet.—Thāis and Laecānia are names of women; take habet . . . dentēs with both these subjects.—niger, -gra, -grum, black, here, i.e., discolored and decayed; "denigrate."—niveus, -a, -um, snowy; "nivation," "niveal."—dēns, dentis, m., tooth; "dental," "trident."—quae (interrog. adj. modifying ratiō), what?—ēmptōs [dentēs], perf. pass. partic., bought, purchased; "exempt," "preempt."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Both verses of this two-liner contain an example of chiasmus—can you identify each, and comment on the intended effect? To which of the women do haec and illa refer?—if necessary, refer to the range of meanings for these demonstratives in the Capvt IX Vocābula.) If you judged your lady-friends by their teeth, which of these two would you prefer to hang out with?

Cicero Imagines the State of Rome Itself Urging Him to Punish the Catilinarian Conspirators

M. Tullī Cicerō, quid agis? Istī prō multīs factīs malīs poenās dare nunc dēbent; eōs enim ad mortem dūcere dēbēs, quod Rōmam in multa perīcula trāxērunt. Saepe Rōmānī in hāc cīvitāte etiam cīvēs morte multāvērunt. Sed nōn dēbēs cōgitāre hōs malōs esse cīvēs, nam numquam in hāc urbe prōditōrēs patriae iūra cīvium tenuērunt; hī iūra sua āmīsērunt. Populus Rōmānus tibi magnās grātiās aget, M. Tullī, sī istōs cum virtūte nunc multābis.

Cicero Cat. 1.11.27–28: A continuation of Cicero's first Catilinarian oration (see notes on "Cicero Denounces Catiline," Capvt XI); in a particularly histrionic moment, Cicero here assumes the role of the personified city of Rome, urging action against the conspirators.—M.: the standard abbreviation for the praenomen Mārcus (for the Roman system of personal nomenclature, see notes on the graffito in Capvt III).—multāre, to punish.—prōditor, -tōris, m., betrayer.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: It was illegal to execute Roman citizens without a trial. Cicero here, in a moment of high rhetorical drama, imagines the state of Rome itself urging a rationale for immediately executing Catiline's supporters (as in fact Cicero ultimately did); what exactly is that argument?–would it carry any weight in a modern American courtroom?

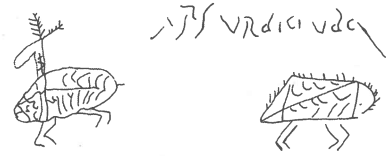
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Ars Urbicī ub(i)q(ue)!



CIL 4.4722-4723: From a wall in the courtyard of the House of the Cissonii (Reg. VII, Ins. 7: for another graffito from the same house, see CIL 4.4742 in Capvt VIII above); presumably Urbicus himself etched these drawings of a deer and a boar (?) and the two accompanying graffiti, the second of which is excerpted here—seemingly a self-gratulatory note on the ubiquitousness of his doodlings!—Ars . . . ubique: sc. est.—ubique, adv., anywhere; everywhere; often abbreviated in inscriptions, but usually as ubiq.; "ubiquity."

ETYMOLOGIA

Pan (in S.A. 3), the Greek god of woods and countryside, was endowed with the power of engendering sudden fear in people; hence from Gk. comes our word "panic" (however, "pan-," as in "Pan-American," comes from a different Gk. word meaning all.) And here are some more derivatives from dēns, dentis, in "Store Teeth": dentist, dentifrice, dentil, indent, dandelion (from Fr. dent de lion); Eng. "tooth" is cognate, as is the Gk. root dont-, as in "orthodontist," a doctor who makes your teeth "straight" (Gk. ortho-).

Following are some more Romance derivatives:

Latin	It.	Sp.	Port.	Fr.
ars, artis; artem	arte	arte	arte	art
mors, mortis; mortem	morte	muerte	morte	mort
pars, partis; partem	parte	parte	parte	parti
pēs, pedis; pedem	piede	pie	pé	pied dēns, dentis; dentem	dente	diente	dente	dent
nāvis, nāvis; nāvem	nave	nave	nave	navire, nef (nave)
nox, noctis; noctem	notte	noche	noite	nuit

Cf. Rom. arta, moarte, parte, picior (from pediculus, diminutive of pes), dinte, nava, noapte; and Old Occ. art, mǫrt, part, pę, dẹn, nau, nǫch. Clearly most of these Romance derivatives do not come from the nom. of the Lat. words. The rule is that Romance nouns and adjectives of Lat. origin generally derive from the acc.

form, often with the loss of some part of the final syllable; one exception thus far in this book has been Fr. fils, son, from Lat. fīlius, and cf. Old Fr. fiz, whence Eng. "Fitz-," natural son, e.g., Fitzgerald.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET V̄TILIS!

Quid agitis, amīcī et amīcae! Here's hoping yours is a mēns sāna in corpore sānō, in all of its partēs. You've now learned the Latin names for several body parts: oculus, auris, ōs, and dēns (remember Thais and Laecania?). Here are some others, from the caput up only, that can be easily remembered from their English derivatives: collum, -ī, neck ("collar"); nāsus, -ī, nose ("nasal"); supercilium, -ī, eyebrow (let's hope you've never raised an eyebrow superciliously at a friend); coma, -ae, hair (astronomy buffs know the constellation Coma Berenīcēs, Berenice's lock—sorry, no connection with "comb," but "comet" is related); lingua, -ae, tongue as well as language ("multilingual," "lingo," and even "linguine," which is long and flat like a tongue!). For more partēs corporis, see Capvt XX. Languages, by the way, should be learned with "oral-aural" techniques, and not just through reading and writing, so I hope you're remembering to practice your declensions and conjugations aloud, and to say salvē or tē amō to someone everyday. Looking back at the Vocābula and the new i-stems, I am reminded of ars grātiā artis, art for the sake of art, the motto of M.G.M. film studios, and B.A. and M.A. for Baccalaureus Artium and Magister Artium, academic degrees you may have or aspire to. Then there's the familiar Latin phrase, mare nostrum, which is either what the Romans used to call the Mediterranean (our sea) or, perhaps somewhat less likely, Caesar's critical comment on his unmusical equine ("my horse doesn't play the guitar"—groan!!!). Valēte!

CAPVT XV

Numerals; Genitive of the Whole; Ablative with Numerals and Ablative of Time

GRAMMATICA

NUMERALS

The commonest numerals in Latin, as in English, are the CARDINALS (from cardō, cardinis, m., hinge, the "pivotal" numbers in counting, "one, two, three. . . ," etc.) and the ORDINALS (from ōrdō, ōrdinis, m., rank, order, the numerals indicating "order" of occurrence, "first, second. . . ," etc.).

Cardinal Numerals

In Latin most cardinal numerals through 100 are indeclinable adjectives; one form is used for all cases and genders. The following, however, are declined as indicated.

ūnus, ūna, ūnum, one (for declension, see Capvt IX) duo, two			trēs, three		mīlle, thousand mīlia, thousands

	M.	F.	N.	M.&F.	N.	M.F.N.	N.
N.	dúo	dúae	dúo	trēs	tría	mīlle	mīlia
G.	duōrum	duārum	duōrum	tríum	tríum	mīlle	mīlium
D.	duōbus	duābus	duōbus	tríbus	tríbus	mīlle	mīlibus
A.	dúōs	dúās	dúo	trēs	tría	mīlle	mīlia
A.	duōbus	duābus	duōbus	tríbus	tríbus	mīlle	mīlibus

The cardinals indicating the hundreds from 200 through 900 are declined like plural adjectives of the first and second declensions; e.g., ducentī, -ae, -a, two hundred.

Mīlle, 1,000, is an indeclinable adjective in the singular, but in the plural it functions as a neuter i-stem noun of the third declension (e.g., mīlle virī, a thousand men; mīlia virōrum, thousands of men).

The cardinals from ūnus through vīgintī quīnque should be memorized (see list in the App., p. 500) and with them centum (100) and mīlle. The following sentences illustrate these various forms and uses of cardinal numerals:

Trēs puerī duābus puellīs rosās dedērunt. Three boys gave roses to two girls.
Octō puerī decem puellīs librōs dedērunt. Eight boys gave books to ten girls.
Ūnus vir cum quattuor amīcīs vēnit. One man came with four friends.
Cōnsul cum centum virīs vēnit. The consul came with 100 men.
Cōnsul cum ducentīs virīs vēnit. The consul came with 200 men.
Cōnsul cum mīlle virīs vēnit. The consul came with 1,000 men.
Cōnsul cum sex mīlibus virōrum vēnit. The consul came with six thousand(s) (of) men.

Ordinal Numerals

The ordinal numerals, which indicate the order of sequence, are regular first/second declension adjectives (prīmus, -a, -um; secundus, -a, -um; etc.—see App., p. 500). The ordinals from prīmus through duodecimus should be learned.

GENITIVE OF THE WHOLE

The genitive of a word indicating the whole of some thing or group is used after a word designating a part of that whole:

pars urbis, part of the city (city = the whole) nēmō amīcōrum meōrum, no one of my friends

This GENITIVE OF THE WHOLE (sometimes called the PARTITIVE GENITIVE) is also used with mīlia and after the neuter nominative and accusative of certain pronouns and adjectives such as aliquid, quid, multum, plūs, minus, satis, nihil, tantum, quantum:

nihil temporis, no time (nothing of time)
quid cōnsiliī? what plan?
satis ēloquentiae, sufficient eloquence decem mīlia virōrum, 10,000 men (but mīlle virī, 1,000 men)

The genitive of the whole may itself be the neuter singular of a second declension adjective:

multum bonī, much good (lit. of good) nihil certī, nothing certain Quid novī? What (is) new?

ABLATIVE WITH CARDINAL NUMERALS

With cardinal numerals (other than mīlia) and with quīdam (a certain one) and sometimes paucī the idea of the whole is expressed by ex or dē and the ablative:

trēs ex amīcīs meīs, three of my friends (but trēs amīcī = three friends) quīnque ex eīs, five of them quīdam ex eīs, a certain one of them centum ex virīs, 100 of the men paucī ex amīcīs, a few of the friends

ABLATIVE OF TIME WHEN OR WITHIN WHICH

The Romans indicated the TIME WHEN OR WITHIN WHICH an action occurred by using the ablative, without a preposition; in translating you usually must supply "at," "on," "in," or "within," depending upon English idiom ("for" is not an option, as it indicates DURATION OF TIME, an accusative construction introduced in Capvt XXXVII):

Eō tempore nōn poteram id facere. At that time I could not do it.
Agricolae bonīs annīs valēbant. In good years the farmers flourished.
Eōdem diē vēnērunt. They came (on) the same day (diē, abl. of diēs, day).
Aestāte lūdēbant. In the summer they used to play. (aestāte, abl. of aestās, summer) Paucīs hōrīs id faciet. In (within) a few hours he will do it.

Since this construction always involves some noun indicating a unit of time, without a preposition, you can easily distinguish it from the other ablative uses you have learned (object of certain prepositions, means, manner, accompaniment, and ablative with cardinal numerals); you must be able to identify and translate these six ablative usages, so for each remember: DEFINITION, RECOGNITION, TRANSLATION.

VOCĀBVLA

Numerous Latin nouns ending in -ia evolve into English nouns in -y; Italia and memoria are two examples in this chapter's list, as is glōria (Capvt V—for others, see "Some Etymological Aids," p. 490). Is tempestās an i-stem or not?—if you're uncertain, review the rules in Capvt XIV. Some verbs lack a fourth principal part; timeō in this chapter, and discō in Capvt VIII are examples. A special challenge in this chapter is learning to count from ūnus to vīgintī quīnque, 1–25, and from prīmus to duodecimus, 1st–12th. Listen to these numerals on the CDs or at www.wheelockslatin.com for correct pronunciation, then practice counting aloud, just as you did when you were learning as a young child to count in your native language: "one, two, three . . . ," "ūnus, duo, trēs . . ." "first, second, third . . . ," "prīmus, secundus, tertius." Once you have worked at learning the list and new declensions, decline some noun-adjective phrases using the new vocabulary, such as duae memoriae and trēs tempestātēs (both plural only, of course).

Itália, Itáliae, f., Italy (italics, italicize) memória, memóriae, f., memory, recollection (memoir, memorial, memorize, memorandum, commemorate) tempéstās, tempestātis, f., period of time, season; weather, storm (tempest, tempestuous; cf. tempus)
Cardinal numerals from ūnus to vīgíntī quínque (App., p. 500)
Ordinal numerals from prímus to duodécimus (App., p. 500) céntum, indecl. adj., a hundred (cent, centenary, centennial, centigrade, centimeter, centipede, centurion, century, bicentennial) mílle, indecl. adj. in sg., thousand; mília, mīlium, n. i-stem noun in pl., thousands (millennium, mile, milligram, millimeter, millipede, million, mill = 1/10 cent) míser, mísera, míserum, wretched, miserable, unfortunate (misery, commiserate) ínter, prep. + acc., between, among (intern, internal; common as Eng. prefix, App., p. 487, e.g., interact, intercept, interdict) ítaque, adv., and so, therefore commíttō, commíttere, commísī, commíssum, to entrust, commit (committee, commission, commissary, commitment, noncommissioned, noncom) exspéctō, exspectāre, exspectāvī, exspectātum, to look for, expect, await (expectant, expectation) iáciō, iácere, iēcī, iáctum, to throw, hurl. Appears in compounds as -iciō, -icere, -iēcī, -iectum: e.g., ēiciō, ēicere, ēiēcī, ēiectum, to throw out, drive out (abject, adjective, conjecture, dejected, eject, inject, interject, object, project, reject, subject, trajectory) tímeō, timēre, tímuī, to fear, be afraid (of) (timid, timorous, intimidate; cf. timor)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After learning the new paradigms and vocabulary and testing your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, scan the readings to identify all ablative and genitive uses. The trick in translating ablative of time is that you usually must supply "at," "on," "in," or "within," based on English idiom; thus, for ūnō annō in Ex. 4, we would say in or within one year, not at or on one year. Listen to the CDs, if you have them, and read aloud before translating.

Cyrus' Dying Words on Immortality

Ō meī fīliī trēs, nōn dēbētis esse miserī. Ad mortem enim nunc veniō, sed pars meī, animus meus, semper remanēbit. Dum eram vōbīscum, animum nōn vidēbātis, sed ex factīs meīs intellegēbātis eum esse in hōc corpore. Crēdite igitur animum esse eundem post mortem, etiam sī eum nōn vidēbitis, et semper cōnservāte mē in memoriā vestrā.

Cicero Sen. 22.79–81: This passage and the next are both drawn from Cicero's treatise Dē Senectūte, composed shortly before Julius Caesar's assassination. Cyrus the Great, whom Cicero quotes here, was a Persian king of the 6th cent. B.C. and founder of the Persian Achaemenid Empire.—crēdō, -ere, to believe; "credible," "credulity," "creed."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What view of the afterlife is evidenced in this passage? Comment on Cyrus' argument for the existence of the soul.

Fabian Tactics

Etiam in senectūte Quīntus Fabius Maximus erat vir vērae virtūtis et bella cum animīs adulēscentis gerēbat. Dē eō amīcus noster Ennius, doctus ille poēta, haec verba ōlim scrīpsit: "Ūnus homō cīvitātem fortūnātam nōbīs cūnctātiōne cōnservāvit. Rūmōrēs et fāmam nōn pōnēbat ante salūtem Rōmae. Glōria eius, igitur, nunc bene valet et semper valēbit."

Cicero Sen. 4.10: Quintus Fabius Maximus enjoyed considerable success against Hannibal in the Second Punic War (218–201 B.C.) through his delaying tactics, thus earning the cognomen Cūnctātor, the Delayer.—Ennius: Quintus Ennius (239–169 B.C.), an early Lat. poet sometimes called "the Father of Latin Literature," was author of numerous plays and an influential epic poem titled the Annālēs.—cūnctātiō, -ōnis, m., delaying; "cunctation."—rūmor, -mōris, m., rumor, gossip.—pōnō, -ere, to put, place; "posit,"

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

CIL 4.5081 (Reg. XI, Ins. 5) and 6856 (Reg. VI, Ins. 16): The Pompeians who inscribed these ornate graffiti in their houses were clearly feeling patriotic at the time! I have not provided transcriptions here, because you can certainly read 6856, which was inscribed on the wall of one home's corridor leading from the atrium to the back of the house; and, given that the last six letters of 5081, inscribed near a kitchen door in another house, are CAESAR, you should easily decipher the four letters of the first word (two of which also appear in the second word) and thus determine the name of the notorious Roman emperor whom the writer here chose to memorialize.

ETYMOLOGIA

Following are some Eng. derivatives from the Lat. cardinals and ordinals 2–12: (2) dual, duel, duet, double (cf. doubt, dubious), duplicity; second; (3) trio, triple, trivial; (4) quart, quarter, quartet, quatrain; (5) quinquennium, quintet, quintuplets, quincunx; (6) sextet, sextant; (7) September; (8) October, octave, octavo; (9) November, noon; (10) December, decimal, decimate, dime, dean; (12) duodecimal, dozen.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Quid novī, meī amīcī amīcaeque? Latin has other types of numerals, besides the cardinals and ordinals, which you will encounter later in your study of the language and many of which are already familiar. "Roman numerals" developed from counting on the fingers: I = one finger, II = two, etc., V = five (the hand held outstretched with the thumb and index finger making a "V"), VI = a "handful of fingers" plus one, etc., X = two V's, one inverted on the other, and so on. There were also DISTRIBUTIVE numerals, singulī, -ae, -a (one each); bīnī, -ae, -a (two each), ternī, -ae, -a, etc., and MULTIPLICATIVES, simplex, simplicis (single), duplex (double), triplex, etc.; likewise numeral adverbs, semel (once), bis (twice), ter (three times), etc. All these words have numerous (pardon the pun) English derivatives! For practice, in or out of the classroom, try some math too: duo et trēs sunt quīnque. And with the interrogative quot (how many?), your instructor may ask you questions like quot oculōs habēs?—remember to reply in the correct gender and case, duōs or duōs oculōs habeō—or quot discipulae hodiē sunt in classe (in class)?—quot discipulī in classe sunt?—quot discipulae et discipulī sunt? Your family physician may write a prescription that includes the common medical abbreviation "t.i.d.," which stands for ter in diē, three times (in a) day. Well, this doctor's prescription, for your intellectual health, is "study your Latin, t.i.d."—et valēte!

CAPVT XVI

Third Declension Adjectives

GRAMMATICA

THIRD DECLENSION ADJECTIVES

Latin has two major categories of adjectives. You are already familiar with first/second declension adjectives like magnus, -a, -um (Capvt IV) and the small sub-set of that group with -īus in the genitive singular and -ī in the dative singular (Capvt IX). Adjectives of the second major group generally have third declension i-stem forms and are declined exactly like i-stem nouns, except that the ablative singular of all genders (not just the neuter) ends with -ī. Adjectives of this group fall into three categories that differ from each other in simply one respect. Some, called "adjectives of three endings," have distinct forms of the nominative singular that differentiate each of the three genders, just as magnus, magna, and magnum do (e.g., ācer M., ācris F., and ācre N.); those of "two endings" (the largest category of third declension adjectives) have a single nominative form for both masculine and feminine, and another for the neuter (e.g., fortis M. and F., forte N.); and those of "one ending" do not differentiate the genders at all in the nominative singular (e.g., potēns is the M., F., and N. nominative singular form). In all other respects the adjectives of all three categories are the same, with the masculine and feminine endings differing from the neuters only in the accusative singular and the nominative (= vocative) and accusative plural.

Paradigms are given below, with the distinctive i-stem endings in bold; the nouns cīvis and mare are provided for comparison (review Capvt XIV, if necessary) and to show that there is very little new to be learned in order to master third declension adjectives:

Note the forms in which the characteristic i appears, as indicated in the paradigms:

(1) -ī in the ablative singular of all genders.
(2) -ium in the genitive plural of all genders.
(3) -ia in the nominative and accusative plural of the neuter.

Like i-stem nouns, third declension adjectives have an alternate -īs ending in the accusative plural, but it will rarely be used in this book.

A third declension adjective can be used with a noun of any declension just as a first/second declension adjective can. Compare the following, where omnis, -e, every, all, is used as the example of an adjective of two endings:

omnis amīcus or homō	ācer amīcus/homō	potēns amīcus/homō
omnis rēgīna or māter	ācris rēgīna/māter	potēns rēgīna/māter
omne bellum or animal	ācre bellum/animal	potēns bellum/animal

Analyze the forms in the following phrases:

omnī fōrmae	in omnī fōrmā	omnium fōrmārum
omnī animō	in omnī animō	omnium animōrum
omnī hominī	in omnī homine	omnium hominum
omnī urbī	in omnī urbe	omnium urbium
omnī marī	in omnī marī	omnium marium

Usage and Word Order

Third declension adjectives function in the following four ways (the first three of which have already been introduced), just like first/second declension adjectives:

ATTRIBUTIVE ADJECTIVE: virī fortēs, the brave men (simple modifier)

PREDICATE ADJECTIVE: virī sunt fortēs, the men are brave (describing the subject, with a form of sum or some other linking verb)

SUBSTANTIVE ADJECTIVE: fortūna fortēs adiuvat, fortune helps the brave (used in place of a noun)

OBJECTIVE COMPLEMENT: virtūs fēcit virōs fortēs, virtue made the men brave (describing the result of the action of the verb on the object; cf. "she painted the house yellow"—quite different from the attributive use in "she painted the yellow house")

Remember that attributive adjectives commonly follow the nouns they modify, except those that denote size or quantity, demonstratives, and those meant to be emphatic.

VOCĀBVLA

Watch the third declension adjectives: it's easy to identify those of two endings and three endings; entries for those of one ending provide the genitive, so you can determine the base. These adjectives are regularly i-stem, but are any of the third declension nouns in this list i-stem?—if you are unsure, review Capvt XIV, then decline at least one or two noun-adjective pairs from this list, e.g., satura ācris or mēns celeris, and compare with the paradigms. And remember, as you learn these new words, to use the CDs or the online audio at www.wheelockslatin.com and semper audī et prōnūntiā!

14. Vīta est brevis; ars, longa. (Hippocrates, quoted by Seneca.)
15. Breve tempus aetātis autem satis longum est ad bene vīvendum. (Cicero.—vīvendum, living, verbal noun obj. of ad, for.)
16. Vīvit et vīvet per omnium saeculōrum memoriam. (*Velleius Paterculus.—saeculum, -ī, n., century, age; "secular," "secularize.")

Juvenal Explains His Impulse to Satire

Semper ego audītor erō? Est turba poētārum in hāc urbe—ego igitur erō poēta! Sunt mīlia vitiōrum in urbe—dē istīs vitiīs scrībam! Difficile est saturam nōn scrībere. Sī nātūra mē adiuvāre nōn potest, facit indignātiō versum. In librō meō erunt omnia facta hominum—timor, īra, voluptās, culpa, cupiditās, īnsidiae. Nunc est plēna cōpia vitiōrum in hāc miserā urbe Rōmae!

Juvenal Sat. 1.1ff: The satirist Juvenal (Decimus Junius Juvenalis, ca. A.D. 60–130) has been over the centuries one of the most widely read and influential of Roman writers. His 16 verse satires, published in six volumes, were largely characterized by a tone of anger and indignation that was in marked contrast to the more genial satires of his Augustan predecessor Horace (a selection from whose Sermōnēs you read in Capvt III). In this passage from the opening of his programmatic first satire, Juvenal announces his reasons for writing satura, a literary genre the Romans laid claim to inventing; Juvenal's contemporary, Quintilian, author of an important work on Roman education and rhetoric, asserted satura quidem (indeed) tōta nostra est. —audītor: a reminder that satire, like other verse genres in Rome, was composed for recitation as much as for a reading audience.—turba poētārum: an exaggeration, but similar complaints are heard from other writers of the day.—nātūra: i.e., any innate talent he might have for writing poetry.—indignātiō, -ōnis, f.; = Eng.; "indignant," "indignity."—versus, verse, poetry; "versify," "version."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Juvenal here gives two reasons for his decision to write satire, the first facetious, the second quite serious–what are they? How does Juvenal's difficile est saturam nōn scrībere (his exact words) make an even more cynical point than if he had instead written nōn difficile est saturam scrībere? The satirist claims that his book will survey omnia facta hominum: what then is the implication of the list of behaviors and the concluding sentence that follow?

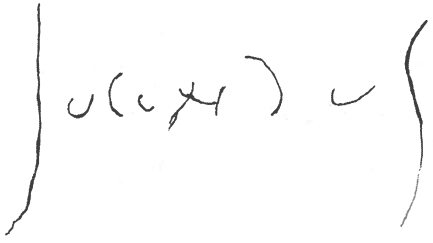
On a Temperamental Friend

Difficilis facilis, iūcundus acerbus—es īdem:
nec tēcum possum vīvere nec sine tē.

*Martial Epig. 12.46: Martial was a friend of Juvenal's and a major influence on his writing; though not himself a satirist in the strictly formal sense—i.e., he wrote epigrams and not the long dactylic hexameter poems that characterized Roman satire—his writings, as we have seen, were nevertheless highly satirical. Meter: elegiac couplet.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Is Martial's addressee here male or female?—how do you know? Elaborate on Martial's characterization of this person—have you ever been acquainted with someone like this? The most striking stylistic feature of the epigram is ANTITHESIS, which is deftly employed by the poet in three sets of contrasting words and phrases in the two verses; identify them. Difficilis facilis, iūcundus acerbus is an example, not only of chiasmus, but also of the rhetorical device known as ASYNDETON, the deliberate omission of conjunctions where typically expected; what is the intended effect of the two devices here? The second verse is structured in a series of three phrases: what are they, and how does their arrangement suit the line's meaning?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



CIL 4.6787: Here's another graffito that should require no transcription; if you can't figure it out, try to find the word in this chapter's Vocābula. Have you ever written simply your name on a wall somewhere?—the Romans often did, and this graffito, not just an adjective but the writer's cognomen, is typical; the same writer in another graffito (4.6786) on the same wall (in the atrium of a house in Reg. V, Ins. 4) wrote his name again, followed by Grāte salūtem, a "hello" to his girlfriend Grata, whose name means "Pleasing" or "Agreeable." Both names are representative of hundreds of Roman cognomina that describe a person's positive character traits or attractive physical attributes; we saw Venustus, "Charming," in Capvt III above, and other common examples are Audēns, "Daring/Courageous," Fēlīx, "Fortunate," Magnus, as in "Pompey the Great," and Caesar, probably = "Long-/Luxuriant-haired." On the other hand, Romans were not bashful about drawing attention to what might be considered negative traits or physical anomalies, and so we find such equally common cognomina as Paetus and Strabō, both meaning "Squinty-eyed," Scaurus, "Swollen-Ankled," Valgus, "Bow-legged," and even Cicerō, "Chickpea," which the ancient Greek biographer Plutarch claimed was given to one of Marcus Tullius Cicero's ancestors (and then passed on to him) because he had a deformity on his nose resembling a garbanzo bean!

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Quid agitis? Quid hodiē est tempestās? Here are some possible answers, many of which you can again recognize from derivatives: frīgida (tempestās is feminine, as you recall from Capvt XV, hence the feminine adjective, from frīgidus, -a, -um); calida ("scald" is a derivative); nimbōsa (from nimbus, which means the same as nūbēs, + the common suffix -ōsus, -a, -um, full of, hence "cloudy"—cf. "cumulonimbus clouds"); ventōsa (an identical formation from ventus, wind); sōl lūcet, the sun is shining (cf. "solar," "translucent"); pluit, it's raining ("pluvial," "pluviometer"); ningit, it's snowing (Eng. "niveous" from Lat. niveus, -a, -um is related).

Well, enough of the weather. Here's an omnibus of omni- words and phrases to delight you all: If you were "omnific" (from facere) and "omnipresent" (-sent from sum) and your appetite "omnivorous" (vorāre, to eat, cf. "carnivorous," "herbivorous") and your sight were "omnidirectional" (see regō in the Vocābula above), then you might potentially be "omnipotent" and even "omniscient" (scīre, to know). But as a proverbial saying from Vergil reminds us, nōn omnia possumus omnēs. Then there's the made-up word, "omnium-gatherum," a Latin-English hybrid that refers to a "miscellaneous collection" (of people or things)—it may seem silly but the word was used by British literati as early as the 16th cent., according to the Oxford English Dictionary! Well, speaking of silly, be aware that regō, mentioned above, does NOT mean "to go again," nor should regit be translated "leave, y'all, and this time I mean it!" Enough of that too: Valēte, omnēs amīcī et amīcae meae, et semper amāte Latīnam!

CAPVT XVII

The Relative Pronoun

GRAMMATICA

THE RELATIVE PRONOUN

A new method of description

The RELATIVE PRONOUN quī, quae, quod, as common in Latin as its English equivalent who/which/that, ordinarily introduces a subordinate clause and refers back to some noun or pronoun known as its ANTECEDENT; the RELATIVE CLAUSE itself has an adjectival function, providing descriptive information about the antecedent (e.g., "the man who was from Italy" = "the Italian man").

The forms of the relative pronoun are so diverse that the only practical procedure is to memorize them. However, the genitive and dative endings cuius and cui resemble huius/huic and illīus/illī, and it is easy to identify the case, the number, and often the gender of most of the remaining forms, based on their similarity to various first, second, and third declension endings.

Quī, Quae, Quod, who, which, that

Singular			Plural
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
quī	quae	quod	quī	quae	quae
cuíus	cuíus	cuíus	quŏrum	quārum	quŏrum
cui	cui	cui	quíbus	quíbus	quíbus
quem	quam	quod	quōs	quās	quae
quō	quā	quō	quíbus	quíbus	quíbus

For the pronunciation of the ui in cuius (as if spelled cui-yus) and in cui, cf. huius and huic (Capvt IX) and see the Intrōductiō, p. xxxvii (listen to the CDs too, if you have them).

Usage and Agreement

Since the relative pronoun (from referō, referre, rettulī, relātum) refers to and is essentially equivalent to its antecedent (from antecēdere, to go before, since the antecedent usually appears in a preceding clause), the two words naturally agree in number and gender; the case of the relative, however, like that of any noun or pronoun, is determined by its use within its own clause. The logic of this can be demonstrated by analyzing and translating the following sentence:

The woman whom you are praising is wise.

1. The main clause of the sentence reads: The woman . . . is wise. Fēmina . . . est sapiēns.
2. Whom introduces a subordinate, relative clause modifying woman.
3. Woman (fēmina) stands before the relative whom and is its antecedent.
4. Whom has a double loyalty: (1) to its antecedent, fēmina, and (2) to the subordinate clause in which it stands.

a. Since the antecedent, fēmina, is feminine and singular, whom in Latin will have to be feminine and singular.
b. Since in the subordinate clause whom is the direct object of (you) are praising (laudās), it must be in the accusative case in Latin.
c. Therefore, the Latin form must be feminine and singular and accusative: quam.

The complete sentence in Latin appears thus:

Fēmina quam laudās est sapiēns.

Again, succinctly, the rule is this: the gender and number of a relative are determined by its antecedent; its case is determined by its use in its own clause. Identify the gender, number, case, use, and antecedent of the relatives in the following sentences:

1. Dīligō puellam quae ex Italiā vēnit. I admire the girl who came from Italy.
2. Homō dē quō dīcēbās est amīcus cārus. The man about whom you were speaking is a dear friend.
3. Puella cui librum dat est fortūnāta. The girl to whom he is giving the book is fortunate.
4. Puer cuius patrem iuvābāmus est fortis. The boy whose father we used to help is brave.
5. Vītam meam committam eīs virīs quōrum virtūtēs laudābās. I shall entrust my life to those men whose virtues you were praising.
6. Timeō idem perīculum quod timētis. I fear the same danger which you fear.

In translating, be sure not to shift words from the relative clause into the main clause or vice versa; e.g., in the third sentence above, puella should not be mistaken as the subject of dat. Note that a relative clause is a self-contained unit, usually beginning with the relative pronoun and ending with the first verb you encounter (cui . . . dat in the third sample sentence); in complex sentences, like S.A. 3 below, you may find it helpful first to identify and actually even bracket the relative clause(s):

> Multī cīvēs aut ea perīcula [quae imminent] nōn vident aut ea [quae vident] neglegunt.

As you read and translate such a sentence, translate the relative clause as soon as you have translated the relative pronoun's antecedent (which very often, as here, precedes the relative pronoun immediately).

VOCĀBVLA

This list includes several common verbs: note the conjugation of each and remember the rule for -iō verbs, i.e., that you'll find the characteristic -i- in every single form of the three present system active indicative tenses. Coepī is an example of a DEFECTIVE VERB, i.e., a verb many or most of whose conjugational forms were rarely employed. Aut . . . aut will remind you of et . . . et: both are examples of CORRELATIVE CONJUNCTIONS. Practice recently introduced grammar with some of the new words; e.g., decline libellus levis and write out a synopsis of dēsīderō or dēleō, checking your work with the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 495–505.

libéllus, libéllī, m., little book (libel, libelous; diminutive of liber) quī, quae, quod, rel. pron., who, which, what, that (qui vive, quorum) caécus, caéca, caécum, blind (caecum, caecal, caecilian) lévis, léve, light; easy; slight, trivial (levity, lever, levy, levee, Levant, leaven, legerdemain, alleviate, elevate, relevant, irrelevant, relieve) aut, conj., or; aut . . . aut, either . . . or cíto, adv., quickly (excite, incite, recite; cf. recitō, below) quóque, adv., also, too admíttō, admíttere, admīsī, admíssum, to admit, receive, let in (admission, admissible, inadmissible, admittedly) coépī, coepísse, coéptum, began, defective verb used in the perf. system only; the pres. system is supplied by incipiō (below).
cúpiō, cúpere, cupīvī, cupītum, to desire, wish, long for (Cupid, cupidity, concupiscence, covet, covetous, Kewpie doll; cf. cupiditās) dēleō, dēlēre, dēlēvī, dēlētum, to destroy, wipe out, erase (delete, indelible) dēsīderō, dēsīderāre, dēsīderāvī, dēsīderātum, to desire, long for, miss (desiderate, desideratum, desiderative, desire, desirous) incípiō, incípere, incēpī, incéptum, to begin (incipient, inception; cf. capiō) nāvigō, nāvigāre, nāvigāvī, nāvigātum, to sail, navigate (navigation, navigable; cf. nauta) néglegō, neglégere, neglēxī, neglēctum, to neglect, disregard (negligent, negligee, negligible) récitō, recitāre, recitāvī, recitātum, to read aloud, recite (recital, recitation, recitative)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Reading and translating sentences that contain relative clauses (like the one you just this moment read: "that contain relative clauses") need not be difficult. Bracketing the clause as suggested in the preceding discussion of S.A. 3 below can help you avoid jumbling words from the subordinate clause into the main clause; practice with a few sentences in the Self-Tutorial Exercises. Watch out for look-alike qu- words like the adverb quam in Ex. 5 (which cannot be a relative pronoun because it has no antecedent), and the conjunction quod, because: when quod immediately follows a neuter singular word, it is nearly always the relative pronoun; when there is no apparent antecedent, it is more likely the conjunction. And, beware: as you'll see in the Martial epigram below, the antecedent does not always *ante*cede!

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Potēns quoque est vīs artium, quae nōs semper alunt.
2. Miserōs hominēs, autem, sēcum iungere coeperant.
3. Nam illā aetāte pars populī in Italiā iūra cīvium numquam tenuit.
4. Incipimus vēritātem intellegere, quae mentēs nostrās semper regere dēbet et sine quā valēre nōn possumus.
5. Quam difficile est bona aut dulcia ex bellō trahere!
6. Centum ex virīs mortem diū timēbant et nihil clēmentiae exspectābant.
7. Puer mātrem timēbat, quae eum saepe neglegēbat.
8. Inter omnia perīcula fēmina fortis sē cum sapientiā gessit.
9. Itaque celer rūmor mortis ācris per ingentēs urbēs cucurrit.
10. Quoniam memoria factōrum nostrōrum dulcis est, beātī nunc sumus et senectūtem facilem agēmus.
11. Multī audītōrēs saturās ācrēs timēbant quās poēta recitābat.
12. They feared the powerful men whose city they were ruling by force.
13. We began to help those three pleasant women to whom we had given our friendship.
14. We fear that book with which he is beginning to destroy our liberty.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Salvē, bone amīce, cui fīlium meum heri commīsī. (Terence.)
2. Dionȳsius, dē quō ante dīxī, ā Graeciā ad Siciliam per tempestātem brevem sed potentem nāvigābat. (Cicero.—Sicilia, -ae, f., Sicily.)
3. Multī cīvēs aut ea perīcula quae imminent nōn vident aut ea quae vident neglegunt. (Cicero.—imminēre, to impend, threaten; "imminence," "imminent.")
4. Bis dat quī cito dat. (Publilius Syrus.—bis, adv., twice; "biped," "bipolar.")
5. Quī coepit, dīmidium factī habet. Incipe! (Horace.—dīmidium, -ī, n., half; "dimidiate.")
6. Levis est fortūna: id cito reposcit quod dedit. (Publilius Syrus.—reposcō, -ere, to demand back.)
7. Fortūna eum stultum facit quem nimium amat. (Publilius Syrus.)
8. Nōn sōlum fortūna ipsa est caeca sed etiam eōs caecōs facit quōs semper adiuvat. (Cicero.)
9. Bis vincit quī sē vincit in victōriā. (*Publilius Syrus.)
10. Simulātiō dēlet vēritātem, sine quā nōmen amīcitiae valēre nōn potest. (Cicero.—simulātiō, -ōnis, f., pretense, insincerity; "simulate," "simulation.")
11. Virtūtem enim illīus virī amāvī, quae cum corpore nōn periit. (Cicero.—pereō, -īre, -iī, -itum, to perish; "perish," "perishable.")
12. Turbam vītā. Cum hīs vīve quī tē meliōrem facere possunt; illōs admitte quōs tū potes facere meliōrēs. (Seneca.—melior, better; "meliorate," "ameliorate.")

On the Pleasures of Love in Old Age

Estne amor in senectūte? Voluptās enim minor est, sed minor quoque est cupiditās. Nihil autem est cūra nōbīs, sī nōn cupimus, et nōn caret is quī nōn dēsīderat. Adulēscentēs nimis dēsīderant; senēs satis amōris saepe habent et multum sapientiae. Cōgitō, igitur, hoc tempus vītae esse iūcundum.

Cicero Sen. 14.47–48: For Cicero's Dē Senectūte, see the notes to the two passages in Capvt XV.—minor: less; "minority," "minus."—carēre, to lack, want; "caret."—is quī: a rel. pron. is often immediately preceded by a form of is, ea, id as antecedent; another common example is id quod, that which.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What reason does Cicero offer for his view that the lessening of romantic passion that can accompany old age need not be a source of concern? Comment on the word order of the second sentence and how it neatly suits the nature of the argument.

It's All in the Delivery

Quem recitās meus est, ō Fīdentīne, libellus; sed male cum recitās, incipit esse tuus!

A Reading from Homer, Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, 1885
Philadelphia Museum of Art: The George W. Elkins Collection

*Martial Epig. 1.38: In ancient Rome, poetry was performance and was meant first and foremost for a listening audience; proper delivery (āctiō) and recitation (recitātiō) were skills taught in school, and recitātiōnēs were a favorite entertainment among educated Romans. Poets recited their own poetry, and sometimes their work was recited by others—not always to good effect, however. Juvenal complains about the city's turba poētārum, as we read in the previous chapter, and Martial here expresses his displeasure with Fidentinus, who has been reciting some of his epigrams, and nōn bene! Meter: elegiac couplet.—libellus: the delayed antecedent of quem; in prose the order might be libellus quem recitās est meus.—male, adv. of malus.—cum, conj., when.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What does this epigram tell us about the consequences of poorly reciting a text?—what are some specific ways in which delivery can affect meaning? Comment specifically on the effect of positioning meus before the subject to which it refers in line 1 and then delaying tuus to the the poem's end.

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Omnēs lūserō: sum Max(imus)!

CIL 4.9008: Inscribed on a column in a Pompeian house (Reg. VII, Ins. 6). The context is not entirely certain, but quite possibly Maximus was an actor in mimes, a popular form of Roman comedy characterized by satiric, lively, and often obscene dance and miming routines in which a single actor, using a variety of masks, played all the roles. Certainly the writer here had a sense of humor, as his "self-portrait" in the role of a soldier incorporates the S- of sum into the nose-piece of his helmet and the -SERO of lūserō into its crest.—omnēs: i.e., parts or characters in a performance?—lūdō, lūdere, lūsī, lūsum, to play, sport; play the role of, mime; "ludicrous, delude, illusion."

ETYMOLOGIA

The Lat. rel. pron. was the parent of the following Romance forms: It. chi, che; Sp. que; Port. que or, if referring to people, quem; Fr. qui, que; Old Occ. qui; Rom. care, ce. To Lat. aut can be traced It. o; Sp. o; Port. ou; Fr. ou; Old Occ. o; Rom. ou (now obsolete).

If the suffix -scō shows a Lat. verb to be an "inceptive" verb, what force or meaning does this ending impart to the verb?—tremō, tremble; tremēscō = ? In medieval manuscripts many texts begin with an "incipit"; e.g., liber prīmus Epistulārum Plīniī incipit.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Iterum salvēte! There are a couple of English abbreviations from quī, quae, quod which you may have seen: q.v. = quod vidē, which see (i.e., "see this item"), and Q.E.D. = quod erat dēmōnstrandum, that which was to be proved (used, e.g., in mathematical proofs—for the verbal form, a "passive periphrastic," see Capvt XXIV). Less common are q.e. = quod est, which is, and Q.E.F. = quod erat faciendum, which was/had to be done. You are beginning to see that for a truly literate person Latin is sine quā nōn (indispensable, lit. something without which one can not manage), and that's a point we needn't "quibble" over (a diminutive derived from the frequent use of quibus in legal documents). The root meaning of recitāre, by the way, is to arouse again (cf. "excite," "incite"); when we "recite" a text, we are quite literally "reviving" or bringing it back to life, which is why we—just like the Romans—should always read literature, especially poetry, aloud! And here's some good advice on doing your translations: semper scrībe sententiās in tabellā tuā (your notebook). An old proverb tells you why: quī scrībit, bis discit! And here's a proverb with the Vocābula item cito: cito matūrum, cito putridum, quickly ripe, quickly rotten. So let's not go too fast: valēte!

CAPVT XVIII

First and Second Conjugations: Present System Passive; Ablative of Agent

GRAMMATICA

FIRST AND SECOND CONJUGATIONS: PRESENT SYSTEM PASSIVE VOICE

In Latin as in English there are PASSIVE VOICE verb forms and passive sentence types, in which the subject is passive recipient of the action (rather than actively performing the action, as in the active voice). The rule for forming the passive of first and second conjugation present system passives (i.e., passives of the present, future, and imperfect tenses) is an easy one: simply substitute the new passive endings (-r, -ris, -tur; -mur, -minī, -ntur) for the active ones learned in Capvt I (-ō/-m, -s, -t; -mus, -tis, -nt). The few exceptions to this rule are highlighted in bold in the following paradigms.

Present Indicative Passive Laudō and Moneō

Passive Endings
1. -r	laúd-or	móneor	I am (being) praised, warned
2. -ris	laudā-ris	monḗris	you are (being) praised, warned
3. -tur	laudā-tur	monḗtur	he is (being) praised, warned
1. -mur	laudā-mur	monḗmur	we are (being) praised, warned
2. -minī	laudā-minī	monḗminī	you are (being) praised, warned
3. -ntur	laudá-ntur	monéntur	they are (being) praised, warned

Imperfect Indicative Passive

I was (being) praised, used to be praised, etc.	I was (being) warned, used to be warned, etc.
1. laudā́-ba-r	monḗbar
2. laudā-bā́-ris	monēbā́ris
3. laudā-bā́-tur	monēbā́tur
1. laudā-bā́-mur	monēbā́mur
2. laudā-bā́-minī	monēbā́minī
3. laudā-bá-ntur	monēbántur

Future Indicative Passive

I will be praised	I will be warned
1. laudā́-b-or	monḗbor
2. laudā́-be-ris	monḗberis
3. laudā́-bi-tur	monḗbitur
1. laudā́-bi-mur	monḗbimur
2. laudā-bí-minī	monēbíminī
3. laudā-bú-ntur	monēbúntur

The exceptional forms, highlighted in bold above, are few: in the first person singular, present and future, the active ending -ō is shortened and -r is added directly to it, instead of being substituted for it; -bi- is changed to -be- in the future second person singular. Notice, too, that the stem vowel remains short in laudantur/monentur but is long in laudātur/mo̱nētur (review the rule in Capvt I: vowels are generally shortened before nt in any position but only before a final -m, -r, or -t, hence laudat but laudātur). Latin had an alternate second person singular passive ending in -re (e.g., laudābere for laudāberis); this ending is not employed in this book, but you will likely encounter it in your later readings.

Present Passive Infinitive

The present passive infinitive of first and second conjugation verbs is formed by changing final -e of the active to -ī.

laudāre, to praise	monēre, to warn
laudārī, to be praised	monērī, to be warned

When a verb is active voice (from agō, agere, ēgī, āctum, to act), the subject performs the action; with a verb in passive voice (from patior, patī, passus sum, to undergo, experience) the subject is passively acted upon. As a rule, only transitive verbs are used in the passive; and what had been the object of the transitive verb (receiving the action of the verb) now becomes the subject of the passive verb (still receiving the action of the verb). To make verbs passive in English, we use a form of the verb "to be":

Caesarem admonet. He warns Caesar.
Caesar admonētur. Caesar is (being) warned.

Urbem dēlēbant. They were destroying the city.
Urbs dēlēbātur. The city was being destroyed.

Patriam cōnservābit. He will save the country.
Patria cōnservābitur. The country will be saved.

ABLATIVE OF PERSONAL AGENT

The personal agent by whom the action of a passive verb is performed is indicated by ā/ab and the ABLATIVE OF AGENT; the means by which the action is accomplished is indicated by the ABLATIVE OF MEANS, without a preposition, as you have already learned in Capvt XIV. Both constructions are common with passive verbs, as seen in the following examples:

Dī Caesarem admonent. The gods are warning Caesar.
Caesar ā dīs admonētur. Caesar is warned by the gods. (Agent)
Caesar hīs prōdigiīs admonētur. Caesar is warned by these omens (prōdigium). (Means) Malī virī urbem dēlēbant. Evil men were destroying the city.
Urbs ab malīs virīs dēlēbātur. The city was being destroyed by evil men. (Agent)
Urbs flammīs dēlēbātur. The city was being destroyed by flames (flamma). (Means) Hī cīvēs patriam cōnservābunt. These citizens will save the country.
Patria ab hīs cīvibus cōnservābitur. The country will be saved by these citizens. (Agent)
Patria armīs et vēritāte cōnservābitur. The country will be saved by arms and truth. (Means)

As seen in these examples, an active sentence construction can be transformed to a passive construction in this way: what was the direct object becomes the subject; what was the subject becomes in Latin an ablative of agent, if a person, or an ablative of means, if a thing; and a passive verb form, in the appropriate person, number, and tense, is substituted for the active.

VOCĀBVLA

Genus is one of thousands of Latin words (like oculus and corpus) that have come into English without any change in spelling. Hostis, enemy (of the state) is another noun with a special sense in the plural, equivalent to our COLLECTIVE NOUN, the enemy (as opposed to an individual enemy). Don't confuse clārus with cārus, or moveō with moneō. Note carefully also that the passive videor, vidērī, while it can certainly mean to be seen, very often means to seem, appear; for practice, conjugate this verb in the six active tenses and three passive tenses you have now learned, and cf. with the full conjugation of moneō in the Summārium Fōrmārum.

flūmen, flūminis, n., river (flume, fluminous; cf. fluō, below) génus, géneris, n., origin; kind, type, sort, class (genus, generic, genitive, gender, general, generous, genuine, degenerate, genre, congenial) hóstis, hóstis, m., an enemy (of the state); hóstēs, -ium, the enemy (hostile, hostility, host) lūdus, lūdī, m., game, sport; school (ludicrous, delude, elude, elusive, allude, allusion, illusion, collusion, interlude, prelude, postlude) próbitās, probitātis, f., uprightness, honesty (probity, probation) sciéntia, sciéntiae, f., knowledge (science, scientific, scientist, prescience; cf. scīre, to know) clārus, clāra, clārum, clear, bright; renowned, famous, illustrious (clarify, clarity, claret, clarinet, clarion, declare, Clara, Clarissa, Claribel) mortālis, mortāle, mortal (mortality, immortal, immortality; cf. mors) cūr, adv., why deínde, adv., thereupon, next, then flúō, flúere, flūxī, flūxum, to flow (fluid, fluent, flux, influx, affluence, influence, confluence, influenza, flu, mellifluous, superfluous) légō, légere, lēgī, lēctum, to pick out, choose; read (elect, elegant, eligible, lecture, legend, legible, intellect; cf. dīligō, intellegō, neglegō) mísceō, miscḗre, míscuī, míxtum, to mix, stir up, disturb (miscellaneous, miscible, meddle, medley, melee, promiscuous) móveō, movḗre, mṓvī, mṓtum, to move; arouse, affect (mobile, motion, motive, motor, commotion, emotion, remote, locomotive, mutiny) vídeor, vidḗrī, vīsus sum, pass. of videō, to be seen, seem, appear

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

As always, practice first with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, then read the following sentences and passage aloud, listening to the CDs, if you have them, and reading initially for comprehension. Look for all occurrences of the ablatives of agent and means, and for all passive verb forms, identifying the person, number, and tense of each.

On Death and Metamorphosis

Ō genus hūmānum, quod mortem nimium timet! Cūr perīcula mortis timētis? Omnia mūtantur, omnia fluunt, nihil ad vēram mortem venit. Animus errat et in alia corpora miscētur; nec manet, nec eāsdem fōrmās servat, sed in fōrmās novās mūtātur. Vīta est flūmen; tempora nostra fugiunt et nova sunt semper. Nostra corpora semper mūtantur; id quod fuimus aut sumus, nōn crās erimus.

Ovid Met. 15.153–216: Ovid (Publius Ovidius Naso, 43 B.C.–A.D. 17) has remained for 2000 years enormously popular, both for his several books of erotic poetry (including his racy Ars Amātōria, The Art of Love, which seems to have been one of the reasons Augustus exiled him from Rome in A.D. 8 at the height of his career) and for his Metamorphōsēs, his most influential work, a quasi-epic collection of 250 interconnected transformation myths in 15 volumes. The passage presented here, a prose adaptation from that poem's closing book, presents some imaginative views on the transmigration of souls in the context of an argument on why men should not fear death (with which you might compare Lucretius' remark in S. A. 8 above).

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What specific arguments are presented here to allay the fear of death? Would readers ancient or modern (yourself included) find them persuasive and consoling, or unsettling?

CIL 4.6796: Graffito from a wall in the courtyard of a house in Reg. V, Ins. 4. Whoever wrote this, whether Fronto himself or an admirer, began to add in a second line ET and (probably) HONESTVS (honorable, a common epithet in such inscriptions), then stopped and, caught in the act or for whatever other reason, attempted to erase the incomplete phrase. Do you recall the term for the dot used to separate the words?—if not, see the graffiti in Capita X–XI.—M.: if you do not recall this abbreviation, see "Cicero Imagines," Capvt XIV.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Wondering how the same verb, legere, can mean both to pick out and to read? Because the process of reading was likened to gathering and collecting the words of a text. What a splendid metaphor: we are all of us (especially Latin students) "word collectors"! "Gather ye rosebuds while ye may" . . . and also the delights of language. Remember the special passive meaning of videor introduced in this Vocābula; here it is in the present passive infinitive form, also newly introduced in this chapter: esse quam vidērī, to be rather than to seem, the state motto of North Carolina. Scientia also turns up in several mottoes: scientia est potentia, knowledge is power, is one favorite, and another is scientia sōl mentis est, knowledge is the sun of the mind (motto of the University of Delaware). Valēte, discipulae discipulīque!

CAPVT XIX

Perfect Passive System; Interrogative Pronouns and Adjectives

GRAMMATICA

THE PERFECT PASSIVE SYSTEM

The construction of the forms of the PERFECT PASSIVE SYSTEM is quite simple: a verb's PERFECT PASSIVE PARTICIPLE (the fourth principal part) is combined with sum, erō, and eram to form the perfect, future perfect, and pluperfect passive, respectively. The same pattern is employed for verbs of all conjugations; thus, in the following paradigms, monitus, āctus, audītus, captus, or any other perfect passive participle could be substituted for laudātus.

Perfect Indicative Passive

1. laudātus, -a, -um sum	I was praised, have been praised
2. laudātus, -a, -um es	you were praised, have been praised
3. laudātus, -a, -um est	he, she, it was praised, has been praised
1. laudātī, -ae, -a sumus	we were praised, have been praised
2. laudātī, -ae, -a estis	you were praised, have been praised
3. laudātī, -ae, -a sunt	they were praised, have been praised

Future Perfect Indicative Passive

I will have been praised, etc.
1. laudātus, -a, -um erō
2. laudātus, -a, -um eris
3. laudātus, -a, -um erit

1. laudātī, -ae, -a erimus
2. laudātī, -ae, -a eritis
3. laudātī, -ae, -a erunt

Pluperfect Indicative Passive

I had been praised, etc.
1. laudātus, -a, -um eram
2. laudātus, -a, -um erās
3. laudātus, -a, -um erat

1. laudātī, -ae, -a erāmus
2. laudātī, -ae, -a erātis
3. laudātī, -ae, -a erant

Usage and Translation

Although sum + the participle function together in Latin as a verbal unit, the participle in essence is a type of predicate adjective; i.e., puella laudāta est = puella est laudāta, cf. puella est bona. Consequently, and logically, the participle agrees with the subject in gender, number, and case.

Just as Latin uses the present, future, and imperfect of sum, esse to form these perfect system passive verbs, so English uses the present, future, and past tenses of the verb to have as perfect system (active and passive) auxiliaries: laudātus est, he has been praised (or, simple past, was praised); laudātus erit, he will have been praised; laudātus erat, he had been praised. Be careful to avoid such common mistranslations as is praised for laudātus est and was praised for laudātus erat (caused by looking at the forms of esse and the participle separately, rather than viewing them as a unit). The following examples illustrate these rules of form, usage, and translation:

Puella laudāta est. The girl has been (or was) praised.
Puellae laudātae erant. The girls had been praised.
Puellae laudātae erunt. The girls will have been praised.
Puerī monitī sunt. The boys have been (were) warned.
Perīculum nōn vīsum erat. The danger had not been seen.
Perīcula nōn vīsa sunt. The dangers were not seen.
Litterae scrīptae erunt. The letter will have been written.

Synopsis

You can now do a synopsis of first and second conjugation verbs in all six tenses of the indicative, active and passive; here is an example:

Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut. Perf.	Pluperf.
Active
amat	amābit	amābat	amāvit	amāverit	amāverat
Passive
amātur	amābitur	amābātur	amātus est	amātus erit	amātus erat

THE INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN

As with the English interrogative pronoun ("who?"/"whose?"/"whom?"/"what?"/"which?"), the Latin INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN quis, quid asks for the identity of a person or thing: e.g., quid vidēs? what do you see? and quis cōnsilium habet? who has a plan? In the plural the forms of the Latin interrogative pronoun are identical to those of the relative pronoun; in the singular it follows the pattern of the relative with two exceptions: (1) the masculine and the feminine have the same forms, (2) the nominative forms are quis, quid (and quid is also, of course, the n. acc. form).

	Singular		Plural

Abl.	quō	quō	quíbus	quíbus	quíbus

THE INTERROGATIVE ADJECTIVE

Like the English interrogative adjective ("which . . . ?"/"what . . . ?"/"what kind of . . . ?"), the Latin INTERROGATIVE ADJECTIVE quī, quae, quod asks for more specific identification of a person or thing: e.g., quod signum vidēs? what sign do you see? quae fēmina cōnsilium habet? which woman has a plan? in quā urbe vīvimus? in what kind of city are we living? The word sometimes has exclamatory force: quōs mōrēs malōs istī habent! what terrible morals those men have! The forms of the interrogative adjective are identical to those of the relative pronoun, in both the singular and the plural.

The Interrogatives and Relative Distinguished

The forms quis and quid are easily recognized as interrogative pronouns, but otherwise the interrogative pronoun, the interrogative adjective, and the relative pronoun can only be distinguished by their function and context, not by their forms. The following points will make the distinction simple:

- the interrogative pronoun asks a question about the identity of a person or thing, has no antecedent, and often introduces a sentence with a question mark at the end (an exception is the "indirect question," introduced in Capvt XXX): quid legis? what are you reading?
- the interrogative adjective asks for more specific identification of a person or thing and both precedes and agrees in gender, number, and case with the noun it is asking about: quem librum legis? which book are you reading?
- the relative pronoun usually introduces a subordinate clause, has an antecedent, and does not ask a question (in fact, relative clauses answer questions, in the sense that they are adjectival and provide further information about their antecedents: liber quem legis est meus, the book which you are reading is mine.

Determine whether a relative pronoun, an interrogative pronoun, or an interrogative adjective is used in the following examples:

Quis* librum tibi dedit? Who gave the book to you?
Vir quī librum tibi dedit tē laudāvit. The man who gave you the book praised you.
Quem* librum tibi dedit? Which book did he give you?

Cuius* librum Cicerō tibi dedit? Whose book did Cicero give to you?
Cuius* librī fuit Cicerō auctor? Of which book was Cicero the author?
Vir cuius librum Cicerō tibi dedit tē laudāvit. The man whose book Cicero gave to you praised you.

Cui* amīcō librum dedistī? To which friend did you give the book?
Cui* librum Cicerō dedit? To whom did Cicero give the book?
Vir cui Cicerō librum dedit tē laudāvit. The man to whom Cicero gave the book praised you.

Quid* dedit? What did he give?
Quod* praemium dedit? What reward did he give? (praemium, -iī.)
Praemium quod dedit erat magnum. The reward which he gave was large.

Ā quō praemium datum est? By whom was the reward given?
Vir ā quō praemium datum est tē laudāvit. The man by whom the reward was given praised you.
Quō* praemiō ille mōtus est? By which reward was that man motivated?

VOCĀBVLA

Be careful not to confuse look-alike words such as iūdex and iūdicium in this Vocābula, and the conjunctions at, in the list below, and et, learned previously. As you study this new vocabulary, do a synopsis of one of the three new verbs and compare your work with the full conjugation of laudāre in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 501–03; decline the interrogative adjective with one of the new nouns in this list too, e.g., quī auctor, which author? or quod scelus, what crime?

argūméntum, argūméntī, n., proof, evidence, argument (argumentation, argumentative) aúctor, auctṓris, m., increaser; author, originator (authority, authorize)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Scan the readings for perfect system passives and interrogative pronouns and adjectives. To avoid confusing the qu- words you've recently learned, be sure to review "The Interrogatives and Relative Distinguished" above; and be careful not to translate perfect system passives as simple present, future, and imperfect by mistakenly focusing on the forms of esse: e.g., dēlēta est in Ex. 2 means has been/was destroyed, not is destroyed.

The Aged Playwright Sophocles Holds His Own

Quam multa senēs in mentibus tenent! Sī studium grave et labor et probitās in senectūte remanent, saepe manent etiam memoria, scientia, sapientiaque. Sophoclēs, scrīptor ille Graecus, ad summam senectūtem tragoediās fēcit; sed propter hoc studium familiam neglegere vidēbātur et ā fīliīs in iūdicium vocātus est. Tum auctor eam tragoediam quam sēcum habuit et quam proximē scrīpserat, "Oedipum Colōnēum," iūdicibus recitāvit. Ubi haec tragoedia recitāta est, senex sententiīs iūdicum est līberātus.

Cicero Sen. 7.22: In this selection from "On Old Age" (you should re-read the others in Capita XV and XVII), Cicero relates an anecdote about the Greek tragedian Sophocles (ca. 496–406 B.C.), who during his long career authored more than 120 plays, many of them prize-winning. —summam, extreme; "summary," "summit."—tragoedia, -ae, f.; the diphthong oe has become e in the Eng. word; "tragedian," "tragic."—proximē, adv.,

shortly before; "proximity," "approximate."—Oedipum Colōnēum: Sophocles composed his last play, "Oedipus at Colonus," near the end of his life, and it won first place in the theatrical competitions at which it was produced posthumously, by his grandson, in 401 B.C.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is Cicero's purpose in relating this anecdote about Sophocles in his treatise Dē Senectūte? Why did the court acquit Sophocles of the charges his sons had brought against him?

Catullus Bids a Bitter Farewell to Lesbia

Valē, puella—iam Catullus obdūrat.
Scelesta, vae tē! Quae tibī manet vīta?
Quis nunc tē adībit? Cui vidēberis bella?
Quem nunc amābis? Cuius esse dīcēris?
Quem bāsiābis? Cui labella mordēbis?
At tū, Catulle, dēstinātus obdūrā.

*Catullus Carm. 8.12, 15–19: Lines excerpted directly from the Catullus poem which you read in a much simplified prose adaptation in Capvt II (and which is presented in nearly complete form in Locī Ant. I, below, p. 351–52); meter: choliambic.—obdūrāre, to be hard, be tough, endure; "obdurate."—scelestus, -a, -um, wicked, accursed; "scelerat."—vae tē, woe to you.—quae: with vīta.—tibī: just as final long vowels were sometimes shortened in verse, for metrical reasons, final short vowels were sometimes lengthened.—adībit: will visit.—dīcēris: will you be said.—bāsiāre, to kiss.—cui: here = cuius, as the dat. often has possessive force.—labellum, -ī, n., lip; "labial."—mordēre, to bite; "mordant," "morsel," "remorse."—dēstinātus, -a, -um, resolved, firm; "destination," "destiny.")

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What are the most striking stylistic features of this excerpt?—think even of rhythms and sound effects. How does Catullus' language resemble that of a prosecuting attorney?—how do his questions become progressively more intense? What psychology does Catullus play upon in describing himself in third person, and then addressing and lecturing himself in the poem's closing line?

Message from a Bookcase

Sēlectōs nisi dās mihī libellōs, admittam tineās trucēsque blattās!

*Martial Epig. 14.37: One of the first books Martial wrote, though appearing in manuscripts as Liber XIV, was separately titled Apophorēta, a Greek word lit. meaning "things (for guests) to take away," like our "party favors." Each of these little gift poems was labeled with the name of the object it accompanied (here a scrīnium, a cylindrical container for holding books), and in many the gift itself addresses the reader—in this instance with a threat! Meter: hendecasyllabic.—sēlectus, -a, -um, select, carefully chosen; "selection," "selective."—tinea, -ae, f., maggot, bookworm; "tineal."—trux, gen. trucis, fierce, savage; "truculent."—blatta, -ae, f., cockroach.

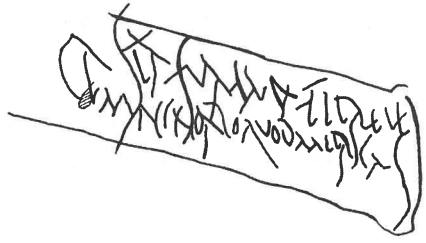
QVAESTIŌNĒS: As we have seen, word order in verse is much freer than that of prose; how might you here re-arrange the words of the first line into standard prose order? Which word in particular adds mock intensity to the bookcase's threat?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Casta sum māter, et omnīnō alō quod mercās.

CIL 4.8842: This graffito was found in a structure in Reg. III, Ins. 3, identified by the editors of CIL as a school for Pompeian youth (schola iūventūtis). The building seems to have had an association with Flora, Roman goddess of spring and flowering and the renewal of life, whose name appears twice in a nearby graffito (4.8840) and who was perhaps the school's tutelary deity; the editors of CIL take this graffito to be from a hymn in which the goddess addresses the young worshiper.—castus, -a, -um, unstained, holy, pure; "chaste," "chastity."—casta . . . māter: the designation suits Flora, as a major fertility goddess; her yearly festival, the Floralia, was regarded by prostitutes as their own special holiday.—omnīnō, adv., wholly, entirely, altogether; "omnipotent," "omniscient."—mercāre, to buy, trade; deal in, traffic in (for the likely sense here, cf. the Eng. idiom, "in all your dealings" = "all that you deal with"); "mercantile," "merchant."

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte!—quid agitis? We've been seeing quid in that idiom (how are you doing? not what are you doing?) ever since Capvt II, and do you recall quid novī, what's new?, from the discussion of the genitive of the whole in Capvt XV? Even before beginning your study of Latin you'd likely encountered the common phrase quid prō quō, one thing in return for another (= "tit for tat"—quid was often equivalent to the indefinite something) and you may even have run into quidnunc, a "busybody" (lit., what-now?!). The interrogative adjective has also come into English: quō jūre (= classical iūre), by what (legal) right, quō animō, with what intention, and quō modō, in what manner. You learned iaciō, iacere, iēcī, iactum in Capvt XV: you can now recognize the perfect passive form in Julius Caesar's famous dictum, alea iacta est, the die has been cast, a remark he made in 49 B.C. when crossing the Rubicon river in northern Italy (see Map 1) and embarking upon civil war with Pompey the Great. Discipulī discipulaeque, valēte!

CAPVT XX

Fourth Declension; Ablatives of Place from Which and Separation

GRAMMATICA

FOURTH DECLENSION

The fourth declension is easily learned and contains relatively few nouns; most are masculine, with the nominative singular in -us, but there are some feminines, also in -us, and a few neuters, with the nominative singular in -ū. To decline, simply add the new endings presented below to the base; note that the characteristic vowel u appears in all endings except the dative and ablative plural (and even there a few nouns have -ubus for -ibus) and that, of all the -us endings, only the masculine and feminine nominative singular has a short -u-.

	frūctus, -ūs, m.	cornū, -ūs, n.	Endings
	fruit	horn	M. & F.	N.
Nom.	frŭctus	córnū	-us	-ū
Gen.	frŭctūs	córnūs	-ūs	-ūs
Dat.	frŭctuī	córnū	-uī	-ū
Acc.	frŭctum	córnū	-um	-ū
Abl.	frŭctū	córnū	-ū	-ū
Nom.	frŭctūs	córnua	-ūs	-ua
Gen.	frŭctuum	córnuum	-uum	-uum
Dat.	frŭctibus	córnibus	-ibus	-ibus
Acc.	frŭctūs	córnua	-ūs	-ua
Abl.	frŭctibus	córnibus	-ibus	-ibus

Remember that there are also -us nouns in the second and third declensions, e.g., amīcus and corpus; it is a noun's genitive ending, not the nominative, that determines its declension, so it is imperative that you memorize the full vocabulary entry for every new noun you encounter. Recall, too, that a noun and modifying adjective, though they must agree in number, gender, and case, will not necessarily have the same endings, hence frūctus dulcis, frūctūs dulcis, etc., sweet fruit; manus mea, manūs meae, etc., my hand; cornū longum, cornūs longī, etc., a long horn; etc.

ABLATIVES OF PLACE FROM WHICH AND SEPARATION

The ablatives of place from which and separation are common and closely related constructions (which you should add to your list of ablative uses). The principal difference is that the ABLATIVE OF PLACE FROM WHICH, already encountered in your readings, regularly involves a verb of active motion from one place to another; nearly always, too, the ablative is governed by one of the prepositions ab, dē, or ex (away from, down from, out of):

Graecī ā patriā suā ad Italiam nāvigāvērunt. The Greeks sailed from their (own) country to Italy.
Flūmen dē montibus in mare flūxit. The river flowed down from the mountains into the sea.
Multī ex agrīs in urbem venient. Many will come from the country into the city.
Cicerō hostēs ab urbe mīsit. Cicero sent the enemy away from the city.

The ABLATIVE OF SEPARATION, as the terminology suggests, implies only that some person or thing is separate from another; there is no movement from one place to another; and sometimes there is no preposition, particularly with certain verbs meaning "to free," "to lack," and "to deprive," which commonly take an ablative of separation:

Cicerō hostēs ab urbe prohibuit, Cicero kept the enemy away from the city (cf. the similar example above).
Eōs timōre līberāvit. He freed them from fear.
Agricolae pecūniā saepe carēbant. The farmers were often lacking money.

VOCĀBVLA

Recall that there are -us nouns, not just in the fourth declension, but in the second and third as well, e.g., amīcus and corpus; it is a noun's genitive ending, not the nominative, that identifies its declension, so it is imperative to memorize the full vocabulary entry for every new noun. Coniūrātī is found only in the plural, and logically so—can you explain why? Comparing such forms as frūctus and frūctūs provides a reminder that macrons often signal important differences of meaning and usage and so must be learned as part of a word's spelling and pronunciation; always practice new paradigms and vocabulary by listening (to your instructor and/or the online audio, and the CDs too, if you have them) and repeating them aloud: semper audī prōnūntiāque! As you learn the new vocabulary, decline some noun-adjective pairs such as sēnsus commūnis, manus dextra, and genū sinistrum.

coniūrātī, coniūrātōrum, m. pl., conspirators (conjure, conjurer; cf. coniūrātiō, conspiracy, conjuration) córnū, córnūs, n., horn (corn—not the grain, but a thick growth of skin; cornea, corner, cornet, cornucopia, unicorn) frŭctus, frŭctūs, m., fruit; profit, benefit, enjoyment (fructify, fructose, frugal) génū, génūs, n., knee (genuflect, genuflection, genual; "knee" is cognate) mánus, mánūs, f., hand; handwriting; band (manual, manufacture, manumit, manuscript, emancipate, manacle, manage, manicle, maneuver) métus, métūs, m., fear, dread, anxiety (meticulous; cf. metuere, to fear, dread) mōns, móntis, m., mountain (mount, mountainous, Montana, amount, catamount, paramount, surmount, tantamount) senātus, senātūs, m., senate (senator, senatorial; related to senex, as the senate was a council of "elders") sĕnsus, sĕnsūs, m., feeling, sense (sensation, sensory, sensual, sensuous, senseless, insensate, sensible, sensitive; cf. sentiō) sérvitūs, servitŭtis, f., servitude, slavery (service; cf. servō) spĭritus, spĭritūs, m., breath, breathing; spirit, soul (spiritual, spiritous, conspire, inspire, expire, respiratory, transpire; cf. spīrāre, to breathe) vérsus, vérsūs, m., line of verse (versify, versification) commŭnis, commŭne, common, general, of/for the community (communal, commune, communicate, communicable, communion, communism, community, excommunicate) déxter, déxtra, déxtrum, right, right-hand (dexterity, dextrous, ambidextrous)
cáreō, carēre, cáruī, caritūrum + abl. of separation, to be without, be deprived of, want, lack; be free from (caret—not carat) dēféndō, dēféndere, dēféndī, dēfĕnsum, to ward off; defend, protect (defendant, defense, defensible, defensive, fence, fencing, fend, fender, offend) discĕdō, discēdere, discéssī, discéssum, to go away, depart (proceed, secede; do not confuse with discō) ŏdī, ōdísse, ōsum, a DEFECTIVE VERB (see comments on coepī, Capvt XVII), having chiefly perf. system forms with pres. force, to hate (odium, odious) prohíbeō, prohibēre, prohíbuī, prohíbitum, to keep (back), prevent, hinder, restrain, prohibit (prohibitive, prohibition, prohibitory; cf. habeō) prōnŭntiō, prōnūntiāre, prōnūntiāvī, prōnūntiātum, to proclaim, announce; declaim; pronounce (pronouncement, pronunciation; cf. nūntius, messenger, message)

Cicero Urges Catiline's Departure from Rome

Habēmus senātūs cōnsultum contrā tē, Catilīna, vehemēns et grave; ācre iūdicium habēmus, et vīrēs et cōnsilium cīvitās nostra habet. Quid est, Catilīna? Cūr remanēs? Ō dī immortālēs! Discēde nunc ex hāc urbe cum malā manū scelerātōrum; magnō metū mē līberābis, sī omnēs istōs coniūrātōs tēcum ēdūcēs. Nisi nunc discēdēs, tē cito ēiciēmus. Nihil in cīvitāte nostrā tē dēlectāre potest. Age, age! Deinde curre ad Manlium, istum amīcum malum; tē diū dēsīderāvit. Incipe nunc; parā cōpiās et gere bellum in cīvitātem! Brevī tempore tē omnēsque tuōs, hostēs patriae, vincēmus, et omnēs vōs poenās gravēs semper dabitis.

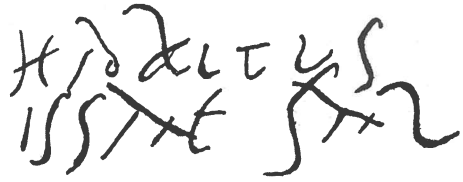
Cicero Cat. 1.1.3ff: Another passage adapted from Cicero's first oration against Catiline; be sure to read again the other excerpts, and accompanying notes, in Capita XI and XIV (the selection presented here comes shortly after the passage of the speech excerpted in Capvt XI).—cōnsultum, -ī, n., decree; "consult," "consultant."—vehemēns, gen. vehementis, = Eng.; "vehemence."—scelerātus, -a, -um, wicked, criminal, defiled; adj. from scelus.—Manlium: Manlius was one of Catiline's principal fellow conspirators.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What several reasons does Cicero give Catiline to encourage his departure from the city? Which are most compelling, which somewhat less so or even facetious? What is unusual, and effective, in the positioning of the adjectives in the opening sentence?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Habitus Issae sal(ūtem)!



CIL 4.8954: Habitus scribbled this note to a lady friend near the entrance to a shop in Reg. III, Ins. 7. What was her name, i.e., in the nom. form, and what case is it here?—salūtem: if you do not recall the meaning and case usage of this word, see the graffiti in Capita VIII and X; here, as often in graffiti, the word was abbreviated, but you can practice a bit of "forgery" by writing out the full word, replicating as nearly as possible Habitus' handwriting: you'll have to be creative with the final -m, but specimens of the other three letters appear in the first two words. By the way, actual forgeries of "ancient" graffiti are not uncommon; folks prowling through Pompeii in relatively modern times have scrawled their own Lat. messages on the walls of ruins throughout the city or added words or phrases next to or beneath genuine ancient graffiti, many of them published separately in CIL 4 and labeled as Falsae vel (= aut) Suspectae.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! This chapter's Vocābula provides some "handy" items: can you explain the etymologies of "manumit," "manuscript," and "manufacture"? A "manual" is the Latin equivalent of the Germanic "handbook." Then there's the old Roman proverb manus manum lavat (lavāre, to bathe, gives us "lavatory"), one hand washes the other. You can see the right-handed bias in the etymologies of "dexterity" and "sinister" (from the ancient superstition that bad signs and omens appeared to one's left) and even "ambidextrous" (from ambō, both, two: is having "two right hands" better than having two left hands?).

And speaking of hands, how about fingers? The Latin word is digitus, -ī, which gives us "digit," "digital," "prestidigitation" (for a magician's quick fingers), and even "digitalis," a heart medication from a plant whose flowers are finger-shaped. These appendages are also handy for counting (numerāre): prīmus digitus, secundus digitus, tertius . . . etc. (Potestisne numerāre omnēs digitōs vestrōs, discipulī et discipulae? If not, look back at Capvt XV and review your numerī!) The Romans had special names for each of the fingers, beginning with the thumb, pollex, then index (from indicāre, to point), medius (middle) or īnfāmis (infamous, evil—not all our body language is new!), quārtus or ānulārius (where they often wore ānulī, rings: see "Ringo," Capvt XXXI), and minimus (the smallest) or auriculārius (the parvus digitus, and so handy for scratching or cleaning one's aurēs!). Valēte!

CAPVT XXI

Third and Fourth Conjugations: Present System Passive

GRAMMATICA

THIRD AND FOURTH CONJUGATION PRESENT SYSTEM PASSIVE

The pattern of substituting passive endings for active endings, which you learned in Capvt XVIII for the present system passives of first and second conjugation verbs, generally applies to third and fourth conjugation verbs as well; the only exceptions are in the second person singular present tense (set in bold in the following paradigms) and the present infinitive of third conjugation verbs.

Present Indicative Passive

1. ágor	aúdior	cápior
2. ágeris	audīris	cáperis
3. ágitur	audītur	cápitur
1. ágimur	audīmur	cápimur
2. agíminī	audīminī	capíminī
3. agúntur	audiúntur	capiúntur

Future Indicative Passive

1. ágar	aúdiar	cápiar
2. agḗris	audiḗris	capiḗris
3. agḗtur	audiḗtur	capiḗtur
1. agḗmur	audiḗmur	capiḗmur
2. agḗminī	audiḗminī	capiḗminī
3. agéntur	audiéntur	capiéntur

Imperfect Indicative Passive

1. agḗbar	audiḗbar	capiḗbar
2. agēbā́ris	audiēbā́ris	capiēbā́ris
3. agēbā́tur	audiēbā́tur	capiēbā́tur
1. agēbā́mur	audiēbā́mur	capiēbā́mur
2. agēbā́minī	audiēbā́minī	capiēbā́minī
3. agēbántur	audiēbántur	capiēbántur

Be careful not to confuse the second person singular present and future third conjugation forms, which are distinguished only by the vowel quantity (ageris vs. agēris). Note that capiō and audiō are identical throughout the present system active and passive, except for variations in -i- vs. -ī- (in the present tense only) and the second singular passive caperis vs. audīris. Remember that the perfect passive system for third and fourth conjugation verbs follows the universal pattern introduced in Capvt XIX.

Present Passive Infinitive

The present infinitive passive of the fourth conjugation is formed by changing the final -e to -ī, as in the first two conjugations; but in the third conjugation, including -iō verbs, the whole -ere is changed to -ī.

audíre, to hear	audírī, to be heard (cf. laudárī, monḗrī)
ágere, to drive	ágī, to be driven cápere, to take	cápī, to be taken

Synopsis

You can now provide a synopsis of regular verbs of all four conjugations in the indicative mood; following is a sample third person plural synopsis of agō:

	Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut. Perf.	Pluperf.
Act.	águnt	ágent	agḗbant	ēgḗrunt	ḗgerint	ḗgerant
Pass.	agúntur	agéntur	agēbántur	áctī sunt	áctī érunt	áctī érant

VOCĀBVLA

Āh (English ah or aha)!—more look-alikes in this list: casa and causa. But say them aloud—prōnūntiā—and you'll hear and learn the difference. N.B. the common use of ablative causā with a preceding genitive, e.g., pecūniae causā, for the sake of money, or virtūtis causā, on account of virtue. There are several new third declension nouns here; if you don't recognize which are i-stems, review Capvt XIV. And practice synopses of some third and fourth conjugation verbs—then compare your work with the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum.

cása, cásae, f., house, cottage, hut (casino) caúsa, caúsae, f., cause, reason; case, situation; caúsā, abl. with a preceding gen., for the sake of, on account of (accuse, because, excuse) fenéstra, fenéstrae, f., window (fenestrated, fenestration, fenestella, defenestration) fīnis, fīnis, m., end, limit, boundary; purpose; fīnēs, fīnium, boundaries, territory (affinity, confine, define, final, finale, finance, fine, finesse, finial, finicky, finish, finite, infinite, paraffin, refine) gēns, géntis, f., clan, race, nation, people (gentile, gentle, genteel, gentry; cf. genus) múndus, múndī, m., world, universe (mundane, extramundane, demimonde) nāvis, nāvis, f., ship, boat (naval, navy, navigate, nave; cf. nāvigāre, nauta) sálūs, salūtis, f., health, safety; greeting (salubrious, salutary, salutation, salute, salutatorian, salutatory; cf. salveō, salvus) Trōia, Trōiae, f., Troy (Trojan) vīcīnus, vīcīnī, m., and vīcīna, vīcīnae, f., neighbor (vicinity, vicinal, vicinage) vúlgus, vúlgī, n. (sometimes m.), the common people, mob, rabble (vulgar, vulgarity, vulgarize, vulgate, divulge) ásper, áspera, ásperum, rough, harsh (asperity, exasperate, exasperation) átque or ac (both forms used before consonants, atque regularly before vowels or h), conj., and also, and even, and in fact íterum, adv., again, a second time (iterate, iterative, reiterate, reiteration) contíneō, continēre, contínuī, conténtum, to hold together, contain, keep, enclose, restrain (content, discontent, malcontent, continual; cf. teneō) iúbeō, iubēre, iússī, iússum, to bid, order, command (jussive) labōrō, labōrāre, labōrāvī, labōrātum, to labor; be in distress (laboratory, laborer, belabor; cf. labor) rápiō, rápere, rápuī, ráptum, to seize, snatch, carry away (rapacious, rapid, rapine, rapture, ravage, ravish; cf. ēripere, to snatch away) relínquō, relínquere, relīquī, relíctum, to leave behind, leave, abandon, desert (relinquish, reliquary, relict, relic, delinquent, dereliction) scíō, scīre, scīvī, scītum, to know (science, scientific, conscience, conscious, prescience, scilicet; cf. scientia, nescīre, to not know, be ignorant of) tángō, tángere, tétigī, tāctum, to touch (tangent, tangible, tact, tactile, contact, contagious, contiguous, contingent, integer, taste, tax)

11. Vēritās nimis saepe labōrat; exstinguitur numquam. (Livy.—exstinguō, -ere; "extinguish," "extinct.")

Vergil's Messianic Eclogue

Venit iam magna aetās nova; dē caelō mittitur puer, quī vītam deōrum habēbit deōsque vidēbit et ipse vidēbitur ab illīs. Hic puer reget mundum cui virtūtēs patris pācem dedērunt. Pauca mala, autem, remanēbunt, quae hominēs iubēbunt labōrāre atque bellum asperum gerere. Erunt etiam altera bella atque iterum ad Trōiam magnus mittētur Achillēs. Tum, puer, ubi iam longa aetās tē virum fēcerit, erunt nūllī labōrēs, nūlla bella; nautae ex nāvibus discēdent, agricolae quoque iam agrōs relinquent, terra ipsa omnibus hominibus omnia parābit. Currite, aetātēs; incipe, parve puer, scīre mātrem, et erit satis spīritūs mihi tua dīcere facta.

Vergil Ecl. 4: Vergil (Publius Vergilius Maro, 70–19 B.C.) is best known for his epic poem, the Aeneid, but other, earlier works included his quasi-didactic poem, the Georgics, a glorification of farming, and the Eclogues, a collection of 10 short pastoral poems extolling the shepherd's life. The fourth Eclogue, composed ca. 40 B.C., stood apart from the others, as it heralded the world's rebirth and a new Golden Age of peace and freedom from toil that would be ushered in with the birth of a divine boy child; readers ancient and modern have speculated over the child's identity, some supposing reference to the families of Octavian and/or Mark Antony, but the poem's hopeful, messianic message, taken by many early Christians as a prophecy of the birth of Christ, may have been intended more generally to reflect contemporary longing for an end to Roman civil war.—altera bella: here = the same wars over again.—scīre mātrem: i.e., to be born, but what is the lit. meaning?—spīritūs: here, as often, in the sense of inspiration.)

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Which aspects of this prophecy strike you as especially mystical? Where does the narrator address the boy, and what do you sense is the intended effect?

Crēscēns Crȳsērōtī salūtem! Quid agit tibi dexter ocellus?

CIL 4.8347: Graffito found near the entrance to the kitchen of the House of Menander (Reg. I, Ins. 10). We have seen the cognomen Crēscēns before; this is likely a different fellow (the name was common), and the editors of CIL speculate that he might have been the family's doorman (ōstiārius), as his name was also found in the house's entranceway (vestibulum). The exact context is unclear, but Crescens seems to be asking Cryseros about a friend or lover; the second sentence is in dactylic meter (˘˘/-˘˘/-˘˘/--) and may be a quotation from an amatory poem.—Crȳsērōs (or Chrȳsērōs), Crȳsērōtis, m., C(h)ryseros, a Greek cognomen, probably a slave's or a freedman's, meaning "golden."—salūtem: cf. the graffiti in Capita VIII, X, and XIX.—quid: with agis/agit commonly = how?, as in the conversational quid agis, how are you (doing)?—tibi: here, as often, the dat. has possessive force.—ocellus: diminutive of oculus, lit. little eye, but in an amatory context = darling, comparable to the Eng. expression "apple of my eye"; with ocellus in this sense dexter essentially = cārus (the expression survives in modern It. occhio destro). A less artful interpretation would be simply opthalmological!—in that case, what would Crescens quite literally be asking?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET ŪTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulae atque discipulī! Quid novī? Well, how about some more well-known Latin phrases and mottoes related to the verba nova in this chapter's Vocābula? First, for you Godfather fans, there's Italian cosa nostra, from causa nostra. Vestra causa tōta nostra est is the motto of the American Classical League, a national organization for teachers of Latin, Greek, and classical humanities. The University of Georgia's motto is et docēre et rērum exquīrere causās, both to teach and to seek out the causes of things (i.e., to conduct research—for rērum, see the next chapter). Here are some others: finis corōnat opus, the end crowns the work; gēns togāta, the toga-clad nation (a phrase Vergil applies to Rome, where the toga was a man's formal attire); tangere ulcus, to touch a sore spot (lit., ulcer); sīc trānsit glōria mundī, so passes the glory of the world (Thomas à Kempis, on the transitory nature of worldly things—some comedian who shall forever remain nameless has offered an alternate translation, to wit, "Gloria always gets sick on the subway at the beginning of the week"!!!); and the abbreviation sc., meaning supply (something omitted from a text but readily understood), comes from scīlicet, short for scīre licet, literally it is permitted for you to understand. Hic est fīnis: valēte!

CAPVT XXII

Fifth Declension; Ablative of Place Where and Summary of Ablative Uses

GRAMMATICA

THE FIFTH DECLENSION

This chapter introduces the fifth and last of the Latin noun declensions. The characteristic vowel is -ē-, and -ēī or -eī is the genitive and dative ending (the gen./dat. -e- is long when preceded by a vowel, short when preceded by a consonant; cf. diēī and reī below). Nouns of this declension are all feminine, except diēs (day) and its compound merīdiēs (midday), which are masculine. To decline, follow the usual pattern of base plus endings:

	rēs, reī, f. thing	diēs, diēī, m. day	Case Endings
Nom.	rēs	díēs	-ēs
Gen.	réī	diḗī	-eī, -ēī
Dat.	réī	diḗī	-eī, -ēī
Acc.	rem	díem	-em
Abl.	rē	díē	-ē
Nom.	rēs	díēs	-ēs
Gen.	rḗrum	diḗrum	-ērum
Dat.	rḗbus	diḗbus	-ēbus
Acc.	rēs	díēs	-ēs
Abl.	rḗbus	diḗbus	-ēbus

Note that the genitive and dative singular are identical (true of the first declension also), as are the nominative singular and the nominative and accusative plural (the vocatives, too, of course), and the dative and ablative plural (true of all declen-sions); word order, context, and such cues as subject-verb and noun-adjective agreement will help you distinguish among those ambiguous forms in a sentence.

ABLATIVE OF PLACE WHERE AND SUMMARY OF ABLATIVE USES

You have thus far been introduced to these ablative uses: object of a preposition (Capvt II), means, manner, accompaniment (Capvt XIV), ablative with cardinal numerals and ablative of time (Capvt XV), agent (Capvt XVIII), place from which and separation (Capvt XX). You have also encountered the ABLATIVE OF PLACE WHERE construction, a noun in the ablative, typically with in, in/on, or sub, under, describing where someone or something is located or an action is occurring:

In magnā casā vīvunt. They live in a large house.

Nāvis sub aquā fuit. The ship was under water.

Some ablative case uses require a preposition in Latin, others do not, and in some instances the practice was variable. Notably, in the ablative of manner construction, when the noun is modified by an adjective, cum is frequently omitted; if cum is used, it is usually preceded by the adjective (e.g., id magnā cūrā fēcit and id magnā cum cūrā fēcit, both meaning he did it with great care). The following summary reviews each of the ablative uses studied thus far:

Ablatives with a Preposition

The ablative is used as a simple object of a preposition and specifically with:

1. cum to indicate ACCOMPANIMENT:
   Cum amīcō id scrīpsit. He wrote it with his friend.
2. cum to indicate MANNER (whether or not an adjective is used):
   Cum cūrā id scrīpsit. He wrote it with care.
   Magnā cum cūrā id scrīpsit. He wrote it with great care.
3. in and sub to indicate PLACE WHERE:
   In urbe id scrīpsit. He wrote it in the city.
4. ab, dē, ex to indicate PLACE FROM WHICH:
   Ex urbe id mīsit. He sent it from the city.
5. ab, dē, ex to indicate SEPARATION:
   Ab urbe eōs prohibuit. He kept them from the city.
6. ab to indicate PERSONAL AGENT:
   Ab amīcō id scrīptum est. It was written by his friend.
7. ex or dē following certain CARDINAL NUMERALS to indicate a group of which some part is specified:
   Trēs ex nāvibus discessērunt. Three of the ships departed.

Ablatives without a Preposition

The ablative is used without a preposition to indicate:

1. MEANS/INSTRUMENT:
   Suā manū id scrīpsit. He wrote it with his own hand.
2. MANNER, when an adjective is used:
   Magnā cūrā id scrīpsit. He wrote it with great care.
3. TIME WHEN/WITHIN WHICH:
   Eō tempore or ūnā hōrā id scrīpsit. He wrote it at that time or in one hour.
4. SEPARATION, especially with ideas of freeing, lacking, depriving:
   Metū eōs līberāvit. He freed them from fear.

VOCĀBVLA

Remember that for some fifth declension nouns the genitive/dative singular ending is -ēī and for others -eī; learn these new nouns, like all vocabulary, by looking carefully at their spelling, macrons included, listening to them at www.wheelockslatin.com (or on the CDs), and then repeating each aloud correctly. Do not confuse diēs and deus—though the two, day/daylight and god, derive from the same Indo-European root, which is also reflected in the names of the sky god Zeus and Iuppiter (a form later reconfigured as diēs pater). And don't forget to nasalize the -gn- in ignis, i.e., prōnūntiā as if it were spelled ingnis. Practice with some of the new words by declining fidēs incerta and fēlīx spēs; compare your work with the paradigms in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 495–96.

díēs, diḗī, m., day (diary, dial, dismal, diurnal, journal, adjourn, journey, meridian, sojourn) férrum, férrī, n., iron; sword (ferric, ferrite, ferro-; Fe, the chemical symbol for iron) fídēs, fídeī, f., faith, trust, trustworthiness, fidelity; promise, guarantee, protection (confide, diffident, infidel, perfidy, fealty)

ígnis, ígnis, m., fire (igneous, ignite, ignition) módus, módī, m., measure, bound, limit; manner, method, mode, way (model, moderate, modern, modest, modicum, modify, mood)

rēs, réī, f., thing, matter, property, business, affair (real, realistic, realize, reality, real estate, rebus) rēs pṻblica, réī pṻblicae (often seen as a single word, rēspṻblica), f., state, commonwealth, republic (Republican) spēs, spéī, f., hope (despair, desperate; cf. spērāre, to hope) aéquus, aéqua, aéquum, level, even; calm; equal, just; favorable (equable, equanimity, equation, equator, equilateral, equilibrium, equinox, equity, equivalent, equivocal, inequity, iniquity, adequate, coequal) fēlīx, gen. fēlīcis, lucky, fortunate, happy (felicitation, felicitous, infelicitous, felicity, infelicity, Felix) incértus, incérta, incértum (in-certus), uncertain, unsure, doubtful (incertitude) Latīnus, Latīna, Latīnum, Latin (Latinate, Latinist, Latinity, Latinize, Latino) médius, média, médium, middle; used partitively, middle of: media urbs, middle of the city (Mediterranean, medium, median, mediate, mean, medieval, meridian, immediate, intermediary) quóndam, adv., formerly, once (quondam) últrā, adv. and prep. + acc., on the other side of, beyond (ultra, ultrasonic, ultrasound, ultraviolet, outrage, outrageous) prōtinus, adv., immediately cérnō, cérnere, crēvī, crētum, to distinguish, discern, perceive (discernible, discreet, discrete, discretion) ērípiō, ērípere, ērípuī, ēréptum (ē+rapiō), to snatch away, take away; rescue (for the VOWEL WEAKENING seen in the compound form -ripiō from rapiō, see "Two Rules of Phonetic Change," p. 484–85) ínquit, defective verb, he says or said, placed after one or more words of a direct quotation but usually translated before the quote tóllō, tóllere, sústulī, sublātum, to raise, lift up; take away, remove, destroy (extol, sublate, sublation; cf. tolerō; the principal parts are another example of SUPPLETION: see above, p. 91)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Before translating, practice with the new grammar by scanning the readings and identifying the number, gender, case, and use of all fifth declension nouns, as well as the use of each ablative noun and pronoun.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Vīcīnī nostrī sē in genua prōtinus iēcērunt et omnēs deōs in mundō laudāvērunt.
2. Gentēs Graeciae ingentibus montibus et parvīs fīnibus continēbantur.
3. Quis iussit illam rem pūblicam servitūte asperā līberārī?
4. "Iste," inquit, "sceleribus suīs brevī tempore tollētur."
5. Contrā aliās manūs malōrum cīvium eaedem rēs iterum parābuntur; senātus rem pūblicam dēfendet et istī ex fīnibus nostrīs cito discēdent.
6. Senectūs senēs ā mediīs rēbus saepe prohibet.
7. At rēs gravēs neque vī neque spē geruntur sed cōnsiliō.

8. Sī versūs hōrum duōrum poētārum neglegētis, magnā parte Rōmānārum litterārum carēbitis.
9. Eōdem tempore nostrae spēs salūtis commūnis vestrā fidē altae sunt, spīritūs sublātī sunt, et timōrēs relictī sunt.
10. Nova genera scelerum in hāc urbe inveniuntur quod multī etiam nunc bonīs mōribus et sēnsū commūnī carent ac nātūram sinistram habent.
11. Vulgus multa ex fenestrīs casārum ēiciēbat.
12. Great fidelity can now be found in this commonwealth.
13. His new hopes had been destroyed by the common fear (what would the correct forms be of both metus and timor?) of uncertain things.
14. On that day the courage and the faith of the brave Roman men and women were seen by all.
15. The tyrant knew the enemy's plans, and with great hope he ordered those ships to be destroyed.
16. He could not defend himself with his left hand or his right.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Dum vīta est, spēs est. (Cicero.)
2. Aequum animum in rēbus difficilibus servā. (Horace.)
3. Ubi tyrannus est, ibi plānē est nūlla rēs pūblica. (*Cicero.—plānē, adv., clearly; "plain," "explain.")
4. Fuērunt quondam in hāc rē pūblicā virī magnae virtūtis et antīquae fideī. (Cicero.)
5. Hanc rem pūblicam salvam esse volumus. (*Cicero.—volumus: we wish; "volition," "malevolent.")
6. Spēs coniūrātōrum mollibus sententiīs multōrum cīvium alitur. (Cicero.—mollis, -e, soft, mild; "mollify," "emollient.")
7. Rēs pūblica cōnsiliīs meīs eō diē ex igne atque ferrō ērepta est. (Cicero.)
8. Quod bellum ōdērunt, prō pāce cum fidē labōrābant. (Livy.)
9. Dīc mihi bonā fidē: tū eam pecūniam ex eius manū dextrā nōn ēripuistī? (Plautus.)
10. Amīcus certus in rē incertā cernitur. (Ennius.)
11. Homērus audītōrem in mediās rēs rapit. (Horace.)
12. Fēlīx est quī potest causās rērum intellegere; et fortūnātus ille quī deōs antīquōs dīligit. (Vergil.)
13. Stōicus noster, "Vitium," inquit, "nōn est in rēbus sed in animō ipsō." (Seneca.—Stōicus, -ī, m., a Stoic philosopher; "stoic," "stoical.")
14. Et mihi rēs subiungam, nōn mē rēbus. (Horace.—subiungō, -ere, to subject; "subjoin," "subjunctive.")
15. Est modus in rēbus; sunt certī fīnēs ultrā quōs virtūs invenīrī nōn potest. (Horace.)
16. Hoc, Fortūna, tibi vidētur aequum? (*Martial.)

A Visit from the Young Interns

Languēbam: sed tū comitātus prōtinus ad mē vēnistī centum, Symmache, discipulīs.
Centum mē tetigēre manūs aquilōne gelātae:
nōn habuī febrem, Symmache, nunc habeō!

Martial Epig. 5.9: Anyone who has ever visited the health center of a university that has a medical school can fully sympathize with this complaint!—if you weren't sick when you GOT there, you might well be when you LEFT! Meter: elegiac couplet.—languēre, to be weak, sick; "languid," "languish."—comitātus, -a, -um, accompanied (by); "concomitance," "concomitant."—Symmachus: the name of this doctor, a med school "professor," is Greek, which adds an ethnic slur to the piece, not uncommon in Roman satire.—centum . . . discipulīs: abl. of agent with comitātus; the prep. was often omitted in poetry.—tetigēre: = tetigērunt; for this alternate ending, see Capvt XII.—aquilō, -lōnis, m., the north wind.—gelātus, -a, -um, chilled, here modifying centum . . . manūs; "gel," "gelatin."—febris, febris, f., fever; "febrile," "feverish."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: The disjointedness of the phrases comitātus . . . centum . . . discipulīs and centum . . . manūs . . . gelātae is deliberate; which pairs of words are emphasized and what is the purpose? Comment on the arrangement of the two adverb-verb phrases in the last verse and how the word order helps underscore the punch-line (Martial's epigrams, as you have seen, nearly always have a zinger in the closing verse!).

On Ambition and Literature, Both Latin and Greek

Poētae per litterās hominibus magnam perpetuamque fāmam dare possunt; multī virī, igitur, litterās dē suīs rēbus scrībī cupiunt. Trahimur omnēs studiō laudis et multī glōriā dūcuntur, quae aut in litterīs Graecīs aut Latīnīs invenīrī potest. Quī, autem, videt multum frūctum glōriae in versibus Latīnīs sed nōn in Graecīs, nimium errat, quod litterae Graecae leguntur in omnibus ferē gentibus, sed Latīnae in fīnibus suīs continentur.

Cicero Arch. 11.26, 10.23: Review the passage about Alexander the Great from this same speech which you read in Capvt XIII, and recall that the speech was in defense of the Greek poet Archias.—ferē, adv., almost.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is Cicero's initial observation regarding the benefits that literature can provide an ambitious man?—how does this compare with the anecdote he relates about Alexander elsewhere in the speech? Explain the author's point in comparing the advantages of Greek and Latin literature: is his position surprising to you?—why or why not? Identify the device of word order seen in both trahimur omnēs . . . multī . . . dūcuntur and leguntur in omnibus ferē gentibus . . . in fīnibus suīs continentur; what is the writer's purpose in employing this arrangement?

In this notice (the top two lines in the photo), which appears immediately above another one painted on the street-front wall of a wool processing shop on the Via dell'Abbondanza (Reg. IX, Ins. 7), the name of the woman lobbying for Polybius' election, Cuculla, has been painted over, perhaps because the candidate, or another of his supporters, did not welcome the endorsement.—duumvir, -ī, m.,

ETYMOLOGIA

Connected with diēs is the adj. diurnus, daily, whence come the words for "day" in It. and Fr.: It. giorno, Fr. jour, journée; cf. Sp. día; Port. dia, diurno; Old Occ. jorn; Rom. ziua. In late Lat. there was a form diurnālis, from which derive It. giornale, Fr. journal, Port. diurnal, Old Occ. jornal, Eng. "journal"; cf. Sp. diario, Rom. zilnic. Eng. "dismal" stems ultimately from diēs malus. The stem of fidēs can be found in the following words even though it may not be immediately obvious: affidavit, defy, affiance, fiancé. Eng. "faith" is from early Old Fr. feit, feid, from Lat. fidem. Other words connected with modus are: modulate, accommodate, commodious, discommode, incommode, à la mode, modus operandi.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Now that you've encountered merīdiēs, you understand a.m. and p.m., from ante and post merīdiem. Your physician might prescribe a medication diēbus alternīs, every other day, or diēbus tertiīs, every third day, or even b.i.d. or t.i.d., bis in diē or ter in diē (if you've thought about those last two twice or thrice and still can't figure them out, look back at Capvt XV!). Other items you might encounter one of these days: diem ex diē, day by day; diēs fēlīx, a lucky day; the legal terms diēs jūridicus and nōn jūridicus, days when court is and is not in session; and the Diēs Īrae, a medieval hymn about the Day of Judgment, part of the requiem mass. And surely you follow Horace's advice every day and carpe diem (an agricultural metaphor, since carpō, carpere really means to harvest or pluck from the vine or stalk—so your days, once seized, should be a bountiful cornucopia). Now you know, too, what is meant by the phrase amīcus certus in rē incertā; a bonā fidē agreement is made with good faith (recognize the ablative usage?); and if your "friend indeed" is your trusty dog, you should consider dubbing him "Fido." Carpite omnēs diēs, discipulī discipulaeque, et valēte!

CAPVT XXIII

Participles

GRAMMATICA

PARTICIPLES (participium, -ī, n.)

Like English, Latin has a set of verbal adjectives, i.e., adjectives formed from a verb stem, called PARTICIPLES. Regular transitive verbs in Latin have four participles, two of them active voice (the present and future), and two passive (future and perfect). The present active and future passive participles are formed on a verb's present stem, while the perfect passive and future active are formed on the PARTICIPIAL STEM, found by dropping the endings from the perfect passive participle, which is itself usually a verb's fourth principal part: i.e., laudāt- from laudātus, -a, -um:

	Active	Passive
Pres.	present stem + -ns (gen. -ntis)	———
Perf.	———	partic. stem + -us, -a, -um
Fut.	participial stem + -ūrus, -ūra, -ūrum	pres. stem + -ndus, -nda, -ndum

This pattern can perhaps best be recalled by memorizing the participles of agō, in which the difference between the present stem and the participial stem is sufficient to eliminate any confusion. It is also helpful to note that the base of the pres*ent* participle is marked by -nt-, the fut*ur*e active by -ūr-, and the future passive, often called the "geru*nd*ive," by -nd-.

agō, agere, ēgi, āctum, to drive, do, lead, act

	Active	Passive
Pres.	ágēns, agéntis, doing	———
Perf.	———	ā́ctus, -a, -um, done, having been done
Fut.	āctū́rus, -a, -um, about to do, going to do	agéndus, -a, -um, (about) to be done, deserving to be done

English derivatives neatly illustrate the sense of three of these participles: "agent" (from agēns), a person doing something; "act" (āctus, -a, -um), something done;

"agenda" (agendus, -a, -um), something to be done. The participles of three of the model verbs follow:

	Act.	Pass.	Act.	Pass.	Act.	Pass.
Pres.	laúdāns	———	aúdiēns	———	cápiēns	———
Perf.	———	laudātus	———	audītus	———	cáptus
Fut.	laudātūrus	laudándus	audītūrus	audiéndus	captūrus	capiéndus

Note that fourth conjugation and third conjugation -iō verbs have -ie- in both the present active participle (-iēns, -ientis) and the future passive (-iendus, -a, -um). Notice too that while Latin has present active, perfect passive, and future active and passive participles, the equivalents of praising, having been praised, about to praise, and (about) to be praised, it lacks both a present passive participle (being praised) and a perfect active participle (having praised).

Declension of Participles

Three of the four participles are declined on the pattern of magnus, -a, -um. Only the present participle has third declension forms, following the model of potēns (Capvt XVI), except that the ablative singular sometimes ends in -e, sometimes (especially when used strictly as an attributive adjective) in -ī; the vowel before -ns in the nominative singular is always long, but before -nt- (according to the rule learned earlier) it is always short.

Participles as Verbal Adjectives

The etymology of the term "participle," from pars + capere, to take part/share in, reflects the fact that participles share in the characteristics of both adjectives and verbs. As adjectives, participles agree in gender, number, and case with the words they modify. Sometimes also, like adjectives, they modify no expressed noun but function as nouns themselves: amāns, a lover; sapiēns, a wise man, philosopher;

venientēs, those coming. As verbs, participles have tense and voice; they may take direct objects or other constructions used with the particular verb; and they may be modified by an adverb or an adverbial phrase:

> Patrem in casā videntēs, puella et puer ad eum cucurrērunt. Seeing their father in the house, the boy and girl ran up to him.

In Latin as in English, the time of the action indicated by a participle is not absolute but relative to that of the main verb. For example, the action of a present participle is contemporaneous with the action of the verb of its clause, no matter whether that verb is a present, past, or future tense; in the above sentence it was at some past time that the children first saw and then ran toward their father (seeing him, i.e., when they saw him, they ran up to him). The time indicated by perfect and future participles is also relative, as can be seen in the following table:

1. Present participle = action contemporaneous with that of the verb (same time)
2. Perfect participle = action prior to that of the verb (time before)
3. Future participle = action subsequent to that of the verb (time after)

> Graecī nautae, videntēs Polyphēmum, timent, timuērunt, timēbunt.
> The Greek sailors, seeing Polyphemus, are afraid, were afraid, will be afraid.

> Graecī nautae, vīsī ā Polyphēmō, timent, timuērunt, timēbunt.
> The Greek sailors, (having been) seen by P., are afraid, were afraid, will be afraid.

> Graecī nautae, vīsūrī Polyphēmum, timent, timuērunt, timēbunt.
> The Greek sailors, about to see Polyphemus, are afraid, were afraid, will be afraid.

Translating Participial Phrases as Clauses

Participial phrases are used more frequently in Latin than in English, which prefers clauses with regular verbs. In translating Latin into idiomatic English, therefore, it is often preferable to transform a participial phrase into a subordinate clause. In doing so you need to consider (1) the relationship between the action in the phrase and the action in the clause to which it is attached, so you can choose an appropriate subordinating conjunction (usually "when," "since," or "although"), and (2) the relativity of tenses, so you can transform the participle into the appropriate verb tense.

Thus the example given earlier, patrem in casā videntēs, puella et puer ad eum cucurrērunt, can be translated seeing their father in the house, the girl and boy ran up to him or, more idiomatically, when they saw their father in the house, the girl and boy ran up to him. Likewise Graecī nautae, vīsī ā Polyphēmō, timuērunt is better translated when/since they had been seen [time prior to main verb] by

Polyphemus, the Greek sailors were afraid than the more literal having been seen by Polyphemus, the Greek sailors were afraid. Consider these further examples:

Māter, fīlium amāns, auxilium dat. Since she loves her son [lit., loving her son], the mother gives him assistance.

Pater, fīliam vīsūrus, casam parābat. Since he was about to see his daughter, the father was preparing the house.

Puella, in casam veniēns, gaudēbat. When she came into the house [lit., coming into the house], the girl was happy.

VOCĀBVLA

This chapter's new word-list contains, in opprimō from premō, another example of the sort of VOWEL WEAKENING common in compounds (see note on ēripiō in Capvt XXIII, and App., p. 484–85). The list also introduces another SEMI-DEPONENT verb, gaudeō, which, like audeō, audēre, ausus sum (Capvt VII), has only three principal parts and perfect system forms that are passive but have active meanings (you'll learn more about such verbs in Capvt XXXIV). For practice with the new grammar, write out the four participles for one or two of the verbs in this list, such as ēducō and vertō, include the English translations, then compare with the above paradigms.

arx, árcis, f., citadel, stronghold (possibly related to arca, box, chest, from which we get "ark")

dux, dúcis, m., leader, guide; commander, general (duke, ducal, ducat, duchess, duchy, doge; cf. dūcō)

Laocoon Speaks Out Against the Trojan Horse

Oppressī bellō longō et ā deīs āversī, ducēs Graecōrum, iam post decem annōs, magnum equum ligneum arte Minervae faciunt. Uterum multīs mīlitibus complent, equum in lītore relinquunt, et ultrā īnsulam proximam nāvigant. Trōiānī nūllās cōpiās aut nāvēs vident; omnis Trōia gaudet; panduntur portae. Dē equō, autem, Trōiānī sunt incertī. Aliī eum in urbem dūcī cupiunt; aliī eum Graecās īnsidiās appellant. Prīmus ibi ante omnēs, dē arce currēns, Lāocoōn, sacerdōs Trōiānus, haec verba dīcit: "Ō miserī cīvēs, nōn estis sānī! Quid cōgitātis? Nōnne intellegitis Graecōs et scītis īnsidiās eōrum? Aut inveniētis in istō equō multōs mīlitēs ācrēs, aut equus est machina bellī, facta contrā nōs, ventūra in urbem, vīsūra casās nostrās et populum. Aut aliquid latet. Equō nē crēdite, Trōiānī: quidquid id est, timeō Danaōs et dōna ferentēs!" Dīxit, et potentem hastam magnīs vīribus manūs sinistrae in uterum equī iēcit; stetit illa, tremēns.

Vergil Aen. 2.13–52: You read a passage adapted from Vergil's Fourth Eclogue in Capvt XXI; here, and in Capvt XXV, you will read dramatic selections, also in prose adaptation, from Book Two of his 12-volume epic poem, the Aeneid (Capvt XL presents a long, unadapted passage in its original dactylic hexameter form). In this scene the Trojan prince Aeneas tells Carthage's queen Dido of the Greeks' ruse of "the Trojan horse," a huge wooden horse they have left outside Troy's walls after seemingly abandoning their 10-year effort to sack the city and sailing home; as seen in the accompanying photograph of an archaic Greek amphora (storage jug), a squadron of Greek soldiers have been concealed within the horse's belly (which Vergil purposefully calls its "womb," uterus). The Trojans are divided over what to do with the horse, when in the midst of their debate the priest Laocoön rushes forth to deliver a stern warning that the device must be a Greek trick, designed for their destruction —ligneus, -a, -um, wooden, of wood; "ligneous," "lignite."—Minerva, -ae, f., Minerva, goddess of war and protectress of the Greeks.—uterus, -ī, m.; "uterine," "in utero."—complēre, to fill up, make pregnant; "complete," "complement."—proximus, -a, -um, nearby; "proximity," "approximate."—Trōiānus, -a, -um, Trojan.—pandō, -ere, to open; "expand," "expansive."—Lāocoōn, -ontis, m.—nōnne: the word introduces a question anticipating an affirmative answer, Don't you . . . ?—machina, -ae, f.; = Eng.; "machination," "machinery"; Aeneas, later in his narration of Troy's doomsday (lines 237–38), calls the horse a fātālis machina . . . fēta armīs, a deadly machine, pregnant with weapons.—vīsūra: here to spy on.—latēre, to be hidden, be concealed; "latency," "latent."—equō: dat. "object" of crēdite (a construction we have seen before, formally introduced in Capvt XXXV).—nē: = nōn.—Danaōs: = Graecōs.—et (with ferentēs): = etiam.—ferentēs: pres. partic. of the irreg. verb ferō, to carry, bear; "fertile," "conference." Quidquid . . . ferentēs is a hexameter line drawn verbatim from the poem (Book Two, verse 49); read it aloud and listen to the dactylic rhythms.—tremō, -ere, to tremble, shake, vibrate; "tremor," "tremulous."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Vergil's poetry is highly cinematographic; what details even in this prose adaptation are especially visual, and how might you, as a motion picture director, advise your camera-man to film them? What striking poetic sound-effects do you hear in the verse quidquid id est, timeō Danaōs et dōna ferentēs?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET ŪTILIS!

Salvēte! This chapter's Vocābula list suggests a couple of literary titles from ancient Rome: among Cicero's dozens of books was a rhetorical treatise titled Dē Ōrātōre, and one of Plautus' most popular plays was the Mīles Glōriōsus, usually translated The Braggart Soldier. Then there's the medieval student song with the famous line (quite apt for college Latin students) gaudeāmus, igitur, iuvenēs dum sumus, so let us rejoice, while we are young! From vertere is verte for turn the page and versō for the left-hand page in a book (i.e., the side you see when you have just turned the page); printers call the right-hand page the rectō. And from the reading passage: the expression "a Trojan horse" is used of any person, group, or device that tries to subvert a government or any organization from within. Also from Vergil's story of Aeneas' sojourn in Carthage is the famous quotation regarding the country's queen, Dido: dux fēmina factī, a woman (was) leader of the action! Gaudēte atque valēte!

CAPVT XXIV

Ablative Absolute; Passive Periphrastic; Dative of Agent

GRAMMATICA

ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE

The ABLATIVE ABSOLUTE is a type of participial phrase generally consisting of a noun (or pronoun) and a modifying participle in the ablative case; loosely connected to the rest of the sentence (hence the term, from absolūtum, loosened from, separated) and usually set off by commas, the phrase describes some general circumstance under which the action of the sentence occurs:

Rōmā vīsā, virī gaudēbant. Rome having been seen, the men were rejoicing.

As typified by this example, the ablative absolute always is self-contained, i.e., the participle and the noun it modifies are in the same phrase and the noun of the ablative absolute phrase is not referred to at all in the attached clause. In other types of participial phrases (such as those seen in Capvt XXIII), the participles modify some noun or pronoun in the attached clause; compare the following example, which has an ordinary participial phrase, with the previous example:

In this instance the participle modifies the subject of the main clause, and so an ablative absolute is not used.

Like other participial phrases, the ablative absolute can be translated literally, as in Rōmā vīsā, (with) Rome having been seen. For more natural idiom, however, it is generally better to transform the phrase to a clause, converting the participle to a verb in the appropriate tense, treating the ablative noun as its subject, and supplying the most logical conjunction (usually "when," "since," or "although"), as explained in the last chapter; thus, a more idiomatic translation of Rōmā vīsā, virī gaudēbant would be since Rome was (had been) seen, the men were rejoicing. Compare the following additional examples:

Hīs rēbus audītīs,* coepit timēre.
These things having been heard, he began to be afraid.

Or in more natural English:
When (since, after, etc., depending on the context) these things had been heard, he began . . .
When (since, after, etc.) he had heard these things, he began . . .

Eō imperium tenente,* ēventum timeō.
With him holding the power,
Since he holds the power,
When he holds the power,
If he holds the power,
Although he holds the power,
} I fear the outcome.

In the ablative absolute, the ablative noun/pronoun regularly comes first, the participle last; when the phrase contains additional words, like the participle's direct object (imperium) in the preceding example, they are usually enclosed within the noun/participle frame.

As seen in the following examples, even two nouns, or a noun and an adjective, can function as an ablative absolute, with the present participle of sum (lacking in classical Latin) to be understood:

Caesare duce,* nihil timēbimus.
Caesar (being) the commander,
Under Caesar's command,
With Caesar in command,
Since (when, if, etc.) Caesar is the commander,
} we shall fear nothing.

Caesare incertō,* bellum timēbāmus.
Since Caesar was uncertain (with Caesar uncertain), we were afraid of war.

THE PASSIVE PERIPHRASTIC

The PASSIVE PERIPHRASTIC is a passive verb form consisting of the GERUNDIVE, a common term for the future passive participle, along with a form of sum (the term "periphrastic" means literally a "roundabout way of speaking" and refers simply to such combinatory forms). The gerundive, as essentially a predicate adjective, agrees with the subject of sum in gender, number, and case, e.g., haec fēmina laudanda est, this woman is to be praised.

The gerundive often conveys an idea of necessary, obligatory, or appropriate action, rather than simple futurity, and this is the case in the passive periphrastic construction. Hence id faciendum est means not simply this is (about) to be done, but rather this has to be (must/should be) done; cf. id faciendum erat, this had to be done; id faciendum erit, this will have to be done. Just as Latin uses the auxiliary sum in its various tenses in this construction, English commonly uses the expressions "has to be," "had to be," and "will have to be," as seen in these examples; "should," "ought," and "must" are also commonly employed (cf. dēbeō, which, as you have already learned, is also used to indicate obligatory action).

DATIVE OF AGENT

Instead of the ablative of agent, the DATIVE OF AGENT is used with the passive periphrastic. A literal translation of the passive periphrastic + dative of agent often sounds awkward, and so it is generally best to transform such clauses into active constructions:

Hic liber mihi cum cūrā legendus erit. This book will have to be read by me with care or (better) I will have to (ought to, must, should) read this book with care.

Illa fēmina omnibus laudanda est. That woman should be praised by all or everyone should praise that woman.

Pāx ducibus nostrīs petenda erat. Peace had to be sought by our leaders or our leaders had to seek peace.

VOCĀBVLA

Among this chapter's new words are several COMPOUND VERBS, including accipiō, excipiō, and recipiō, all formed from capiō and exhibiting the sort of vowel weakening you have seen before. Re- is an INSEPARABLE PREFIX, meaning that it does not stand alone as a separate word, as do ad, ex, etc.; other examples are: sē-, apart, aside, as in sēdūcō, to lead aside, the negative in- (im-, il-, ir-), not, un-, as in incertus, uncertain; and dis- (dif-, dī-), apart, away, not, as in discēdō, to go away, and difficilis, not easy. Difficilis (dis- + facilis) and accipiō (ad + capiō), by the way, illustrate another common type of phonetic change known as ASSIMILATION, where the final consonant of a prefix was, for ease of pronunciation, altered to match the initial consonant of the base word (App., p. 485).

Carthāgō, Carthāginis, f., Carthage (city in North Africa) fābula, fābulae, f., story, tale; play (fable, fabulous, confabulate; cf. fāma) imperātor, imperātōris, m., general, commander-in-chief, emperor (cf. imperium, below, and imperāre, to command) impérium, impériī, n., power to command, supreme power, authority, command, control (imperial, imperialism, imperious, empire) perfúgium, perfúgiī, n., refuge, shelter (cf. fugiō) sérvus, sérvī, m., and sérva, sérvae, f., slave (serf, servant, servile, service) sōlā́cium, sōlā́ciī, n., comfort, relief (solace, consolation, inconsolable) vúlnus, vúlneris, n., wound (vulnerable, vulnerability, invulnerable) re- or (before words beginning with d) red-, inseparable prefix (see above), again, back (recede, receive, remit, repeat, repel, revert) ut, conj. + indic., as, just as, when pósteā, adv., afterwards (cf. post) accípiō, accípere, accḗpī, accéptum, to take (to one's self), receive, accept (acceptable, acceptance) excípiō, excípere, excḗpī, excéptum, to take out, except; take, receive, capture (exception, exceptionable) recípiō, recípere, recḗpī, recéptum, to take back, regain; admit, receive (recipe, R_x, receipt, recipient, receptacle, reception) péllō, péllere, pépulī, púlsum, to strike, push; drive out, banish (compel, compulsion, dispel, impel, propel, repel, pulsate, pulse) expéllō, expéllere, éxpulī, expúlsum, to drive out, expel, banish (expulsion) nā́rrō, nārrā́re, nārrā́vī, nārrā́tum, to tell, report, narrate (narration, narrative, narrator) quaérō, quaérere, quaesī́vī, quaesī́tum, to seek, look for, strive for; ask, inquire, inquire into (acquire, conquer, exquisite, inquire, inquest, inquisition, perquisite, query, quest, question, request, require) rī́deō, rīdḗre, rī́sī, rī́sum, to laugh, laugh at (deride, derisive, ridicule, ridiculous, risible; cf. rīdículus, laughable)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Identify each ablative absolute, passive periphrastic, and dative of agent in the following readings; the challenge in translating these constructions is to strive for natural, idiomatic English, which generally requires transforming ablative absolute phrases into "when/since/although" clauses, and passive periphrastic/dative of agent clauses into active voice constructions.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Igne vīsō, omnēs virī et uxōrēs territae sunt et ultrā urbem ad lītus īnsulae nāvigāvērunt, ubi perfugium inventum est.
2. Populō metū oppressō, iste imperātor nōbīs ex urbe pellendus est.
3. Ōrātor, signō ā sacerdōte datō, eō diē revēnit et nunc tōtus populus Latīnus gaudet.
4. Gēns Rōmāna versūs illīus scrīptōris magnā laude quondam recēpit.
5. Laudēs atque dōna huius modī ab ōrātōribus dēsīderābantur.

6. Imperiō acceptō, dux aequus magnanimusque fidem suam reī pūblicae ostendit.
7. Aliquis eōs quīnque equōs ex igne ēripī posteā iusserat.
8. Cernisne umquam omnia quae tibi scienda sunt?
9. Ille, ab arce urbis reventūrus, ab istīs hominibus premī coepit.
10. Cupiō tangere manum illīus mīlitis quī metū caruit atque gravia scelera contrā rem pūblicam oppressit.
11. Iste dux prōtinus expulsus est, ut imperium excipiēbat.
12. Illae servae, autem, perfugium sōlāciumque ab amīcīs quaerēbant.
13. Cornū audītō, ille mīles, incertus cōnsiliī, cōpiās ad mediam īnsulam vertit.
14. When the common danger had been averted, two of our sons and all our daughters came back from Asia.
15. Our hopes must not be destroyed (use tollō) by those three evil men.
16. Since the people of all nations are seeking peace, all leaders must conquer the passion for (= of) power. (Use an ablative absolute and a passive periphrastic.)
17. The leader, having been driven out by both the free men and the slaves, could not regain his command.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Carthāgō dēlenda est. (Cato.)
2. Asiā victā, dux Rōmānus fēlīx multōs servōs in Italiam mīsit. (Pliny the Elder.)
3. Omnibus ferrō mīlitis perterritīs, quisque sē servāre cupiēbat. (Caesar.)
4. Quidquid dīcendum est, līberē dīcam. (Cicero.—līberē, adv. of līber.)
5. Haec omnia vulnera bellī tibi nunc sānanda sunt. (Cicero.—sānāre, to heal; "sanatorium," "sane.")
6. Nec tumultum nec hastam mīlitis nec mortem violentam timēbō, Augustō terrās tenente. (Horace.—tumultus -ūs, m., disturbance, civil war; "tumult," "tumultuous."—violentus, -a, -um; related to vīs; "violence," "nonviolent."—Augustus, -ī, m.)
7. Tarquiniō expulsō, nōmen rēgis audīre nōn poterat populus Rōmānus. (Cicero.)
8. Ad ūtilitātem vītae omnia cōnsilia factaque nōbīs regenda sunt. (Tacitus.—ūtilitās, -tātis, f., benefit, advantage; "utility," "utilitarian.")
9. Caesarī omnia ūnō tempore erant agenda. (*Caesar.)

Dē Cupiditāte

Homō stultus, "Ō cīvēs, cīvēs," inquit, "pecūnia ante omnia quaerenda est; virtūs et probitās post pecūniam."

Pecūniae autem cupiditās fugienda est. Fugienda etiam est cupiditās glōriae; ēripit enim lībertātem. Neque imperia semper petenda sunt neque semper accipienda; etiam dēpōnenda nōn numquam.

Horace Epist. 1.1.53 and Cicero Off. 1.20.68: Horace turned to writing verse Epistles (Epistulae), as well as lyric poetry, after publishing his two volumes of satire (see above, Capvt III); like his satires, many of the Epistulae dealt with moralizing themes, including the poem from which the above excerpt, along with a brief passage from Cicero's "On Moral Responsibilities" (introduced in Capvt VIII above), has been adapted.—imperia: i.e., military commands, which some contemporaries, Caesar notably, had not resigned, when, in Cicero's opinion, they should have.—dēpōnō, -ere, to put down, resign; "depose," "deposition.")—nōn numquam: the double-negative was a common Lat. idiom for sometimes.

Caelō receptus propter virtūtem, Herculēs multōs deōs salūtāvit; sed Plūtō veniente, quī Fortūnae est fīlius, āvertit oculōs. Tum, causā quaesītā, "Ōdī," inquit, "illum, quod malīs amīcus est atque omnia corrumpit lucrī causā."

Phaedrus Fab. 4.12: Gaius Julius Phaedrus (ca. 15 B.C.–A.D. 50), a freedman of the emperor Augustus, composed five volumes of moralizing fables in verse, many of them animal fables based on the early, semi-legendary Greek fabulist Aesop. Here he imagines the entry of Hercules into heaven, following his deification, and his encounter with Plutus.—Herculēs, -lis, m.; "Herculean."—salūtāre, to greet; "salutation," "salutatorian."—Plūtus, -ī, m., god of wealth; "plutocracy" (originally from Gk., not Lat.)—Fortūnae: here personified, as in Martial's "When I Have Enough" (Capvt IX).—corrumpō, -ere, to corrupt; "corruptible," "corruption."—lucrum, -ī, n., gain, profit; "lucrative," "lucre."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What, according to these three writers, are some of the negative moral consequences of the lust for wealth, and in Cicero's opinion, ambition for glory as well? What do you suppose Cicero meant by ēripit . . . lībertātem? Plutus was generally said to be the son of the grain goddess Demeter and the mortal or demi-god Iasion; in what sense, though, does Phaedrus logically call him fīlius Fortūnae?

The Satirist's Modus Operandi

Rīdēns saturās meās percurram, et cūr nōn? Quid vetat mē rīdentem dīcere vērum, ut puerīs ēducandīs saepe dant crūstula magistrī? Quaerō rēs gravēs iūcundō lūdō et, nōminibus fictīs, dē multīs culpīs vitiīsque nārrō. Sed quid rīdēs? Mūtātō nōmine, dē tē fābula nārrātur!

Horace Sat. 1.1.23–27, 69–70: In this prose adaptation from his programmatic first satire (from which "The Grass Is Always Greener," in Capvt III, was also adapted), Horace tells us something about his modus operandi as a satirist.—per + currō.—vetāre, to forbid; "veto."—puerīs . . . magistrī: the order of the nouns is varied for effect: ind. obj., dir. obj., subject.—crūstulum, -ī, n., cookie, pastry; "crouton," "crust."—fingō, -ere, fīnxī, fictum, to form, invent, make up; "feign," "fiction."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Naming names was a signal characteristic of Roman satire from the genre's beginnings; the second cent. B.C. satirist, Lucilius, recognized as the genre's founder, was known for his naming attacks on persons alive, powerful, and proud: what is Horace's accommodation to that tradition?—but then what is the point of his closing admonition to his audience? How, specifically, does he engage his audience in his closing remarks? What differences of purpose and tone do you detect between Horace's programmatic remarks here and those of Juvenal adapted from his program poem in Capvt XVI above?—support your answer with references to specific words and phrases in both texts. Which satirist seems more interested in education, which in condemnation?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, amīcae amīcīque! Quid agitis hodiē? Bet you didn't know that R_x and "recipe" came from the same word (see recipiō in the Vocab.), but now, thanks to Latin, you do! There are countless derivatives from the capiō family, as you have seen already; and from excipere there are some "exceptionally" familiar phrases: exceptiō probat regulam, the exception proves the rule, and exceptīs excipiendīs, with all the necessary exceptions (lit., with things excepted that should be excepted: recognize the gerundive?). And, by analogy with this last, what are the idiomatic and the literal meanings of the very common phrase mūtātīs mūtandīs? (If you can't figure that out, it's in your Webster's, along with hundreds of other Latin phrases, mottoes, words, and abbreviations in current English usage!) Some other gerundives that pop up in English: agenda (things to be done), corrigenda (things to be corrected, i.e., an errāta list), and even the passive periphrastics dē gustibus nōn disputandum est, sometimes shortened simply to dē gustibus (you shouldn't argue about taste), and quod erat dēmōnstrandum (which we've seen before), abbreviated Q.E.D. at the end of a mathematical proof. Servus, also in the new Vocābula gives us one of the Pope's titles, servus servōrum deī (another is pontifex, the name of an ancient Roman priestly office, which may originally have meant bridge-builder—because priests bridge the gap between men and gods?); and quaere is used in English as a note to request further information. Nunc est satis: valēte atque semper rīdēte!

CAPVT XXV

Infinitives; Indirect Statement

GRAMMATICA

INFINITIVES

Having surveyed the forms and uses of the verbal adjectives known as participles in the last two chapters, we turn now to the INFINITIVE, a common verbal noun used in a variety of ways. Most transitive verbs have six infinitives, present, future, and perfect, active and passive; intransitive verbs usually lack the passive. You are already familiar with the present active and passive infinitives, whose forms vary with each of the four conjugations; the perfect and future infinitives are all formed according to the following patterns, regardless of conjugation:

	Active	Passive
Pres.	-āre, -ēre, -ere, -īre	-ārī, -ērī, -ī, -īrī
Perf.	perfect stem + -isse	perfect passive participle + esse
Fut.	future active participle + esse	[supine in -um + īrī]

The future passive infinitive is bracketed because it is rare and does not occur in this book; the SUPINE in -um (formally introduced in Capvt XXXVIII) has the same spelling as the perfect passive participle in the nominative neuter singular. Following are the infinitives of agō, agere, ēgī, āctum, to drive, do, lead, act:

	Active	Passive
Pres.	ágere, to lead	ágī, to be led
Perf.	ēgísse, to have led	ā́ctus, -a, -um ésse, to have been led
Fut.	āctū́rus, -a, -um ésse, to be about to lead, to be going to lead	ā́ctum ī́rī, to be about to be led, to be going to be led

The participles employed as components of three of these infinitives are essentially predicate adjectives (e.g., cf. "to be active" and "to be" + "about to act") and in usage agree with the subject of esse. The literal translations given above are conventional; in actual use (especially in indirect statement, as explained below) the perfect and particularly the future infinitives are rarely translated literally.

The infinitives of the other model verbs are as follows:

Active

Pres.	laudāre	monēre	audīre	cápere
Perf.	laudāvísse	monuísse	audīvísse	cēpísse
Fut.	laudātūrus, -a, -um, ésse	monitūrus, -a, -um, ésse	audītūrus, -a, -um, ésse	captūrus, -a, -um, ésse

Passive

Pres.	laudārī	monērī	audīrī	cápī
Perf.	laudātus, -a, -um, ésse	mónitus, -a, -um, ésse	audītus, -a, -um, ésse	cáptus, -a, -um, ésse
Fut.	laudātum īrī	mónitum īrī	audītum īrī	cáptum īrī

Usage

As a verbal noun, an infinitive can function in a variety of ways. We have seen its use as a subject (errāre est humānum, to err is human) and as a complement with such verbs as possum and dēbeō (discēdere nunc possunt, they can leave now—Capvt VI); and the infinitive, with its own accusative subject, can also serve as a direct object (iussit eōs venīre, he ordered them to come: see S.S., p. 494). One of the commonest uses of the infinitive, however, is in a construction known as indirect statement.

INDIRECT STATEMENT

An INDIRECT STATEMENT simply reports indirectly (i.e., not in direct quotation) what someone has said, thought, felt, etc. The following is a direct statement, made by a teacher:

Julia is a good student.

Here the teacher's comment is directly reported or quoted:

"Julia is a good student," says the teacher.
The teacher said, "Julia is a good student."

Latin also uses direct quotations with certain verbs of speaking, etc., including inquit:

"Iūlia," magister inquit, "est discipula bona."

Often, however, both Latin and English will report someone's remarks (or thoughts or feelings) indirectly. In English we regularly put such indirect statements into a subordinate clause introduced by "that":

The teacher says that Julia is a good student.
The teacher said that Julia was a good student.

Latin, on the other hand, uses no introductory word for "that" and employs an infinitive phrase with an accusative subject, instead of a clause:

Magister dīcit Iūliam esse discipulam bonam.
Magister dīxit Iūliam esse discipulam bonam.

This construction is regularly employed in Latin after verbs of speech, mental activity, or sense perception–sometimes called "head verbs"—i.e., verbs of saying, thinking, knowing, perceiving, feeling, seeing, hearing, etc. (a list of such Latin verbs follows the Vocābula). English uses a similar objective case + infinitive construction after a few verbs of this type (e.g., "the teacher considers her to be a good student"), but in classical Latin this pattern is always followed and the accusative subject is always expressed, even when it is the same as the subject of the verb of saying, etc., in which case the subject is ordinarily a reflexive pronoun:

Iūlia putat sē esse bonam discipulam. Julia thinks that she (herself) is a good student.

Recognizing indirect statements is easy: look for the main verb of speech, mental activity, or sense perception with an accusative + infinitive phrase following. The greater challenge is in translation, since you must usually supply "that" and convert the infinitive phrase into a regular clause, as in the above examples, where literal translations (e.g., the teacher says Julia to be a good student or Julia thinks herself to be a good student) would not produce idiomatic English. After supplying that and translating the accusative subject as if it were a nominative, you must then transform the infinitive into a regular finite verb in the correct tense, noting that tenses of the infinitive, like those of the participle, are relative not absolute.

Translating Infinitive Tenses in Indirect Statement

Study carefully the tenses in the following groups of sentences:

1. Dīcunt—They say
   - A. eum iuvāre eam. — that he is helping her.
   - B. eum iūvisse eam. — that he helped/was helping her.
   - C. eum iūtūrum esse eam. — that he will help her.

2. Dīxērunt—They said

A. eum iuvāre eam.	that he was helping her.
B. eum iūvisse eam.	that he had helped her.
C. eum iūtūrum esse eam.	that he would help her.

3. Dīcent—They will say

A. eum iuvāre eam.	that he is helping her.
B. eum iūvisse eam.	that he helped/was helping her.
C. eum iūtūrum esse eam.	that he will help her.

Note that after any tense of the main verb (dīcunt, dīxērunt, dīcent) the present, the perfect, or the future tense of the infinitive may be used. As with participles, the tenses of the infinitive are relative, not absolute:

the present infinitive indicates the same time as that of the main verb.
the perfect infinitive indicates time before that of the main verb.
the future infinitive indicates time after that of the main verb.

In the following examples note the translation of tenses, the use of reflexives, the agreement of participial endings with the accusative subjects, and the use in one instance of the passive periphrastic infinitive (gerundive + esse, to indicate obligatory action):

Gāius dīcit sē iūvisse eam.
Gaius says that he (Gaius) helped her.*

Gāius dīxit eum iūvisse eam.
Gaius said that he (e.g., Marcus) had helped her.*

Gāius dīcit litterās ā sē scrīptās esse.
Gaius says that the letter was written by him (Gaius).

Gāius dīcit litterās tibi scrībendās esse.
Gaius says that the letter ought to be written by you (or, better: that you ought to write the letter).

Discipulī putant sē linguam Latīnam amātūrōs esse.
The (male) students think that they will love the Latin language.

Magistra scīvit discipulās Latīnam amātūrās esse.
The teacher knew that the (female) students would love Latin.

VOCĀBVLA

Āit and āiunt are two of the most frequently used forms of āiō, a common defective verb; the first person form āiō itself occasionally had the sense, I say so, I agree,

yes. For practice with the new grammar, write out the six infinitives for some of the verbs in this list, e.g. crēdō and nūntiō, include the English translations, then compare with the above paradigms.

2. knowing: scíō, nésciō, intéllegō, memóriā téneō, díscō
3. thinking: cérnō, cógitō, crēdō, hábeō, pútō, spērō
4. perceiving and feeling: aúdiō, vídeō, séntiō, gaúdeō

Others to be introduced later are respondeō, answer; cognōscō, learn, know; arbitror, think; opīnor, think, suppose; prōmittō, promise; dēcernō, decide; doleō, grieve.

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

As with ablative absolutes, the challenge in translating indirect statements is that, for natural English idiom, a transformation is usually required, turning the accusative + infinitive phrase into a subordinate clause introduced by "that" and with a normal subject + finite verb in the correct tense; review the examples on p. 203–04 above and practice some translations in the Self-Tutorial Exercises. To test your ability to recognize indirect statements, scan through all the following readings looking for a "head verb" followed by accusative + infinitive.

The Death of Laocoön . . . and Troy

Hīc alius magnus timor (Ō fābula misera!) animōs caecōs nostrōs terret. Lāocoōn, sacerdōs Neptūnī fortūnā factus, ācrem taurum ad āram in lītore mactābat. Tum geminī serpentēs potentēs, mare prementēs, ab īnsulā ad lītora currunt. Iamque agrōs tenēbant et, oculīs igne ardentibus, ōra linguīs sībilīs lambēbant.

Nōs omnēs fugimus; illī viā certā Lāocoonta fīliōsque eius petunt. Prīmum parva corpora duōrum puerōrum capiunt et lacerant necantque dēvōrantque. Tum patrem fortem, ad fīliōs miserōs currentem, rapiunt et magnīs spīrīs tenent et superant. Nec sē ā vulneribus dēfendere nec fugere potest, et ipse, ut taurus saucius ad āram, clāmōrēs horrendōs ad caelum tollit. Eōdem tempore serpentēs fugiunt, petuntque perfugium in arce Minervae ācris.

Quod Lāocoōn in equum Minervae hastam iēcerat, nōs putāvimus eum errāvisse et poenās dedisse; vēritātem acerbam nescīvimus. Portās patefacimus et admittimus istum equum in urbem; ac puerī puellaeque—Ō patria, Ō dī magnī, Ō Trōia!—eum tangere gaudent. Et quoque gaudēmus nōs miserī, quibus ille diēs fuit ultimus ac quibus numquam erit ūllum sōlācium.

Vergil Aen. 2.199–249: A continuation, in prose adaptation, of the Laocoön passage from Aeneid Book Two read in Capvt XXIII. After the priest's warning to his fellow countrymen in that scene, a Greek spy named Sinon allows himself to be captured and fabricates a tale that nearly persuades the Trojans that they should bring the colossal wooden horse into the city, in order to assure the favor of Minerva and their protection from the Greeks. Just as the Trojans are wavering over the right course of action, two giant serpents course over the sea from the direction of Tenedos (the island where the Greek forces are secretly hiding: Map 3), glide onto the shore, and attack Laocoön and his sons, in the process sealing Troy's fate.—Lāocoōn, -ontis, m.—Neptūnus, -ī, m.: Neptune, god of the sea, took the Greek side in the Trojan war.—fortūnā factus: Neptune's former priest had been slain, and Laocoön was hastily chosen by lot to make offerings to the god.—taurus, -ī, m., bull; "taurine," "toreador."—āra, -ae, f., altar.—mactāre, to sacrifice, sacrificially slaughter.—serpēns, -pentis, m., = Eng.; "serpentine."—ardēre, to blaze; "ardent," "arson."—sībilus, -a, -um, hissing; "sibilant," "sibilate."—lambō, -ere, to lick; "lambent," "lap."—Lāocoonta: Gk. acc.—prīmum, adv. of prīmus.—lacerāre, to tear to pieces, mangle; "lacerate," "laceration."—dēvōrāre, to devour; "carnivore," "voracious."—spīra, -ae, f., coil; "spire," "spiral."—saucius, -a, -um, wounded.—clāmor, -mōris, m., shout, scream; "clamor," "exclaim."—horrendus, -a, -um, = Eng.; "horrid," "abhorrent."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: You have already discussed the cinematographic aspects of the earlier Laocoön passage in Capvt XXIII; comment on the several highly visual elements in this passage. Identify the SIMILE Vergil employs to describe the priest's screams, and explain its irony. What are the moments of greatest pathos in the passage, and what key words, phrases, and images does Vergil employ to evoke our emotional response?

CAPVT XXVI

Comparison of Adjectives; Ablative of Comparison

GRAMMATICA

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

The adjective forms you have learned thus far indicate a basic characteristic (a quality or quantity) associated with the modified noun, e.g., vir beātus, a happy man. This is called the POSITIVE DEGREE of the adjective.

In Latin, as in English, an adjective may be "compared" in order to indicate whether a person or thing being described has a greater degree of a particular characteristic than some other person(s) or thing(s), or more than is usual or customary. When comparing a person/thing with just one other, the COMPARATIVE DEGREE is used: vir beātior, the happier man. When comparing a person/thing with two or more others, the SUPERLATIVE DEGREE is employed: vir beātissimus, the happiest man.

Formation of Comparatives and Superlatives

The form of the positive degree is learned from the vocabulary. The comparative and superlative forms of regular adjectives add suffixes to base of the positive:

Comparative: base of positive + -ior (m. & f.), -ius (n.); -iōris, gen.
Superlative: base of positive + -issimus, -issima, -issimum

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
cārus, -a, -um (dear)	cārior, -ius (dearer)	cāríssimus, -a, -um (dearest) lóngus, -a, -um (long)	lóngior, -ius (longer)	longíssimus, -a, -um (longest) fórtis, -e (brave)	fórtior, -ius (braver)	fortíssimus, -a, -um (bravest)

fēlīx, gen. fēlīcis (happy)	fēlīcior, -ius (happier)	fēlīcíssimus, -a, -um (happiest)
pótēns, gen. poténtis (powerful)	poténtior, -ius (more powerful)	potentíssimus, -a, -um (most powerful)
sápiēns, gen. sapiéntis (wise)	sapiéntior, -ius (wiser)	sapientíssimus, -a, -um (wisest)

Some adjectives are compared by adding magis (more) and maximē (most) to the positive, especially those like idōneus, -a, -um (suitable) whose base ends in a vowel: magis idōneus, maximē idōneus.

Declension of Comparatives

The declension of superlatives simply follows the pattern of magnus, -a, -um. Comparatives, however, are two-ending adjectives of the third declension, but are not i-stems (i.e., they do not have the -ī abl. sg., -ium gen. pl., or -ia n. nom./acc. pl. endings that characterize other third declension adjectives, as seen in Capvt XVI). Memorize the following paradigm, taking special note of the endings printed in bold:

	Singular		Plural
	M. & F.	N.	M. & F.	N.

Usage and Translation

Comparative degree adjectives are commonly translated with more or the suffix -er and superlatives with most or -est, depending on the context and English idiom, e.g.: fēmina sapientior, the wiser woman; urbs antīquior, a more ancient city; tempus incertissimum, a most uncertain time; lūx clārissima, the brightest light. Though there is no direct connection between the forms, it may be helpful for mnemonic purposes to associate the Latin comparative marker -ōr- with English "more"/"-er" and the superlative marker -ss- with English "most/-est."

The comparative sometimes has the force of "rather," indicating a greater degree of some quality than usual (lūx clārior, a rather bright light), or "too," indicating a greater degree than desirable (vīta eius erat brevior, his/her life was too short). The superlative is sometimes translated with "very," especially when comparing a person/thing to what is usual or ideal: vīta eius erat brevissima, his/her life was very short.

Quam with Comparatives and Superlatives

When quam follows a comparative degree adjective it functions as a coordinating conjunction meaning "than," linking two items that are being compared; the same case or construction follows quam as precedes:

Hī librī sunt clāriōrēs quam illī. These books are more famous than those.
Dīcit hōs librōs esse clāriōrēs quam illōs. He says that these books are more famous than those.

When quam precedes a superlative, it functions adverbially and indicates that the person/thing modified has the greatest possible degree of a particular quality:

Amīcus meus erat vir quam iūcundissimus. My friend was the pleasantest man possible or as pleasant as can be.

ABLATIVE OF COMPARISON

When the first element being compared was nominative or accusative, quam was often omitted and the second element followed in the ablative case, the so-called ABLATIVE OF COMPARISON (which should be added to your now extensive list of ablative case uses):

Cōnsilia tua sunt clāriōra lūce. Your plans are clearer than light. (Cf. cōnsilia tua sunt clāriōra quam lūx, which means the same.)
Quis in Italiā erat clārior Cicerōne? Who in Italy was more famous than Cicero?
Paucōs fēlīciōres patre tuō vīdī. I have seen few men happier than your father.

VOCĀBVLA

As you review this list, practice the new grammar by writing out the comparative and superlative forms, including the nominative singular for all genders and the English meanings, for a few of the adjectives, such as superbus and trīstis, then check your work by comparing with the samples in the chart on p. 210–11. As always—ut semper—learn all these new items by focusing on their spelling, listening to them online (or on the CDs), and repeating them aloud: audī atque prōnūntiā!

cēna, cēnae, f., dinner (cenacle; cf. cēnō) fórum, fórī, n., marketplace, forum (forensic) lēx, lēgis, f., law, statute; cf. iūs, which emphasizes right, justice (legal, legislator, legitimate, loyal, colleague, college, privilege) límen, límĭnis, n., threshold (liminality, subliminal, eliminate, preliminary) lūx, lūcis, f., light (lucid, elucidate, translucent, illustrate, illuminate) mēnsa, mēnsae, f., table; dining; dish, course; mēnsa secúnda, dessert (the constellation Mensa) nox, nóctis, f., night (nocturnal, nocturne, equinox, noctiluca, noctuid) sómnus, sómnī, m., sleep (somnambulate, somnambulist, somniferous, somniloquist, somnolent, insomnia, Sominex) quīdam, quaédam, quíddam (pron.) or quóddam (adj.), indef. pron. and adj.; as pron., a certain one or thing, someone, something; as adj., a certain, some (gen. cuiúsdam, dat. cuídam, etc.)

pudīcus, pudīca, pudīcum, modest, chaste (impudent, pudency, pudendum; cf. pudīcitia, modesty, chastity)

18. This light is always brighter than the other.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Senectūs est loquācior. (Cicero.—loquāx, gen. loquācis, garrulous; "loquacious," "loquacity.")
2. Tua cōnsilia omnia nōbīs clāriōra sunt quam lūx. (Cicero.)
3. Quaedam remedia graviōra sunt quam ipsa perīcula. (Seneca.)
4. Eō diē virōs fortissimōs atque amantissimōs reī pūblicae ad mē vocāvī. (Cicero.—amāns reī pūblicae, i.e., patriotic.)
5. Quī imperia libēns accēpit, partem acerbissimam servitūtis vītat. (Seneca.—libēns, gen. libentis, willing; "ad lib."; here, as often, the adj. has adverbial force.)
6. Iūcundissima dōna, ut āiunt, semper sunt ea quae auctor ipse cāra facit. (Ovid.)
7. Beātus sapiēnsque vir forum vītat et superba līmina potentiōrum cīvium. (Horace.)
8. Quid est turpius quam ab aliquō illūdī? (Cicero.—illūdō, -ere, to deceive; "illude," "illusion.")
9. Quid enim est stultius quam incerta prō certīs habēre, falsa prō vērīs? (*Cicero.—falsus, -a, -um; "falsify," "fault.")

10. Saepe mihi dīcis, cārissime amīce: "Scrībe aliquid magnum; dēsidiōsissimus homō es." (Martial.—dēsidiōsus, -a, -um, lazy; "desidiose.")
11. Verba currunt; at manus notāriī est vēlōcior illīs; nōn lingua mea, sed manus eius, labōrem perfēcit. (Martial.—notārius, -ī, m., stenographer; "notary," "note."—vēlōx, gen. vēlōcis, swift; "velocity."—perficiō, -ere, -fēcī, -fectum, to complete; "perfect," "perfection.")
12. Multī putant rēs bellicās graviōrēs esse quam rēs urbānās; sed haec sententia mūtanda est, nam multae rēs urbānae sunt graviōrēs clāriōrēsque quam bellicae. (Cicero.—bellicus, -a, -um, adj. of bellum; "bellicose.")
13. Invītātus ad cēnam, manū sinistrā lintea neglegentiōrum sustulistī. Hoc salsum esse putās? Rēs sordidissima est! Itaque mihi linteum remitte. (Catullus.—linteum, -ī, n., linen, napkin; "lint."—neglegēns, gen. -gentis, careless; "neglect," "negligent."—salsus, -a, -um, salty; witty; "sauce," "saucy," "sausage."—sordidus, -a, -um, dirty, mean; "sordid.")

The Nations of Gaul

Gallia est omnis dīvīsa in partēs trēs, quārum ūnam incolunt Belgae, aliam Aquītānī, tertiam quī ipsōrum linguā Celtae, nostrā Gallī appellantur. nor of the Roman province of Gaul, titled the Bellum Gallicum, and on his subsequent conflict with Pompey and his supporters in Rome's civil wars, the Bellum Cīvīle. The passage included here is drawn directly from the opening of the earlier work, which he begins by describing something of the geography and ethnography of the tribes of Gaul.—The places and peoples mentioned: Gaul, the Belgae, the Aquitani, the Celts or Gauls, and the rivers Garonne, Marne, and Seine (see Map 2).—dīvidō, -ere, -vīsī, -vīsum, to divide, separate; "dividend," "divisible."—incolō, -ere, to inhabit; Belgae, Aquītānī, and (eī) quī are all subjects of incolunt.—ipsōrum linguā: = linguā suā.—nostrā: sc. linguā.—īnstitūtum, -ī, n., custom, institution; "institute," "institutionalize."–linguā, īnstitūtīs, lēgibus: ABL. QVAESTIŌ: Caesar's writing was often characterized by its direct language and succinctness; how does this excerpt typify those aspects of his style?

The Good Life

Haec sunt, amīce iūcundissime, quae vītam faciunt beātiōrem: rēs nōn facta labōre sed ā patre relicta, ager fēlīx, parvum forī et satis ōtiī, mēns aequa, vīrēs et corpus sānum, sapientia, amīcī vērī, sine arte mēnsa, nox nōn ebria sed solūta cūrīs, nōn trīstis torus et tamen pudīcus, somnus facilis. Dēsīderā tantum quod habēs, cupe nihil; nōlī timēre ultimum diem aut spērāre.

Martial Epig. 10.47: In this prose adaptation from one of his longer Epigrams, Martial shares with a friend his views of what makes for a happy life. —rēs: here property, wealth.—ā patre relicta: i.e., inherited.—forī: i.e., the hustle-bustle of the business world (the same sense of the word seen in S.A. 7 above); here gen. of the whole with parvum.—arte: here = ostentation, pretentiousness.—ebrius, -a, -um, drunken; "inebriated."—solvō, -ere, solvī, solūtum, to loosen, free (from); "solve," "absolve."—torus, -ī, m., bed; "torus."—nōlī: imperat. regularly used with an infin. for a negative command, do not. . . .

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Literal translations often do not convey a writer's intent; how might you paraphrase this list of desiderata, in order to clarify Martial's meaning? Which one of his objectives is inconsonant with America's conventional "work ethic"?

nal numerals, often indicating birth order, were used both as praenomina and cognomina, esp. in women's names, e.g., Secunda, Tertia, Quārta, etc.—domina, -ae, f., mistress (female head of a household), owner; "dominate," "prima donna."

ETYMOLOGIA

Just a few more of the numerous Eng. derivatives from solvō (in "The Good Life," above) are: absolution, dissolve, dissolute, resolve, resolution, solution, ablative absolute.

In Sp. the compar. degree of an adj. is regularly formed by putting más, from Lat. magis, more, before the adj.: más caro, más alto; Port. similarly employs mais, as in mais caro. It., Sp., and Port. retain vestiges of the Lat. superl. ending -issimus, but generally in the intensive sense of very, exceedingly:

Latin	Italian	Spanish	Portuguese
cārissimus	carissimo	carisimo	caríssimo	very dear
clārissimus	chiarissimo	clarisimo	claríssimo	very clear altissimus	altissimo	altisimo	altíssimo	very high

For further discussion of comparison of adjectives in the Romance languages, including Fr., Occ., and Rom., see the next chapter's Etymologia.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Here are some more familiar mottoes, phrases, famous quotations, and etymological tidbits ex vocābulīs huius capitis (vocābula, by the way, are lit. "what you call things," from vocāre): auctor ignōtus means author unknown, i.e., "anonymous"; cēna Dominī is the Lord's Supper; dūra lēx sed lēx, a harsh law, but the law nevertheless; lēx nōn scrīpta, customary law (as opposed to lēx scrīpta—what are the lit. meanings?—you can also figure out lēx locī); then there's Ovid's admonition to loners, trīstis eris sī sōlus eris, and the hope of one of Plautus' characters for lēx eadem uxōrī et virō; a legal decree of ā mēnsā et torō, from table and bed (torus, -ī), is a separation prohibiting husband and wife from cohabiting. Knowing the noun lūx and the related verb lūceō, lūcēre, to shine brightly, can shed some light on these items: lūx et vēritās is the motto of Yale University, lūx et lēx is the motto of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, pellucid explanations are perfectly clear (per + lūc-), translucent materials let the light shine through, and Lux soap will make you shine like light! Lūcēte, discipulae discipulīque, et valēte!

CAPVT XXVII

Irregular Comparison of Adjectives

GRAMMATICA

IRREGULAR COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

Some adjectives have comparisons that do not follow the regular patterns introduced in Capvt XXVI.

Superlatives of -er and -lis Adjectives

Two groups of adjectives, which are otherwise regular, have peculiar forms in the superlative. Six adjectives ending in -lis form the superlative by adding -limus, -lima, -limum to the base:

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
fácilis, -e (easy)	facílior, -ius (easier)	facíl-limus, -a, -um (easiest) diffícilis, -e (difficult)	difficílior, -ius (more difficult)	difficíllimus, -a, -um (most difficult)
símilis, -e (like)	simílior, -ius (more l.)	simíllimus, -a, -um (most l.)

Dissimilis (unlike, dissimilar), gracilis (slender, thin), and humilis (low, humble) follow this same pattern; all other -lis adjectives have regular superlatives (e.g., fidēlissimus, ūtilissimus, etc.).

Adjectives with a masculine in -er, regardless of declension, form the superlative by adding -rimus, not to the base, but directly to this masculine -er; the comparatives of such adjectives are formed regularly, by adding -ior, -ius to the base (which, as you know, in some cases retains the -e- and sometimes drops it):

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
lĭber, -bera, -berum (free)	lībérior, -ius (freer)	lībér-rimus, -a, -um (freest)
púlcher, -chra, -chrum (beautiful)	púlchrior, -ius (more beautiful)	pulchérrimus, -a, -um (most beautiful)
ācer, ācris, ācre (keen)	ācrior, ācrius (keener)	ācérrimus, -a, -um (keenest)

Other Irregular Adjective Comparisons

A few common adjective comparisons are so irregular that their comparatives and superlatives must simply be memorized; many of the irregularities are examples of SUPPLETION (see Capvt XI), just like English "good, better, best" and "bad, worse, worst," whose comparatives and superlatives derive from words not cognate with the positive forms. Following are some of the most important, which you will need to memorize (English derivatives can help with this: see the Etymologia section below):

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
bónus, -a, -um (good)	mélior, -ius (better)	óptimus, -a, -um (best) mágnus, -a, -um (great)	máior, -ius (greater)	máximus, -a, -um (greatest) málus, -a, -um (bad)	péior, -ius (worse)	péssimus, -a, -um (worst) múltus, -a, -um (much)	——, plūs (more)	plūrimus, -a, -um (most) párvus, -a, -um (small)	mínor, mínus (smaller)	mínimus, -a, -um (smallest) (prae, prō) (in front of, before)	príor, -íus (former)	prīmus, -a, -um (first) súperus, -a, -um (that above)	supérior, -ius (higher)	súmmus, -a, -um (highest, furthest) suprēmus, -a, -um (highest, last)

There is no positive degree adjective corresponding to prior and prīmus, since those words, by the very definition of "priority" and "primacy," imply comparison with one or more persons or things; the prepositions prae and prō, however, are related.

Declension of Plūs

None of the irregular forms offers any declensional difficulty except plūs. In the plural plūs functions as an adjective (e.g., plūrēs amīcī), but has mixed i-stem and consonant-stem forms (-ium in the genitive plural but -a, not -ia, in the neuter nominative and accusative); in the singular it functions not as an adjective at all, but as a neuter noun which is commonly followed by a genitive of the whole (e.g., plūs pecūniae, more money, lit. more of money—see Capvt XV).

VOCĀBVLA

Some tips for the new vocabulary: don't confuse forms of sōl and sōlus, -a, -um; review the discussion of consonantal i in the Intrōductiō, p. xxxviii, and listen carefully online to the pronunciation of maior, maius, something like "mai-yor," "mai-yus," etc.; note the special meanings of the plurals superī and maiōrēs (which the Romans often employed in a phrase invoking ancestral custom, the mōs maiōrum); and note that you must learn all the irregular comparative and superlative adjective forms listed in the table above.

dēlectātiō, dēlectātiōnis, f., delight, pleasure, enjoyment (delectation, delectable, delicious, dilettante; cf. dēlectō) népōs, nepōtis, m., grandson, descendant (nephew, nepotism, niece) sōl, sōlis, m., sun (solar, solarium, solstice, parasol) dīligēns, gen. dīligéntis, diligent, careful (diligence, diligently) dissímilis, dissímile, unlike, different (dissimilar, dissimilarity, dissemble) grácilis, grácile, slender, thin (gracile, gracility) húmilis, húmile, lowly, humble (humility, humiliate, humiliation) máior, máius, compar. adj., greater; older; maiōrēs, maiōrum, m. pl., ancestors (i.e., the older ones; major, majority, etc.—see Etymologia below) prīmus, prīma, prīmum, first, foremost, chief, principal (primary, primate, prime, primeval, primer, premier, primitive, prim, primo-geniture, prima facie, primordial, primrose) quot, indecl. adj., how many, as many as (quota, quotation, quotient) símilis, símile, + gen. or dat., similar (to), like, resembling (simile, assimilate, simulate, dissimulate, verisimilitude, assemble, resemble, simultaneous; "same" is cognate) súperus, súpera, súperum, above, upper; súperī, superōrum, m. pl., the gods (superior, etc.; cf. superō and see Etymologia below) ūtilis, ūtile, useful, advantageous (what Latin is to YOU!—utility, from ūtilitās, -tātis; utilitarian, utilization, utilize)
All the irregular adjectival forms listed above, p. 218–19 pōnō, pōnere, posuī, positum, to put, place, set (see Etymologia below) próbō, probāre, probāvī, probātum, to approve, recommend; test (probe, probate, probable, approbation, proof, prove, approval, improve, reprobate; cf. probitās)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

The most important activities for the Lēctiō et Trānslātiō section are to read aloud, read for comprehension, and then translate (listen to the Latin too, if you have the CDs); but for practice with the new grammar, you should scan through the readings for all comparative and superlative adjectives, noting which are regular and which are irregular.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Quisque cupit quam pulcherrima atque ūtilissima dōna dare.
2. Quīdam turpēs habent plūrima sed etiam plūra petunt.
3. Ille ōrātor, ab tyrannō superbissimō expulsus, ducem iūcundiōrem et lēgēs aequiōrēs dehinc quaesīvit.
4. Summum imperium optimīs virīs semper petendum est.
5. Senex nepōtibus trīstibus casam patefēcit et eōs trāns līmen invītāvit.
6. Ostendit ultimum signum lūce clārissimā ab hostibus illā nocte datum esse.
7. Iste tyrannus pessimus negāvit sē virōs līberōs umquam oppressisse.
8. Fidēlissimus servus plūs cēnae ad mēnsam accipiēbat quam trēs peiōrēs.
9. Āiunt hunc auctōrem vītam humillimam hīc agere.
10. Cūr dī superī oculōs ā rēbus hūmānīs eō tempore āvertērunt?
11. Habēsne pecūniam et rēs tuās prae rē pūblicā?
12. Sōlem post paucās nūbēs gracillimās in caelō hodiē vidēre possumus.
13. Some believe that very large cities are worse than very small ones.
14. In return for the three rather small gifts, the young man gave even more and prettier ones to his very sad mother.
15. Those very large mountains were higher than these.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Trahit mē nova vīs: videō meliōra probōque, sed peiōra tantum faciō et nesciō cūr. (Ovid.)
2. Quaedam carmina sunt bona; plūra sunt mala. (Martial.)
3. Optimum est. Nihil melius, nihil pulchrius hōc vīdī. (Terence.)
4. Spērō tē et hunc nātālem et plūrimōs aliōs quam fēlīcissimōs āctūrum esse. (Pliny.—nātālis [diēs], birthday; "natal," "Natalie.")
5. Quoniam cōnsilium et ratiō sunt in senibus, maiōrēs nostrī summum concilium appellāvērunt "senātum." (Cicero.—concilium, -ī, n., council; "conciliate," "reconcile"; be careful to distinguish concilium, cōnsilium, and cōnsul.)
6. Plūs operae studiīque in rēbus domesticīs nōbīs nunc pōnendum est etiam quam in rēbus mīlitāribus. (Cicero.—opera, -ae, f., work, effort; "opera," "operation," "cooperate."—domesticus, -a, -um; "domesticate," "domesticity."—mīlitāris, -e; "militarism," "demilitarize"; cf. mīles.)
7. Neque enim perīculum in rē pūblicā fuit gravius umquam neque ōtium maius. (Cicero.)

8. Sumus sapientiōrēs illīs, quod nōs nātūram esse optimam ducem scīmus. (Cicero.—optimam: f. by attraction to the gender of nātūram.)
9. Nātūra minimum petit; nātūrae autem sē sapiēns accommodat. (*Seneca.—accommodāre, to adapt; "accommodation.")
10. Maximum remedium īrae mora est. (*Seneca.)
11. Quī animum vincit et īram continet, eum cum summīs virīs nōn comparō sed eum esse simillimum deō dīcō. (Cicero.—comparāre, to compare; "comparable," "comparison.")
12. Dionȳsius, tyrannus urbis pulcherrimae, erat vir summae in vīctū temperantiae et in omnibus rēbus dīligentissimus et ācerrimus. Īdem tamen erat ferōx ac iniūstus. Alley Cat

Caelī, Lesbia nostra, Lesbia illa, illa Lesbia, quam Catullus ūnam plūs quam sē atque suōs amāvit omnēs, nunc in quadriviīs et angiportīs glūbit magnanimī Remī nepōtēs.

*Catullus Carm. 58: This poem, a single sent. sardonically addressed to Caelius, a former rival for Lesbia's favors, clearly was composed at an even lower point of Catullus' relationship with Lesbia than his Carmen 8, which you read (and may wish to re-read now) in Capvt XIX; meter: hendecasyllabic.—quadrivium, -iī, n., crossroads.—angiportum, -ī, n., alley.—glūbō, -ere, to peel (back), strip (off); used of stripping the bark off trees or the skin off an animal, here in an obscene sense.—Remus: Remus was slain by his brother, Romulus, who became legendary founder of Rome and the city's first king; his nepōtēs are his imagined descendants—Rome's nobility—in Catullus' day.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Marcus Caelius Rufus, a dissolute young senator, had earned Catullus' resentment for his own affair with Lesbia (a pseudonym, you may recall from Capvt II, for Clodia, wife of another senator: this was a true Roman soap opera!); comment on the irony in Catullus' use of nostra in addressing him. Recalling that demonstratives are "pointing words," what do you sense as the effect of illa here, and in what ways does Catullus emphasize the word?—comment too on the arrangement of Lesbia illa, illa Lesbia. Why do you suppose Catullus chose to imagine Lesbia's dallying in alleyways with Remus' descendants, rather than Romulus'?

Thanks a Lot, Tully!

Dīsertissime Rōmulī nepōtum, quot sunt quotque fuēre, Mārce Tullī, quotque post aliīs erunt in annīs, grātiās tibi maximās Catullus agit, pessimus omnium poēta, tantō pessimus omnium poēta quantō tū optimus omnium patrōnus.

*Catullus Carm. 49: The poet sends "thanks" to the orator and statesman, Marcus Tullius Cicero; whether or not the tone is ironic is a matter much debated by scholars, but it is worth noting here that Cicero had not only on occasion expressed his disdain for romantic poetry, but also had defended the Caelius Rufus of Catullus 58 on charges the orator claimed were instigated by Clodia/Lesbia. Like Catullus 58 above, this poem is structured as a single, long sent., and its meter is hendecasyllabic.—dīsertus, -a, -um, eloquent, learned; "dissertation."—fuēre: = fuērunt, see Capvt XII.—post: = posteā.—tantō . . . quantō, just as much . . . as.—tū: sc. es.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Irony can often be detected by the intonation of a speaker, or a poet reciting his verse, but is sometimes difficult to discern in a written text; what do you see as this poem's most striking stylistic feature (occurring in virtually every line) and how might its exuberance suggest that Catullus' "thank you" here is in fact sarcastic? INTERTEXTUALITY, i.e., resonances between one literary text and another, can often be a clue to an author's intent; what connection do you see between this poem's opening line, and the closing verse of poem 58, and, if deliberate, what might its purpose be?

An Uncle's Love for His Nephew and Adopted Son

Adulēscēns est cārior mihi quam ego ipse! Atque hic nōn est fīlius meus sed ex frātre meō. Studia frātris iam diū sunt dissimillima meīs. Ego vītam urbānam ēgī et ōtium petīvī et, id quod quīdam fortūnātius putant, uxōrem numquam habuī. Ille, autem, haec omnia fēcit: nōn in forō sed in agrīs vītam ēgit, parvum pecūniae accēpit, uxōrem pudīcam dūxit, duōs fīliōs habuit. Ex illō ego hunc maiōrem adoptāvī mihi, ēdūxī ā parvō puerō, amāvī prō meō. In eō adulēscente est dēlectātiō mea; sōlum id est cārum mihi.

Terence Ad. 39–49: Terence (Publius Terentius Afer, ca. 185–159 B.C.), brought to Rome from Carthage as a slave, was subsequently freed and went on to a career as comic playwright and producer. The Adelphoe, Brothers, last of his six plays, is a comedy of manners, something like a modern "sitcom," about two fathers with quite different philosophies about raising their adolescent sons; Micio, the more lenient father, speaks here about his affection for his son, whom he has adopted from his brother.—iam diū: commonly used with a pres. tense verb for an action begun in the past but continuing in the pres., where in Eng., and thus in translation, we would use perf. tense.—dūxit: here, married.—adoptāre, = Eng.; "adoption," "adoptive."—ēdūxī: raised.–id: this thing, i.e., their relationship.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: It was a matter of great importance in the Greco-Roman world for a man to have a male heir; why did Micio resort to adoption? Marriage humor was standard fodder for comics in antiquity as it is today; what is the joke here?

Liquāmen optimum!
CIL 4.9415: Not exactly a graffito, but another example of Roman script: just as manufacturers label jars and cans of processed foods today, ancient food producers incised or painted labels on their storage and shipping containers, which were usually ceramic ware, like the jug (urceus) that bore this inscription; from the atrium of a house in Reg. I, Ins. 8.—liquāmen, -minis, n., liquid, fluid, sauce; liquamen; liquamen and another popular fish-sauce called garum were widely used for seasoning—this jar was also inscribed, in a second hand, SCOMBR, a common abbreviation for scomber, mackerel, the fish typically used to produce these sauces.—optimum: a bit of advertising hype, another aspect of marketing familiar to us today!

ETYMOLOGIA

In many instances the irregular comparison of a Lat. adj. can easily be remembered by Eng. derivatives:

bonus	melior: ameliorate optimus: optimist, optimum, optimal magnus	maior: major, majority, mayor maximus: maximum malus	peior: pejorative
	pessimus: pessimist
multus	plūs: plus, plural, plurality, nonplus parvus	minor: minor, minority, minus, minute, minuet, minister, minstrel minimus: minimum, minimize
(prō)	prior: prior, priority prīmus: prime, primacy, primary, primeval, primitive superus	superior: superior, superiority summus: summit, sum, consummate suprēmus: supreme, supremacy

Lat. plūs is the parent of Fr. plus, It. più, and Old Occ. plus or pus, words which are placed before adjectives to form the compar. degree in those Romance languages. In Fr. and It. adding the definite article to these comparatives converts them into superlatives:

Latin	French	Italian
longior	plus long	più lungo longissimus	le plus long	il più lungo
cārior	plus cher	più caro
cārissimus	le plus cher	il più caro

For comparatives Rom. uses mai, like Port. mais and Sp. más (all from Lat. magis), before an adj., e.g., mai lung, longer; then, like Fr., It., and Port., it adds the definite article for superlatives, cel mai lung, longest. For the intensive sense often conveyed by Lat. superlatives, Rom. employs foarte, very, from Lat. forte, before an adj.; e.g., foarte clar, very clear. The practice for forming superlatives in Occ. is variable; but cf., e.g., carisme.

From pōnō come innumerable derivatives: apposite, apposition, component, composite, compost, compound, deponent, deposit, deposition, depot, exponent, exposition, expound, imposition, impost, impostor, juxtaposition, opponent, opposite, positive, post, postpone, preposition, proposition, propound, repository, supposition, transposition. However, note that some Eng. compounds ending in "-pose," e.g., "repose," derive through Fr. poser from late Lat. pausāre, which stems from Gk. pausis, a pause, and pauein, to stop.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET ŪTILIS!

Salvē! Quid hodiē agis? Spīrāsne? Spērāsne? Rīdēsne? Valēsne? Sī tū valēs, ego valeō! And here are some more rēs Latīnae to give you a mēns sāna: first, an old Latin maxim which you should now be able to read, sapiēns nihil affīrmat quod nōn probat. Likewise this quote from Horace (Epist. 1.1.106), sapiēns ūnō minor est Iove, and the motto of the Jesuit order, ad maiōrem glōriam Deī. Now, quid est tempestās? Pluitne? Estne frīgida? Nimbōsa? Well, it really won't matter, if you remember this proverb: sōl lūcet omnibus! (Remember lūcēre from last chapter?) Birds of a feather flock together and, according to another old Latin proverb, similis in similī gaudet. Here are some more from the irregular comparatives and superlatives you've just learned: meliōrēs priōrēs, freely, the better have priority; maximā cum laude and summā cum laude (what you should have on your next diploma, sī es dīligēns in studiō Latīnae!); peior bellō est timor ipse bellī (note the ablative of comparison); ē plūribus ūnum, motto of the United States, one from several, i.e., one union from many states; nē plūs ultrā, no more beyond (this point), i.e., the ultimate; prīmus inter parēs, first among equals; prīmā faciē, at first sight; and, finally, summum bonum, the highest good, which can come from studying Latin, of course: valē!

CAPVT XXVIII

Subjunctive Mood; Present Subjunctive; Jussive and Purpose Clauses

GRAMMATICA

THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD

You will recall from Capvt. I that MOOD (from modus) is the "manner" of expressing a verbal action or state of being, and you are already familiar with two of the three Latin moods, the INDICATIVE and the IMPERATIVE: an imperative (from imperāre, to command) emphatically commands someone to undertake an action that is not yet going on, while indicatives (from indicāre, to point out) "indicate" real actions, i.e., actions that definitely have (or have not) occurred in the past, that are (or are not) occurring in the present, or that likely will (or will not) occur in the future.

In contrast to the indicative, the mood of actuality and factuality, the SUBJUNCTIVE is in general (though not always) the mood of potential, tentative, hypothetical, ideal, or even unreal action. An example in English is, "If the other student were here, he would be taking notes"; in this conditional sentence, which imagines actions that are contrary to the actual facts, English employs the auxiliaries "were" and "would" to indicate that the action described is only hypothetical. Among the other auxiliaries used in English to describe potential or ideal actions are "may," "might," "should," "would," "may have," "would have," etc.

Latin employs the subjunctive much more frequently than English, in a wide variety of clause types, and it uses special subjunctive verb forms rather than auxiliaries. There are two tasks involved in mastering the subjunctive: first, the morphology, i.e., learning the new forms, a relatively simple matter; second, the syntax, i.e., learning to recognize and translate the various subjunctive clause types, which is also quite easily done if your approach is systematic.

PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE

There are only four tenses in the subjunctive mood. The present subjunctive is introduced in this chapter and has rules for formation that vary slightly among the four conjugations; rules for forming the imperfect, perfect, and pluperfect (Capita XXIX–XXX) are the same for all conjugations, even for irregular verbs.

1. laúdem	móneam	ágam	aúdiam	cápiam
2. laúdēs	móneās	ágās	aúdiās	cápiās
3. laúdet	móneat	ágat	aúdiat	cápiat
1. laudḗmus	moneā́mus	agā́mus	audiā́mus	capiā́mus
2. laudḗtis	moneā́tis	agā́tis	audiā́tis	capiā́tis
3. laúdent	móneant	ágant	aúdiant	cápiant

Note that in the first conjugation the characteristic stem vowel changes from -ā- in the present indicative to -ē- in the present subjunctive. In the other conjugations -ā- is consistently the sign of the present subjunctive, but with variations in the handling of the actual stem vowel (shortened in the second, replaced in the third, altered to short -i- in the fourth/third -iō); the mnemonic "we fear a liar" will help you remember that the vowels preceding the personal endings are -ē-, -eā-, -ā-, and -iā- for the first, second, third, and fourth/third -iō conjugations, respectively. Note that a subjunctive may be mistaken for an indicative, if you neglect to recognize a verb's conjugation (e.g., cf. agat with amat, and amet with monet), so remember your vocabulary.

The present passive subjunctive follows the usual pattern of substituting passive endings:

laúder, laudḗris (and remember the alternate -re ending, Capvt XVIII), laudḗtur; laudḗmur, laudḗminī, laudéntur mónear, moneā́ris, moneā́tur; moneā́mur, moneā́minī, moneántur ágar, agā́ris, agā́tur; agā́mur, agā́minī, agántur aúdiar, audiā́ris, audiā́tur; audiā́mur, audiā́minī, audiántur cápiar, capiā́ris, capiā́tur; capiā́mur, capiā́minī, capiántur

Translation

While "may" is sometimes used to translate the present subjunctive (e.g., in purpose clauses), the translation of all subjunctive tenses, in fact, varies with the type of clause, as you will see when each is introduced.

THE JUSSIVE SUBJUNCTIVE

In this and subsequent chapters you will be introduced to a series of subjunctive clause types: the jussive subjunctive and purpose clauses (Capvt XXVIII), result clauses (XXIX), indirect questions (XXX), cum clauses (XXXI), proviso clauses (XXXII), conditions (XXXIII), jussive noun clauses (XXXVI), relative clauses of characteristic (XXXVIII), and fear clauses (XL). You should catalog these clause types in your notebook or computer file and systematically learn three details for each: (1) its definition, (2) how to recognize it in a Latin sentence, and (3) how to translate it into English.

As suggested by the term "subjunctive" itself (from subiungere, to subjoin, subordinate), subjunctive verbs were used chiefly in SUBORDINATE (dependent) CLAUSES. However, the subjunctive was also employed in certain types of INDEPENDENT (main) CLAUSES. The JUSSIVE SUBJUNCTIVE (from iubēre, to order) is among the most important of these independent uses, and the only one formally introduced in this book. Definition: as the term implies, the JUSSIVE SUBJUNCTIVE expresses a command or exhortation, especially in the first or third person (the imperative is generally used for the second person). Recognition: The clause type is easily recognized, since the sentence's main verb (often its only verb) is subjunctive; negative commands are introduced by nē. Translation: while "may" and "should" are sometimes employed in translating jussives (particularly in second person: semper spērēs, you should always hope), "let" is the auxiliary most often used, followed by the subject noun or pronoun (in the objective case, i.e., "me," "us," "him," "her," "them"):

Cōgitem nunc dē hāc rē, et tum nōn errābō. Let me now think about this matter, and then I will not make a mistake.
Discipulus discat aut discēdat. Let the student either learn or leave.
Doceāmus magnā cum dēlectātiōne linguam Latīnam. Let us teach the Latin language with great delight.
Nē id faciāmus. Let us ("let's") not do this.
Audeant illī virī et fēminae esse fortēs. Let those men and women dare to be brave.

PURPOSE CLAUSES

Definition: A PURPOSE CLAUSE is a subordinate clause indicating the objective of the action in the main clause; e.g., "we study Latin so that we may learn more about ancient Rome" or "we study Latin to improve our English." As seen in this second example, English often employs an infinitive to express purpose, but that use of the infinitive is rare in classical Latin prose, which instead employed a subordinate clause with a subjunctive verb. Recognition: Look for a subjunctive clause introduced by ut or, for a negative purpose, nē, and stating the purpose of the action in the main clause. Translation: The auxiliary "may" is often used in translating the present tense in a purpose clause, but it is generally more idiomatic to translate with an infinitive ("to" or "in order to"), so long as the purpose clause and the main clause have the same subject. Study the following examples:

Hoc dīcit ut eōs iuvet.
He says this to help them.
in order to help them.
that he may help them.
so that he may help them.
in order that he may help them.

The first two translations above are more colloquial, the others more formal.

Discēdit nē id audiat.
He is leaving in order not to hear this.
so that he may not hear this.

Cum cūrā docet ut discipulī bene discant.
He teaches with care so (that) his students may learn well.

Hoc facit nē capiātur.
He does this in order not to be captured.

Librōs legimus ut multa discāmus.
We read books (in order) to learn many things.

Bonōs librōs nōbīs dent nē malōs legāmus.
Let them give us good books so that we may not read bad ones.

VOCĀBVLA

As you learn the new verbs in this list, conjugate a few in the present subjunctive. Parēns/parentis (originally present participle of a verb meaning to give birth to) is another noun that, for obvious reasons, can be feminine or masculine; it serves as a reminder that vowels before ns are regularly long, those before nt are regularly short. The Romans variously treated vesper as second or third declension (even vespera, first declension, is attested); so expect a variety of endings.

árma, armōrum, n. pl., arms, weapons (army, armament, armada, armistice, armadillo, gendarme, alarm–from It. all'arme, to arms, Lat. ad illa arma) cúrsus, cúrsūs, m., running, race; course (courser, cursor, cursory, cursive, concourse, discourse, recourse, precursor, excursion; cf. currō) lūna, lūnae, f., moon (lunar, lunacy, lunate, lunatic, interlunar) occāsiō, occāsiōnis, f., occasion, opportunity (occasional) párēns, paréntis, m./f., parent (parental, parenting; cf. pariō, parere, give birth to) stēlla, stēllae, f., star, planet (stellar, constellation, interstellar) vésper, vésperis or vésperī, m., evening; evening star (vesper, vesperal) mórtuus, mórtua, mórtuum, dead (mortuary) prĭnceps, gen. prĭncipis, chief, foremost; m./f. noun, leader, emperor (prince, principal, principality; cf. prīmus, prīncipium) ut, conj. + subjunct., in order that, so that, that, in order to, so as to, to; + indic., as, when nē, adv. and conj. with subjunct. of command and purpose, not; in order that . . . not, that . . . not, in order not to cĕdō, cĕdere, céssī, céssum, to go, withdraw; yield to, grant, submit (accede, access, antecedent, ancestor, cede, concede, deceased, exceed, intercede, precede, proceed, recede, secede; cf. discēdō) dĕdicō, dēdicāre, dēdicāvī, dēdicātum, to dedicate (dedication, dedicatory) égeō, egēre, éguī + abl. or gen., to need, lack, want (indigence, indigent; do not confuse with ēgī, from agō) éxpleō, explēre, explēvī, explētum, to fill, fill up, complete (expletive, deplete, replete; cf. plēnus, pleō, to fill) praéstō, praestāre, praéstitī, praéstitum, to excel; exhibit, show, offer, supply, furnish (presto; prae + stō, lit. "to stand in front of") táceō, tacēre, tácuī, tácitum, to be silent, leave unmentioned (tacit, taciturn, taciturnity, reticence, reticent)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After memorizing the new paradigms and vocabulary and testing your mastery with some of the Self-Tutorial Exercises, scan the following readings for all present subjunctive verbs, identifying which are jussive and which are in purpose clauses. Before translating each sentence and passage, read aloud for comprehension.

CIL 4.8863: The columns reproduced in this drawing of a graffito from a Pompeian shop in Reg. III, Ins. 4, are four from a total of eight in which the writer included the different weekly market-days (nūndinae) for several neighboring towns along with some other specific dates, listing the names of the days of the week, as seen here, and numbering the days of the month from 1–30 (I–XXX). The Romans typically abbreviated the days of the week (and the months), just as we do; the numerals employed here include the common variants VIIII for IX, XVIIII for XIX, and XXVIIII for XXIX (see the table of numerals in the Summārium Fōrmārum).

CIL 4.5002 and 7131: A wonderful testimony to the literacy, and literary interests, of ancient Pompeians, snippets from some of the already "classic" Roman poets were often written on walls by enthusiasts or students, including these two excerpts from the opening verse of Vergil's Aeneid (cf. S.A. 12 above), a line that appears, in whole or part, in more than a dozen other graffiti throughout the city. The graffito above (top), from the atrium of the House of Marcus Casellius Marcellus (in Reg. IX, Ins. 2), has only the first two words of the verse, ARMA VIRVMQVE, while the other inscription, a dipinto painted in the middle of an electoral programma on the front of the shop of the blacksmith (ferrārius) Tyrsus on the Via dell'Abbondanza (Reg. I, Ins. 6), continues with CANO TROIAE and a curving stroke that formed the beginning of the Q in the line's next word, QVI (a stray ARM also appears beneath the -QVE—another, aborted attempt at beginning the verse?); the original poetic word order seen in the dipinto, Arma virumque canō Trōiae quī . . . , has been simplified in S.A. 12, where Trōiae is repositioned within the rel. clause to which it belongs syntactically.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET ŪTILIS!

Salvēte! Here are some nuggets from the new Vocābula: teachers and guardians can serve in locō parentis; mortuī nōn mordent, "dead men tell no tales" (lit., the dead don't bite!); occāsiō fūrem facit, opportunity makes a thief; those who know about Watergate will now recognize the etymology of the "expletives deleted" (four-letter words that "fill out" the sentences of vulgar and illiterate folk!); an ēditiō prīnceps is a first edition; tacet, a musical notation calling for a vocalist or instrumentalist to be silent; related to cursus is curriculum, running, course, course of action, hence a résumé provides your curriculum vītae; and the motto of New York University (fīliō meō grātiās!), a good one for Latin students, is perstāre et praestāre, to persevere and to excel.

Now let's focus on jussives: first off, I hope that all my students in Wyoming recognized arma togae cēdant as their state motto; another motto, with this new verb cēdere and an imperative rather than a jussive, is Vergil's nē cēde malīs, yield not to evils; and Vegetius, an ancient military analyst, has advised us, quī dēsīderat pācem, praeparet bellum. Before bidding you farewell, here's a proverb—with both a purpose clause and a jussive—that makes the same point as the Pylades reading above: ut amīcum habeās, sīs amīcus (sīs, as you'll see in the next chapter, is the subjunctive for es), in order to have a friend, you should be a friend. By the way, I call first person plural jussives the "salad subjunctives" (remember VENI, VIDI, VEGI?) because they always contain "let us"—a reminder of the salad most ordered by honeymooners, "lettuce alone!" On that note, let us just say: amīcī amīcaeque meae, semper valeātis!

CAPVT XXIX

Imperfect Subjunctive; Present and Imperfect Subjunctive of Sum and Possum; Result Clauses

GRAMMATICA

THE IMPERFECT SUBJUNCTIVE

The imperfect subjunctive is easy to recognize and form, consisting of the present active infinitive + the present system personal endings, active and passive, with the -ē- long (except, as usual, before final -m, -r, and -t, and both final and medial -nt/-nt-). Samples are given in the following paradigms; for complete conjugations, see the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 502–03:

1. laudā́re-m	laudā́re-r	ágerer	audī́rem	cáperem
2. laudā́rē-s	laudā́rē-ris	agerḗris	audī́rēs	cáperēs
3. laudā́re-t	laudā́rē-tur	agerḗtur	audī́ret	cáperet
1. laudārḗ-mus	laudārḗ-mur	agerḗmur	audīrḗmus	caperḗmus
2. laudārḗ-tis	laudārḗ-minī	agerḗminī	audīrḗtis	caperḗtis
3. laudā́re-nt	laudāré-ntur	ageréntur	audī́rent	cáperent

PRESENT AND IMPERFECT SUBJUNCTIVE OF Sum AND Possum

The present subjunctives of sum and possum are irregular but follow a consistent pattern; the imperfect subjunctives, however, follow the rule given above:

	Present Subjunctive		Imperfect Subjunctive
1.	sim	póssim	éssem	póssem
2.	sīs	póssīs	éssēs	póssēs
3.	sit	póssit	ésset	pósset
1.	sīmus	possīmus	essēmus	possēmus
2.	sītis	possītis	essētis	possētis
3.	sint	póssint	éssent	póssent

Usage and Translation of the Imperfect Subjunctive

The imperfect subjunctive is used in a variety of clause types, when the main verb is a past tense. As for all subjunctives, the translation depends upon the type of clause, but auxiliaries sometimes used with the imperfect include "were," "would," and, in purpose clauses, "might" (vs. "may" for the present tense). Study these sample sentences containing purpose clauses:

Hoc dīcit ut eōs iuvet.
He says this (in order) to help them.
so that he may help them.

Hoc dīxit (dīcēbat) ut eōs iuvāret.
He said (kept saying) this (in order) to help them.
so that he might help them.

Hoc facit nē urbs capiātur.
He does this so that the city may not be captured.

Hoc fēcit (faciēbat) nē urbs caperētur.
He did (was doing) this so that the city might not be captured.

Remember that in order to master the subjunctive (notice the purpose clause?) you must (1) learn a definition for each clause type, (2) be able to recognize each, and (3) know the proper translation for the subjunctive verb in each type. Keep these three points in mind—definition, recognition, translation—as you proceed to the following discussion of result clauses and to the subsequent chapters in this book.

RESULT CLAUSES

Definition: A RESULT CLAUSE is a subordinate clause that shows the result of the action in the main clause; the purpose clause answers the question "why is (was) it being done?", while the result clause answers the question "what is (was) the outcome?" Examples in English are: "it is raining so hard that the streets are flooding" and "she studied Latin so diligently that she knew it like a Roman." Notice that English introduces such clauses with "that" and uses the indicative mood, generally with no auxiliary (i.e., neither may nor might).

Recognition: Latin result clauses begin with ut and contain (usually at the end) a subjunctive verb. The result clause can be easily recognized, and distinguished from a purpose clause, by the sense and context and also by the fact that the main clause usually contains an adverb (ita, tam, sīc, so) or adjective (tantus, so much, so great) indicating degree and signaling that a result clause is to follow. Moreover, if the clause describes a negative result, it is still introduced by ut but contains a negative word such as nōn, nihil, nēmō, numquam or nūllus (vs. a negative purpose clause, which is introduced by nē).

Translation: In result clauses (vs. purpose clauses) the subjunctive verb is regularly translated as an indicative, without an auxiliary; "may" or "might" are used only in those instances where a potential or ideal result, rather than an actual result, is being described. Analyze these examples:

Tanta fēcit ut urbem servāret. He did such great things that he saved the city. (Result)

Haec fēcit ut urbem servāret. He did these things so that he might save the city. (Purpose)

Tam strēnuē labōrat ut multa perficiat. He works so energetically that he accomplishes many things. (Result)

Strēnuē labōrat ut multa perficiat. He works energetically so that he may accomplish many things. (Purpose)

Hoc tantā benevolentiā dīxit ut eōs nōn offenderet. He said this with such great kindness that he did not offend them. (Result)

Hoc magnā benevolentiā dīxit nē eōs offenderet. He said this with great kindness in order that he might not offend them. (Purpose)

Saltus erat angustus, ut paucī Graecī multōs mīlitēs prohibēre possent. The pass was narrow, so that a few Greeks were able to stop many soldiers. (Result)

Note that in this last example there is no "signal word" such as ita or tam in the main clause, but it is clear from the context that the ut clause indicates the result, not the purpose, of the narrowness of the pass.

VOCĀBVLA

Nothing too unusual in this new list: moenia was regularly employed only in the plural, just as when speaking in English of defensive fortifications, we refer to a city's "walls" not "wall"; one word for a wall of a house, by the way, is mūrus, which gives us "mural." Practice conjugating a few of the verbs in this list in the newly introduced imperfect subjunctive–and why not the present subjunctive too!

fā́tum, fā́tī, n., fate; death (fatal, fatalism, fatality, fateful, fairy; fābula and fāma are from the same stem) ingénium, ingéniī, n., nature, innate talent (ingenuity, genius, genial, congenial; cf. genus, gēns, and gignere, to create, give birth to) moénia, moénium, n. pl., walls of a city (munitions, ammunition; cf. mūnire, to fortify) nā́ta, nā́tae, f., daughter (prenatal, postnatal, Natalie; cf. nātūra) ṓsculum, ṓsculī, n., kiss (osculate, osculation; cf. ōs) sī́dus, sī́deris, n., constellation, star (sidereal, consider, desire) dígnus, dígna, dígnum + abl., worthy, worthy of (dignify, dignity from dignitās, indignation from indignātiō, deign, disdain, dainty) dū́rus, dū́ra, dū́rum, hard, harsh, rough, stern, unfeeling, hardy, difficult (dour, durable, duration, during, duress, endure, obdurate) tántus, tánta, tántum, so large, so great, of such a size (tantamount; do not confuse with the adv. tantum, only) dḗnique, adv., at last, finally, lastly íta, adv. used with adjs., verbs, and advs., so, thus quídem, postpositive adv., indeed, certainly, at least, even; nē . . . quídem, not . . . even (do not confuse with quīdam, certain) sīc, adv. most commonly with verbs, so, thus (sic) tam, adv. with adjs. and advs., so, to such a degree; tam . . . quam, so . . . as; tamquam, as it were, as if, so to speak vḗrō, adv., in truth, indeed, to be sure, however (very, verily, etc.; cf. vērus, vēritās) cóndō, cóndere, cóndidī, cónditum, to put together or into, store; found, establish (= con- + dō, dare; condiment, abscond, recondite) conténdō, conténdere, conténdī, conténtum, to strive, struggle, contend; hasten (contender, contentious; cf. tendō, to stretch, extend) mólliō, mollī́re, mollī́vī, mollī́tum, to soften; make calm or less hostile (mollescent, mollify, mollusk, emollient; cf. mollis, soft, mild) púgnō, pugnā́re, pugnā́vī, pugnā́tum, to fight (pugnacious, impugn, pugilist) respóndeō, respondḗre, respóndī, respṓnsum, to answer (respond, response, responsive, responsibility, correspond) súrgō, súrgere, surrḗxī, surrḗctum, to get up, arise (surge, resurgent, resurrection, insurgent, insurrection, source, resource)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

The challenge in these readings is to distinguish between purpose and result clauses, both of which may be introduced by ut: if you see tam, tantus, ita, or sīc in the main clause, the ut-clause indicates result; likewise an ut-clause that contains nōn, numquam, or nēmō is a negative result clause, whereas negative purpose clauses are introduced by nē. Remember that the verb in a result clause is generally translated without "may" or "might," which are commonly used in English to signal purpose rather than result.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Prīnceps arma meliōra in manibus mīlitum posuit, ut hostēs terrērent.
2. Hostēs quidem negāvērunt sē arma dissimilia habēre.
3. Pars mīlitum lūcem diēī vītāvit nē hīc vidērentur.
4. Sōlem prīmam lūcem caelī superī, lūnam prīmam lūcem vesperī, et stēllās oculōs noctis appellābant.
5. Illī adulēscentēs sapientiae dēnique cēdant ut fēlīciōrēs hīs sint.
6. Sapientēs putant beneficia esse potentiōra quam verba acerba et turpia.
7. Quīdam magister verba tam dūra discipulīs dīxit ut essent trīstēs atque discēderent.
8. Respondērunt auctōrem hōrum novem remediōrum esse medicam potentissimam.
9. Nihil vērō tam facile est ut sine labōre id facere possīmus.
10. Prō labōre studiōque patria nostra nōbīs plūrimās occāsiōnēs bonās praestat.
11. Parentēs plūrima ōscula dedērunt nātae pulcherrimae gracilīque, in quā maximam dēlectātiōnem semper inveniēbant.
12. The words of the philosopher were very difficult, so that those listening were unable to learn them.
13. The two women wished to understand these things so that they might not live base lives.
14. Those four wives were so pleasant that they received very many kindnesses.
15. He said that the writer's third poem was so beautiful that it delighted the minds of thousands of citizens.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQUAE

1. Omnia vincit Amor; et nōs cēdāmus Amōrī. (Vergil.)
2. Urbem clārissimam condidī; mea moenia vīdī; explēvī cursum quem Fāta dederant. (Vergil.)
3. Ita dūrus erās ut neque amōre neque precibus mollīrī possēs. (Terence.—prex, precis, f., prayer; "precarious," "imprecation," "pray.")
4. Nēmō quidem tam ferōx est ut nōn mollīrī possit, cultūrā datā. (Horace.—cultūra, -ae, f.; "agriculture," "horticulture.")
5. Difficile est saturam nōn scrībere; nam quis est tam patiēns malae urbis ut sē teneat? (Juvenal.—patiēns, gen. -entis, tolerant of; "patience.")

6. Fuit quondam in hāc rē pūblicā tanta virtūs ut virī fortēs cīvem perniciōsum ācriōribus poenīs quam acerbissimum hostem reprimerent. (Cicero.—perniciōsus, -a, -um, pernicious.—re-primō, cf. opprimō; "repress," "reprimand.")
7. Ita praeclāra est recuperātiō lībertātis ut nē mors quidem in hāc rē sit fugienda. (Cicero.—recuperātiō, -ōnis, f., recovery; "recuperate.")
8. Nē ratiōnēs meōrum perīculōrum ūtilitātem reī pūblicae vincant. (Cicero.—ūtilitās, -tātis, f., advantage; cf. ūtilis; "utilitarian," "utility.")
9. Eō tempore Athēniēnsēs tantam virtūtem praestitērunt ut decemplicem numerum hostium superārent, et hōs sīc perterruērunt ut in Asiam refugerent. (Nepos.—Athēniēnsēs, -ium, Athenians.—decemplex, -plicis, tenfold.—per + terreō.)
10. Ōrātor exemplum dignum petat ab Dēmosthene illō, in quō tantum studium tantusque labor fuisse dīcuntur ut impedīmenta nātūrae dīligentiā industriāque superāret. (Cicero.—exemplum, -ī, n., example; "exemplify," "sample."—Dēmosthenēs, -thenis, m., a famous Greek orator.—impedīmentum, -ī, n.; "impede."—dīligentia, -ae, f.; "diligently."—industria, -ae, f.; "industrious.")

11. Praecepta tua sint brevia ut cito mentēs plūrium discipulōrum ea discant teneantque memoriā fidēlī. (Horace.—praeceptum, -ī, n., precept; "preceptor.")
12. Nihil tam difficile est ut nōn possit studiō invēstīgārī. (Terence.—invēstīgāre, to track down, investigate; "investigation," "vestige.")
13. Bellum autem ita suscipiātur ut nihil nisi pāx quaesīta esse videātur. (Cicero.)
14. Tanta est vīs probitātis ut eam etiam in hoste dīligāmus. (Cicero.)

How Many Kisses Are Enough?

Quaeris, Lesbia, quot bāsia tua sint mihi satis? Tam multa bāsia quam magnus numerus Libyssae harēnae aut quam sīdera multa quae, ubi tacet nox, furtīvōs amōrēs hominum vident—tam bāsia multa (nēmō numerum scīre potest) sunt satis Catullō īnsānō!

Catullus Carm. 7: In an earlier poem (Carm. 5, which you will read in its entirety in Capvt XXXI) Catullus had begged Lesbia for hundreds and thousands of kisses and a life immersed in love; in this prose adaptation of Carm. 7 (for verse excerpts from the poem, see Locī Im. II) the poet imagines his mistress cooly asking just exactly how many kisses he wants.—quot . . . sint: an IND. QUEST., a construction formally introduced in Capvt XXX but easily understood here.—Libyssus, -a, -um, Libyan, African.—harēna, -ae, f., sand, here = grains of sand; "arena."—furtīvus, -a, -um, stolen, secret; "furtive."—īnsānus, -a, -um: = Eng.; "insanity."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Catullus' response is as calculated as Lesbia's question; how are his analogies alike and yet different?—try to visualize them both—how do they look different and, in a sense, even "feel" different?

The Nervousness of Even a Great Orator

Ego dehinc ut respondērem surrēxī. Quā sollicitūdine animī surgēbam—dī immortālēs—et quō timōre! Semper quidem magnō cum metū incipiō dīcere. Quotiēnscumque dīcō, mihi videor in iūdicium venīre nōn sōlum ingeniī sed etiam virtūtis atque officiī. Tum vērō ita sum perturbātus ut omnia timērem. Dēnique mē collēgī et sīc pugnāvī, sīc omnī ratiōne contendī ut nēmō mē neglēxisse illam causam putāret.

Cicero Cluent. 51: Cicero's speech Prō Cluentiō, In Defense of Cluentius, resulted in the acquittal of a man accused by his mother of poisoning his step-father; this passage is interesting, as it shows the trepidation that can plague even the greatest of public speakers.—sollicitūdō, -dinis, f., anxiety; "solicit," "solicitous."—quotiēnscumque, adv., as often as, whenever.—ingeniī . . . virtūtis . . . officiī: all modify iūdicium.—perturbāre, to disturb, confuse; "perturbation," "imperturbable."—colligō, -ere, -lēgī, -lēctum, to gather, collect, control; "collection," "recollect."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Cicero's concern over public opinion was a great source of anxiety; explain in your own words the three areas in which he feared he might be judged lacking. By what multiple means did he overcome his concerns on this occasion and win his case?

You're All Just Wonderful!

Nē laudet dignōs, laudat Callistratus omnēs:

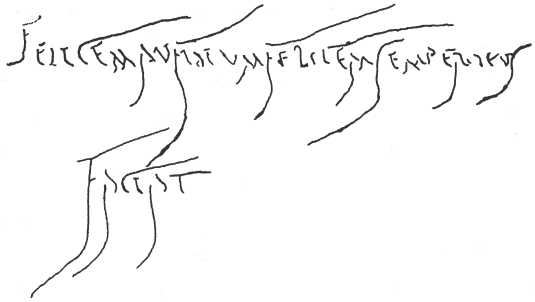
QVAESTIŌNĒS: Explain the ethical implications of the question Martial poses in line 2; why would befriending someone like Callistratus ultimately be meaningless?—have you ever known such a person?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Fēlīcem Aufidium, fēlīcem, semper deus faciat!

CIL 4.6815: If this prayer, written with a flourish between two doors of an apartment house (Reg. VI, Ins. 16), achieved its purpose, Aufidius was a very lucky guy!—Fēlīcem: repeated for emphasis, a rhetorical device known as ANAPHORA; or, as some editors suppose, the second occurrence of the word may be the man's cognomen, i.e., his name was Aufidius Felix and the writer is engaging in a bit of name-play, a favorite type of Roman humor.

ETYMOLOGIA

The adverbial ending -mente or -ment so common in Romance languages derives from Lat. mente (abl. of mēns) used originally as an abl. of manner but reduced to an adverbial suffix. The following examples are based on Lat. adjectives which have already appeared in the vocabularies:

Latin Words	It. Adverb	Sp. Adverb	Fr. Adverb
dūrā mente	duramente	duramente	durement
clārā mente	chiaramente	claramente	clairement
sōlā mente	solamente	solamente	seulement
certā mente	certamente	certamente	certainement
dulcī mente	dolcemente	dulcemente	doucement
brevī mente	brevemente	brevemente	brèvement
facilī mente	facilmente	fácilmente	facilement

Cf. Port. duramente, claramente, somente, certamente, docemente, brevemente, facilmente; Old Occ. solamẹn, certamẹn, breumẹn.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvē! Sunt multae dēlectātiōnēs in novō vocābulāriō nostrō: e.g., there's Virginia's state motto, sīc semper tyrannīs, thus always to tyrants (i.e., death!); and ingenium, which really means something inborn, like a Roman man's genius (his inborn guardian spirit, counterpart to the woman's iūnō, magnified and deified in the goddess Juno); the connection of moenia and mūnīre reminds us that fortification walls were the ancients' best munitions, and there's the old proverb praemonitus, praemūnītus, forewarned (is) forearmed; sīc is an editor's annotation, meaning thus (it was written), and used to identify an error or peculiarity in a text being quoted, and it's also the parent of It. sì, Sp. sí, Port. sim, Fr. si, Old Occ. si, all meaning yes. And here's a brief "kissertation" on the nicest word in this new list: ōsculum was the native word for kiss (vs. bāsium, which the poet Catullus seems to have introduced into the language from the north); it is actually the diminutive of ōs, ōris and so means literally little mouth—which perhaps proves the Romans "puckered up" when they smooched! Catullus, by the way, loved to invent words, and one was bāsiātiō, kissification or smooch-making ("smooch," by the way, is not Latinate, alas, but Germanic and related to "smack," as in "to smack one's lips," which one might do before enjoying either a kiss or a slice of toast with "Smucker's"!). Rīdēte et valēte!

CAPVT XXX

Perfect and Pluperfect Subjunctive; Indirect Questions; Sequence of Tenses

GRAMMATICA

PERFECT AND PLUPERFECT SUBJUNCTIVE

Perfect system subjunctives, like perfect system indicatives, all follow the same basic rules of formation, regardless of the conjugation to which they belong. For the perfect subjunctive active, add -erī- + the personal endings to the perfect stem (shortening the -i- before -m, -t, and -nt); for the pluperfect active, add -issē- + the personal endings to the perfect stem (shortening the -e- before -m, etc.). For the passives, substitute the subjunctives sim and essem for the equivalent indicatives sum and eram. The forms of laudō are shown below; those for the other model verbs (which follow the very same pattern) are provided in the Appendix (p. 502–04).

Perfect Subjunctive Active

Sg.	laudāv-erim, laudāverīs, laudāverit
Pl.	laudāverīmus, laudāverītis, laudāverint

Note that these forms are identical to those of the future perfect indicative except for the first person singular and the long -ī- in certain of the subjunctive forms; the identical forms can be distinguished as indicative or subjunctive by sentence context.

Pluperfect Subjunctive Active

Sg.	laudāv-íssem, laudāvíssēs, laudāvísset
Pl.	laudāvissémus, laudāvissétis, laudāvíssent

These forms resemble the perfect active infinitive, laudāvisse, + the endings (with the -ē- long except before -m, etc.; cf. the imperfect subjunctive, which resembles the present active infinitive + endings).

Perfect Subjunctive Passive

Sg. laudātus, -a, -um sim, laudātus sīs, laudātus sit
Pl. laudātī, -ae, -a sīmus, laudātī sītis, laudātī sint

Pluperfect Subjunctive Passive

Sg. laudātus, -a, -um éssem, laudātus éssēs, laudātus ésset
Pl. laudātī, -ae, -a essémus, laudātī essétis, laudātī éssent

Translation and Usage

As with the present and imperfect subjunctives, the perfect and pluperfect are employed in a variety of clauses (in accordance with the sequence of tenses discussed below) and with a variety of translations. Just as "may" and "might/would" are sometimes used in translating the present and imperfect, respectively, so "may have" and "might have/would have" are sometimes employed with the perfect and pluperfect; likewise, they are often translated as simple indicatives: the best procedure is to learn the rules for translation of each clause type.

Synopsis

You can now conjugate a verb fully in all of its finite forms; following is a complete third person singular synopsis of agō, agere, ēgī, āctum:

Indicative Mood

	Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut.Perf.	Pluperf.
Act.	ágit	áget	agébat	égit	égerit	égerat
Pass.	ágitur	agétur	agēbátur	áctus est	áctus érit	áctus érat

Subjunctive Mood

	Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut.Perf.	Pluperf.
Act.	ágat	——	ágeret	égerit	——	ēgísset
Pass.	agátur	——	agerétur	áctus sit	——	áctus ésset

INDIRECT QUESTIONS

Definition: An INDIRECT QUESTION is a subordinate clause which reports a question indirectly, not via a direct quotation (e.g., "they asked what Gaius was doing" vs. "they asked, 'What is Gaius doing?'"); as such, it is comparable in concept to an indirect statement, which reports indirectly, not a question, but a statement (Capvt XXV). Recognition: The indirect question uses a subjunctive verb (not an infinitive, like an indirect statement) and is distinguished from other subjunctive clauses as it is introduced by an interrogative word such as quis/quid, quī/quae/quod (the interrogative adjective), quam, quandō, cūr, ubi, unde, uter, utrum . . . an (whether . . . or), -ne (attached to the clause's first word, = whether), etc.; the verb in the main clause is ordinarily a verb of speech, mental activity, or sense perception (including many of the same verbs that introduce indirect statements, listed in Capvt XXV). Translation: The subjunctive verb in an indirect question is usually translated as an indicative in the same tense, i.e., without any auxiliary such as "may" or "might." Compare the first three examples below, which are direct questions, with the next three, which contain indirect questions:

Quid Gāius facit?	What is Gaius doing?
Quid Gāius fēcit?	What did Gaius do?
Quid Gāius faciet?	What will Gaius do?
Rogant quid Gāius faciat.	They ask what Gaius is doing.
Rogant quid Gāius fēcerit.	They ask what Gaius did.
Rogant quid Gāius factūrus sit.	They ask what Gaius will do (lit., is about to do).

Factūrus sit in this last example is a form sometimes called the FUTURE ACTIVE PERIPHRASTIC; in the absence of an actual future subjunctive, this combination of a form of sum + the future active participle (cf. the passive periphrastic, consisting of sum + the future passive participle, Capvt XXIV) was occasionally employed to indicate future time unambiguously in certain types of clauses, including the indirect question. In this last example, if the main verb were a past tense, then (in accordance with the rules for sequence of tenses) the sentence would be rogāvērunt quid Gaius factūrus esset, they asked what Gaius would do (was about to do, was going to do).

SEQUENCE OF TENSES

In Latin as in English there is a logical sequence of tenses as the speaker or writer proceeds from a main clause to a subordinate clause. The rule in Latin is simple: a PRIMARY TENSE of the indicative must be followed by a primary tense of the subjunctive, and an indicative HISTORICAL (or SECONDARY) TENSE must be followed by a historical subjunctive tense, as illustrated in the following chart:

Group	Main Verb	Subordinate Subjunctive
Primary	Pres. or Fut.	{ Present (= action at same time or after) Perfect (= action before)
Historical	Past Tenses	{ Imperfect (= action at same time or after) Pluperfect (= action before)

After a primary main verb the present subjunctive indicates action occurring at the same time as that of the main verb or after that of the main verb; the perfect subjunctive indicates action which occurred before that of the main verb. Similarly after a historical main verb the imperfect subjunctive indicates action occurring at the same time as that of the main verb or after that of the main verb, and the pluperfect subjunctive indicates action before that of the main verb. The primary tenses of the indicative, the present and future, both indicate incomplete actions (i.e., actions now going on, in the present, or only to be begun in the future), while the historical tenses, as the term implies, refer to past actions.

The rules for the sequence of tenses operate in purpose clauses, result clauses, indirect questions, and similar constructions to be introduced in subsequent chapters; analyze carefully the sequencing in each of the following examples:

Id facit (faciet) ut mē iuvet. He does (will do) it to help me.
Id fēcit (faciēbat) ut mē iuvāret. He did (kept doing) it to help me.

Tam dūrus est ut eum vītem. He is so harsh that I avoid him.
Tam dūrus fuit (erat) ut eum vītārem. He was so harsh that I avoided him.

Rogant, rogābunt—They ask, will ask quid faciat. what he is doing.
quid fēcerit. what he did.
quid factūrus sit. what he will (is about to) do.
Rogāvērunt, rogābant—They asked, kept asking quid faceret. what he was doing.
quid fēcisset. what he had done.
quid factūrus esset. what he would (was about to) do.

There are two common exceptions to the rules for sequence of tenses: a HISTORICAL PRESENT main verb (a present tense used for the vivid narration of past events: "I'm sitting in my room last night, when suddenly I hear a knock at the door") often takes a historical sequence subjunctive, and a perfect tense main verb, when focusing on the present consequences of the past action, may be followed by a primary sequence subjunctive (see Exerc. 8 below). Note, too, that since purpose and result clauses logically describe actions that follow the actions of the main verb, they do not ordinarily contain perfect or pluperfect tense verbs, which indicate prior action.

VOCĀBVLA

A few unusual items: cēterī has only plural forms for the same reason as paucī, i.e., because the meaning essentially connotes plurality; tantus . . . quantus, when employed together, are known as CORRELATIVE ADJECTIVES, comparable to the correlative conjunctions et . . . et and aut . . . aut; the verb cognōscō/nōscō in the perfect means I have learned, and since, once you have learned something, you "know" it, the word's perfect tense is often translated with present force, e.g., cognōvit = she has learned or she knows, and similarly nōverant = they had learned/they knew. As you learn the verbs in this list, practice conjugating a few of them in the perfect and pluperfect subjunctive, and do a synopsis of one or two as well, then compare your work with the paradigms.

hónor, honṓris, m., honor, esteem; public office (honorable, honorary, honorific, dishonor, honest) cḗterī, cḗterae, cḗtera, pl., the remaining, the rest, the other, all the others; cf. alius, another, other (etc. = et cetera) quántus, quánta, quántum, how large, how great, how much (quantify, quantity, quantitative, quantum); tántus . . . quántus, just as much (many) . . . as rīdículus, rīdícula, rīdículum, laughable, ridiculous (ridicule; cf. rīdeō) vī́vus, vī́va, vī́vum, alive, living (vivid, vivify, convivial; cf. vīvō, vīta) fū́rtim, adv., stealthily, secretly (furtively, ferret; cf. fūrtīvus, -a, -um, secret, furtive; fūr, fūris, m./f., thief)

mox, adv., soon

prī́mō, adv., at first, at the beginning (cf. prīmus, -a, -um) repénte, adv., suddenly únde, adv., whence, from what or which place, from which, from whom útrum . . . an, conj., whether . . . or bíbō, bíbere, bíbī, to drink (bib, bibulous, imbibe, wine-bibber, beverage) cognṓscō, cognṓscere, cognṓvī, cognitum and (its base form) nōscō, nōscere, nōvī, nōtum, to become acquainted with, learn, recognize; in perf. tenses, know (cognizance, cognition, connoisseur, incognito, reconnaissance, reconnoiter, notice, notify, notion, notorious) comprehéndō, comprehéndere, comprehéndī, comprehḗnsum, to grasp, seize, arrest; comprehend, understand (comprehensive, comprehensible) cōnsū́mō, cōnsū́mere, cōnsū́mpsī, cōnsū́mptum, to consume, use up (consumer, consumption, assume, assumption, presume, presumption, presumptuous, resume, resumption; cf. sūmere, to take) dúbitō, dubitā́re, dubitā́vī, dubitā́tum, to doubt, hesitate (dubious, dubitable, doubtful, doubtless, indubitable, undoubtedly) expṓnō, expṓnere, expósuī, expósitum, to set forth, explain, expose (exponent, exposition, expository, expound) mínuō, minúere, mínuī, minūtum, to lessen, diminish (cf. minor, minus, minimus; diminish, diminutive, minuet, minute, minutiae, menu) rógō, rogāre, rogāvī, rogātum, to ask (interrogate, abrogate, arrogant, derogatory, prerogative, surrogate)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Before reading the following selections, be sure you have memorized the paradigms and Vocābula and assessed your mastery by answering the grammar questions and translating some of the sentences in the Self-Tutorial Exercises for this chapter (p. 436–37); check your answers to the Exercises against the key (p. 471–72), analyze any errors, and review accordingly. Scan through the readings below for all subjunctives verbs and identify the clause type in which each appears; recall that "may" or "might" are commonly employed when translating verbs in purpose clauses into English, but subjunctives in result clauses or indirect questions are usually translated simply as indicatives, without any auxiliary.

Evidence and Confession

Sit dēnique scrīptum in fronte ūnīus cuiusque quid dē rē pūblicā sentiat; nam rem pūblicam labōribus cōnsiliīsque meīs ex igne atque ferrō ēreptam esse vidētis. Haec iam expōnam breviter ut scīre possītis quā ratiōne comprehēnsa sint. Semper prōvīdī quō modō in tantīs īnsidiīs salvī esse possēmus. Omnēs diēs cōnsūmpsī ut vidērem quid coniūrātī āctūrī essent. Cicero Cat. 1 and 3: Cicero finally succeeded in forcing Catiline to leave Rome, but some of his henchmen remained in the city and tangible evidence was still needed to prove their guilt; in this selection, adapted from passages in his first and third Catilinarian orations, Cicero shows how he finally obtained that evidence and even extracted a confession from Publius Cornelius Lentulus Sura, a disgraced former consul and Catiline's second in command. Be sure to review the readings and notes on the Catilinarian conspiracy in Capita XI, XIV, and XX; a final reading, "Testimony Against the Conspirators," appears in Capvt XXXVI.—frōns, frontis, f., brow, face; "frontal," "affront."—breviter: adv. of brevis.—prō-videō, to fore-see, give attention to; "provide," "provident."—intercipiō, -ere, -cēpī, -ceptum, = Eng.; "interception," "interceptor."—convocāre, to convene; "convoke," "convocation."—cognōsceretne: when introducing an ind. quest., -ne = whether.—cōnscientia, -ae, f., conscience; "conscientious," "unconscionable."—inter sē aspiciō, -ere, to glance at each other; "aspect."—indicāre, to accuse; "indication," "indicative."—sē ipsī: a lit. Eng. translation might produce the unfortunate redundancy themselves . . . themselves, but in Lat. of course the words are identical in neither form nor function and would in no way sound odd.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What incriminating evidence had Cicero obtained against the conspirators, and how did it lead to Lentulus' confession?

A Covered Dish Dinner!

Mēnsās, Ōle, bonās pōnis, sed pōnis opertās.
Rīdiculum est: possum sīc ego habēre bonās.

*Martial Epig. 10.54: Olus was the sort of stingy host often targeted in Roman satire—one might as well dine at home! Meter: elegiac couplet.—mēnsās: here, as often, the word refers not to tables but to the dishes, i.e., the platters of food, set out on them at dinner.—opertus, -a, -um, concealed, covered; "coverlet," "covert."—sīc: here better rendered (in) that way, rather than simply "so" or "thus."—ego: i.e., even a "poor" fellow like the speaker could host fancy dinner parties!

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Explain exactly what tantalizing circumstance the speaker is complaining about in line 1; how does word order underscore the point in that line, and echo it in the following verse as well?

A Legacy-hunter's Wish

Nīl mihi dās vīvus; dīcis post fāta datūrum:
sī nōn es stultus, scīs, Maro, quid cupiam!

*Martial Epig. 11.67: The speaker wants something Maro is just dying to give him! For Rome's captātōrēs,, see "When I Have . . . Enough," Capvt IX above. Meter: elegiac couplet.—nīl: a common variant for nihil.—fāta: poetic pl. for sg., = mortem.—datūrum: = tē datūrum esse.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What does the speaker want, so that he can get, well, what he wants? Identify the chiasmus in line 1, and explain its purpose.

Note on a Copy of Catullus' Carmina

Tantum magna suō dēbet Vērōna Catullō quantum parva suō Mantua Vergiliō.

*Martial Epig. 14.195: A gift-note from the Apophorēta (see "Message from a Bookcase," in Capvt XIX), and a high compliment to Catullus, who was a favorite of Martial's and a major influence on his epigrams. Meter: elegiac couplet.—Vērōna . . . Mantua: Verona and Mantua, both towns in northern Italy (see Map 1), were the birthplaces of Catullus and Vergil respectively.—magna suō . . . Vērōna Catullō: this kind of ABAB arrangement (adj. A . . . adj. B . . . noun A . . . noun B), known as INTERLOCKED WORD ORDER, is common in Lat. verse.

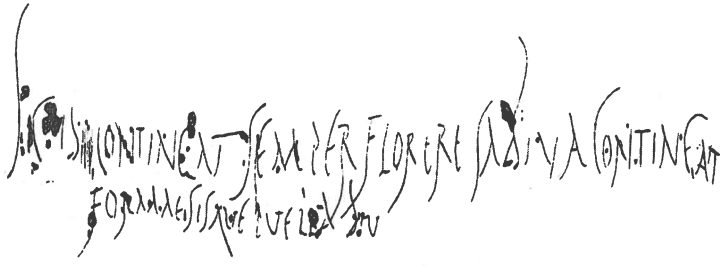
QVAESTIŌNĒS: Comment on the word order in the second verse, and on the parallel structure of the two lines; how is the parallelism suited to the point Martial is making?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Sīc [t]i[b]i contingat semper flōrēre, Sabīna, contingat fōrmae, sīsque puella diū.

CIL 4.9171: This verse graffito, found outside Pompeii's Porta Vesuviana, seems to have been an original composition, addressed by the writer to his girlfriend Sabina (though some scholars see a reference to Poppaea Sabina, wife of the emperor Nero); meter: elegiac couplet.—contingō, -tingere, -tigī, -tāctum, to touch; + dat. + infin., fall to one's lot, be granted (to someone to do something); "contingent," "contact"; tibi contingat . . . contingat fōrmae = chiasmus (dative^{A}-verb^{B}=verb^{B}-dative^{A}).—flōrēre, to flower, blossom; shine, excel; "floral," "fluorish."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What, specifically, are the writer's wishes for Sabina? What does he mean by puella here? The editors of CIL considered fōrmae an error for fōrma, nom.; but, besides the fact that the nom. with its short final syllable would not fit the meter, what other arguments favor the reading fōrmae?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, amīcī! This chapter's Vocābula list brings a veritable cēna verbōrum for your mēnsa Latīna; let's start with the main course: the cursus honōrum, a familiar phrase in English, was the traditional course of political office-holding in Rome; ordinarily one served first as quaestor (a treasury official), then as praetor (judge), and only later as cōnsul. The consulship was something like our presidency, but the term was one year, and there were two consuls, each with veto power over the other (Cicero, as you recall, was one of the consuls in 63 B.C., when he uncovered the Catilinarian conspiracy).

Now for the mēnsa secunda: first, an old proverb that will serve you near as well as carpe diem: occāsiōnem cognōsce! And here's another that may save you from temptation to even the slightest of crimes: nēmō repente fuit turpissimus, no one was ever suddenly most vicious (Juvenal 2.83: the satirist meant that even the worst criminals attained that status through the gradual accumulation of guilty acts). An honorary degree is granted honōris causā; honōrēs mūtant mōrēs is an ancient truism; from cēterī, besides et cētera/etc., is cētera dēsunt, the rest is lacking, an editorial notation for missing sections of a text; from quantus comes a large quantity of phrases, one of which should be sufficient here, quantum satis, as much as suffices (if you are not satisfied, you'll find more quantum phrases in Capita XXXII and XXXIV); and when day is done you can shout mox nox, in rem, soon ('twill be) night, (let's get down) to business. Valēte!

CAPVT XXXI

Cum Clauses; Ferō

GRAMMATICA

Cum CLAUSES

You are already familiar with the use of cum as a preposition meaning "with." The word can also serve as a conjunction, meaning when, since, or although and introducing a subordinate CUM* CLAUSE that describes an action connected in one way or another with the main clause. Sometimes the verb employed is indicative, especially when describing the precise time of an action. In these so-called CUM* TEMPORAL CLAUSES, cum is translated "when" (or "while"); tum is occasionally found in the main clause, and cum . . . tum together may be translated "not only . . . but also":

> Cum eum vidēbis, eum cognōscēs. When you (will) see him [i.e., at that very moment], you will recognize him.
>
> Cum vincimus, tum pācem spērās. When (while) we are winning, you are (at the same time) hoping for peace.
> Cum ad illum locum vēnerant, tum amīcōs contulerant. When they had come to that place, they had brought their friends or not only had they come to that place, but they had also brought their friends.

Often, however, the verb of the cum clause is subjunctive, especially when it describes the general circumstances (rather than the exact time) when the main action occurred (often called a CUM* CIRCUMSTANTIAL CLAUSE), or explains the cause of the main action (CUM* CAUSAL CLAUSE), or describes a circumstance that might have obstructed the main action or is in some other way opposed to it (CUM* ADVERSATIVE OR CONCESSIVE CLAUSE):

> Cum hoc fēcisset, ad tē fūgit.
> When he had done this, he fled to you. (circumstantial)
>
> Cum hoc scīret, potuit eōs iuvāre.
> Since he knew this, he was able to help them. (causal)

Cum hoc scīret, tamen mīlitēs mīsit.
Although he knew this, nevertheless he sent the soldiers. (adversative)

Cum Gāium dīligerēmus, nōn poterāmus eum iuvāre.
Although we loved Gaius, we could not help him. (adversative)

Recognition: You should have little difficulty distinguishing among the four basic types of cum clauses: the temporal has an indicative verb, and the three subjunctive types can generally be recognized by analyzing the relationship between the actions in the main and subordinate clauses; in the case of adversative clauses the adverb tamen often appears in the main clause. Translation: Remember that when cum is followed immediately by a noun or pronoun in the ablative case, you should translate it with. When instead it introduces a subordinate clause, translate it when, since, although, etc. As seen in the above examples, the verb in a cum clause, whatever its type, is regularly translated as an indicative, i.e., without an auxiliary such as may or might.

IRREGULAR Ferō, ferre, tulī, lātum, to bear, carry

Ferō is one of a series of irregular verbs to be introduced in the closing chapters of this text (the others being volō, nōlō, mālō, fīō, and eō); they are all commonly used and must be learned thoroughly. The English verb "to bear" is cognate with Latin ferō, ferre and has generally the same basic and metaphorical meanings, to carry and to endure. In the present system ferō is simply a third conjugation verb, formed exactly like agō except that the stem vowel does not appear in a few places, including the infinitive ferre. The only irregular forms, all in the present tense (indicative, imperative, and infinitive), are highlighted below in bold; the imperfect subjunctive, while formed on the irregular infinitive ferre, nevertheless follows the usual pattern of present infinitive + endings. Although tulī (originally tetulī) and lātum (originally tlātum) derive ultimately, by suppletion, from a different verb related to tollō, the conjugation follows the regular pattern of the perfect system and should cause no difficulty. The singular imperative lacks the -e, like dīc, dūc, and fac (Capvt VIII).

Present Indicative

Active	Passive
1. férō	féror
2. fers (cf. ágis)	férris (ágeris)
3. fert (cf. ágit)	fértur (ágitur)
1. férimus	férimur
2. fértis (cf. ágitis)	ferímini
3. férunt	ferúntur

Present Active Imperative: fer (ágе), férte (ágite)

Infinitives

Active	Passive
Pres. férre (ágere)	férrī (ágī)
Perf. tulísse	lātus ésse
Fut. lātūrus ésse	lātum īrī

Synopsis

The following synopsis, showing irregular forms in bold, provides an overview of the conjugation of ferō; for the complete conjugation, see the App. (p. 508–09).

5. Rogābat cūr cēterae tantam fidem apud nōs praestārent et nōbīs tantam spem adferrent.

6. Cum patria nostra tanta beneficia offerat, tamen quīdam sē in īnsidiās fūrtim cōnferunt et contrā bonōs mox pugnābunt.
7. Dēnique audiāmus quantae sint hae īnsidiae ac quot coniūrātī contrā cīvitātem surgant.
8. Haec scelera repente exposuī nē alia et similia ferrētis.
9. Respondērunt plūrima arma ā mīlitibus ad lītus allāta esse et in nāvibus condita esse.
10. Cum parentēs essent vīvī, fēlīcēs erant; mortuī quoque sunt beātī.
11. Nesciō utrum trēs coniūrātī maneant an in exsilium contenderint.
12. Nōs cōnferāmus ad cēnam, meī amīcī, bibāmus multum vīnī, cōnsūmāmus noctem, atque omnēs cūrās nostrās minuāmus!
13. When the soldiers had been arrested, they soon offered us money.
14. Although life brings very difficult things, let us endure them all and dedicate ourselves to philosophy.
15. Since you know what help is being brought by our six friends, these evils can be endured with courage.
16. Although his eyes could not see the light of the sun, nevertheless that humble man used to do very many and very difficult things.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Potestne haec lūx esse tibi iūcunda, cum sciās hōs omnēs cōnsilia tua cognōvisse? (Cicero.)
2. Themistoclēs, cum Graeciam servitūte Persicā līberāvisset et propter invidiam in exsilium expulsus esset, ingrātae patriae iniūriam nōn tulit quam ferre dēbuit. (Cicero.—Persicus, -a, -um.—ingrātus, -a, -um, ungrateful; "ingrate," "ingratitude."—iniūria, -ae, f., injury; "injurious," "injuriously;" cf. iūs.)
3. Quae cum ita sint, Catilīna, cōnfer tē in exsilium. (Cicero.—quae cum: = et cum haec.)
4. Ō nāvis, novī flūctūs bellī tē in mare referent! Ō quid agis? Unde erit ūllum perfugium? (Horace.—nāvis: ship [of state].—flūctus, -ūs, m., wave, billow; "fluctuate," "fluctuation.")
5. Cum rēs pūblica immortālis esse dēbeat, doleō eam salūtis egēre ac in vītā ūnīus mortālis cōnsistere. (Cicero.—cōnsistō, -ere + in, to depend on; "consist," "consistency.")
6. Cum illum hominem esse servum nōvisset, eum comprehendere nōn dubitāvit. (Cicero.)
7. Ille comprehēnsus, cum prīmō impudenter respondēre coepisset, dēnique tamen nihil negāvit. (Cicero.—impudenter, adv.; "impudence," "impudent.")
8. Milō dīcitur per stadium vēnisse cum bovem umerīs ferret. (Cicero.—Milō, -lōnis, m., a famous Greek athlete.—stadium, -iī, n.—bōs, bovis, m./f., ox; "bovine," "beef."—umerus, -ī, m., shoulder; "humerus," "humeral.")
9. Quid vesper et somnus ferant, incertum est. (Livy.)

10. Ferte miserō tantum auxilium quantum potestis. (Terence.)
11. Hoc ūnum sciō: quod fāta ferunt, id ferēmus aequō animō. (Terence.)
12. Lēgum dēnique idcircō omnēs servī sumus, ut līberī esse possīmus. (*Cicero.—idcircō, adv., for this reason.)

Give Me a Thousand Kisses!

Vīvāmus, mea Lesbia, atque amēmus, rūmōrēsque senum sevēriōrum omnēs ūnius aestimēmus assis!
Sōlēs occidere et redīre possunt;
nōbīs cum semel occidit brevis lūx, nox est perpetua ūna dormienda.
Dā mī bāsia mīlle, deinde centum;
dein mīlle altera, dein secunda centum;
deinde usque altera mīlle, deinde centum.
Dein, cum mīlia multa fēcerīmus—conturbābimus illa, nē sciāmus, aut nē quis malus invidēre possit, cum tantum sciat esse bāsiōrum.

*Catullus Carm. 5: In one of his most popular carmina, Catullus here exhorts Lesbia to live, and love, and ignore the gossip of grumpy old men who envy young lovers and curse their passion.—rūmōrēs: with omnēs; adj. and noun were often widely separated in poetry, so it is essential to pay close attention to the endings.—sevērus, -a, -um, = Eng.; "persevere."—ūnius . . . assis: GEN. OF INDEF. VALUE; we would say at (rather than of) one. . . .—aestimāre, to value, estimate; "esteem," "estimate."–sōlēs: pl., as, in the poetic imagination, each day's sun is a new one.—redīre, to return.—nōbīs: DAT. OF REFERENCE, a usage formally introduced in Capvt XXXVIII, but whose sense is easily understood here.—mī: = mihi.—dein: = deinde.— conturbāre, to throw into confusion, mix up; "disturb," "perturbation"; here possibly an allusion to jumbling the counters on an abacus.—nē sciāmus: sc. numerum; if the number is unknown, then, in a sense, it is limitless; in ancient views of black magic, knowing the exact number of, say, a neighbor's sheep made a curse upon them more efficacious.—quis: here indef., someone.—invidēre: with malus, the word means both to envy and to cast an evil eye upon, i.e., to hex.—tantum: with bāsiōrum, gen. of the whole, = so many kisses.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: The poem is about living—and dying—as much as about loving, as announced in the equation set forth in the opening verse; what opposing images does Catullus employ for life and death, and how does he manipulate word order, and even sound effects, to draw our attention to the antitheses? How, in the vision of this poem, might one seemingly escape death? How are the senēs and the quis malus associated, and what do they represent? How does the poet employ numbers here–and not just the hundreds and thousands, but also the number "one"?

was common in Lat. verse.—lavāre, to bathe; "laundry," "lavatory."—causa . . . quaeritis: the usual order would be quaeritisne quae sit causa.—dactyliothēca, -ae, f., ring-box, jewelry chest; a Gk. word, as befits Charinus; "dactylic," "pterodactyl" (both originally derive from Gk., not Lat.).

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What noun must sēnōs modify? What effect was the poet hoping to achieve by so widely separating noun and adj.? You can do the math: how many rings did Charinus own? How many ring-boxes? So, what's the joke?

Facētiae (Witticisms)

Cum Cicerō apud Damasippum cēnāret et ille, mediocrī vīnō in mēnsā positō, dīceret, "Bibe hoc Falernum; hoc est vīnum quadrāgintā annōrum," Cicerō sīc respondit, "Bene aetātem fert!"

A.D. scholar whose writings reflected a keen interest in Rome's pagan past; his Saturnālia was a collection of dramatized dialogues set during the December festival of Saturnalia in the year A.D. 383 and featuring discussions among important figures of the period: among more serious topics the interlocutors shared a series of jokes told by famous persons from earlier times.—Falernum, -ī, n., Falernian (wine), the most revered of ancient Roman wines, from vineyards in northern Campania; Cicero's host Damasippus has substituted an inferior vintage.—quadrāgintā, indecl., 40; "quarantine."—trepidē, adv., in confusion; "trepidation," "intrepid."—modo . . . modo, now . . . now.—prō + ferō and re + trahō: you can easily deduce the meanings of these two compound verbs, which give us such derivatives as "profer" and "retract."—elephantō: one thinks of a child offering a peanut to a circus elephant.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Can you explain the humor in each of these two jokes? Which do you regard as more clever, which as unkind?

Having made it this far, you've certainly earned that appellation, and, as a further reward, here are more tidbits ex vocābulīs novīs huius capitis, all focused on that villainous Catiline: to start with, there's that famous cum temporal clause from Cicero's indictment of Catiline: cum tacent, clāmant, when they are silent, they are shouting, i.e., "by their silence they condemn you." Poor Catiline, perhaps he had too much to drink, usque ad nauseam, and spilled the beans, ignoring the warning, in vīnō vēritās; if only he had observed Horace's aurea mediocritās, the golden mean, he might have received auxilium ab altō, help from on high, but the gods, it appears, were against him. And so he soon met his end, semel et simul, once and for all: valē, miser Catilīna, et valeātis, vōs omnēs, amīcī vēritātis honōrisque!

CAPVT XXXII

Formation and Comparison of Adverbs; Volō, Mālō, Nōlō; Proviso Clauses

GRAMMATICA

FORMATION AND COMPARISON OF ADVERBS

You are by now familiar with a wide range of Latin adverbs, words that are employed (as in English) to modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs, and that usually precede the words they modify. Many have their own peculiar forms and endings and must simply be memorized when first introduced in the Vocābula (often without benefit of English derivatives to aid in the memorization): among these are cūr, etiam, ita, tam, etc.

Positive Degree

A great many adverbs, however, are formed directly from adjectives and are easily recognized. Many first/second declension adjectives form positive degree adverbs by adding -ē to the base:

lóng-ē	(far; longus, -a, -um)
lĭber-ē	(freely; līber, lībera, līberum)
púlchr-ē	(beautifully; pulcher, -chra, -chrum)

Adverbs are often formed from third declension adjectives by adding -iter to the base; if the base ends in -nt- only -er is added:

fórt-iter	(bravely; fortis, -e)
celér-iter	(quickly, celer, celeris, celere)
ācr-iter	(keenly; ācer, ācris, ācre)
fēlĭc-iter	(happily; fēlīx, gen. fēlīcis)
sapiént-er	(wisely; sapiēns, gen. sapientis)

Comparative and Superlative Degree

Many Latin adverbs have comparative and superlative forms, just as they do in English, and their English translations correspond to those of comparative and superlative adjectives; e.g., positive degree "quickly"; comparative "more (rather, too) quickly"; superlative "most (very) quickly," etc.

The comparative degree of adverbs is with few exceptions identical to the -ius form which you have already learned as the neuter of the comparative degree of the adjective: dīligentius, more/rather diligently.

The superlative degree of adverbs, being normally derived from the superlative degree of adjectives, regularly ends in -ē according to the rule given above for converting adjectives of the first and the second declensions into adverbs: iūcundissimē, most/very pleasantly.

Quam with Comparative and Superlative Adverbs

Quam is used with adverbs in the same ways as with adjectives: hic puer celerius cucurrit quam ille, this boy ran more quickly than that one; illa puella quam celerrimē cucurrit, that girl ran as quickly as possible. The ablative of comparison is not ordinarily employed after comparative adverbs (except in poetry).

Comparison of Irregular Adverbs

When the comparison of an adjective is irregular (see Capvt XXVII), the comparison of the adverb derived from it normally follows the irregularities of the adjective but has adverbial endings. Study carefully the following list of representative adverbs; those that do not follow the standard rules stated above for forming adverbs from adjectives are highlighted in bold (be prepared to point out how they do not conform). Note the alternate superlatives prīmō, which usually means first (in time) vs. prīmum, usually first (in a series); quam prīmum has the idiomatic meaning as soon as possible.

Positive	Comparative	Superlative
lóngē (far)	lóngius (farther, too f.)	longíssimē (farthest, very f.)
lĭberē (freely)	lībérius (more f.)	lībérrimē (most, very f.)
púlchrē (beautifully)	púlchrius (more b.)	pulchérrimē (most b.)
fórtiter (bravely)	fórtius (more b.)	fortíssimē (most b.)
celériter (quickly)	celérius (more q.)	celérrimē (most q.)
ācriter (keenly)	ācrius (more k.)	ācérrimē (most k.)
fēlĭciter (happily)	fēlĭcius (more h.)	fēlīcíssimē (most h.)
sapiénter (wisely)	sapiéntius (more w.)	sapientíssimē (most w.)
fácile (easily)	facílius (more e.)	facíllimē (most e.)
béne (well)	mélius (better)	óptimē (best)

mále (badly)	peíus (worse)	péssimē (worst) múltum (much)	plūs (more, quantity)	plūrimum (most, very much) magnópere (greatly)	mágis (more, quality)	máximē (most, especially) párum (little, not very [much])	mínus (less)	mínimē (least)
(prō)	príus (before, earlier)	prīmō (first, at first) prīmum (in the first place)
díū (for a long time)	diūtius (longer)	diūtíssimē (very long)

IRREGULAR Volō, velle, voluī, to wish

Like ferō (Capvt XXXI), volō is another common third conjugation verb which, though regular for the most part, does have several irregular forms, including the present infinitive velle. Remember these points:

—volō has no passive forms at all, no future active infinitive or participle, and no imperatives;
—the perfect system is entirely regular;
—the only irregular forms are in the present indicative (which must be memorized) and the present subjunctive (which is comparable to sim, sīs, sit);
—the imperfect subjunctive resembles that of ferō; while formed from the irregular infinitive velle, it nevertheless follows the usual pattern of present infinitive + personal endings;
—vol- is the base in the present system indicatives, vel- in the subjunctives.

Pres. Ind.	Pres. Subjunct.	Imperf. Subjunct.	Infinitives
1. vólō	vélim	véllem	Pres. vélle
2. vīs	vélīs	véllēs	Perf. voluísse
3. vult	vélit	véllet	Fut.———
1. vólumus	velímus	vellémus	Participle
2. vúltis	velítis	vellétis	Pres. vólēns
3. vólunt	vélint	véllent

Synopsis

The following synopsis, with irregular forms in bold, provides an overview of the conjugation of volō; for the full conjugation, see the App. (p. 507–08):

Indicative Mood

	Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut.Perf.	Pluperf.
Act.	vult	vólet	volébat	vóluit	volúerit	volúerat

Subjunctive Mood

Act.	vélit	—	véllet	volúerit	—	voluísset

Nōlō AND Mālō

The compounds nōlō, nōlle, nōluī (nē + volō), not to wish, to be unwilling, and mālō, mālle, māluī (magis + volō), to want (something) more or instead, prefer, follow volō closely, but have long vowels in their stems (nō-, mā-) and some other striking peculiarities, especially in the present indicative.

Present Indicative of Nōlō

Sg. nōlō, nōn vīs, nōn vult Pl. nōlumus, nōn vúltis, nōlunt

Present Indicative of Mālō

Sg. mālō, māvīs, māvult Pl. mālumus, māvúltis, mālunt

The following synopses provide overviews of both verbs, with irregular forms in bold; see the App. (p. 507–08) for full conjugations:

Indicative Mood
	Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut.Perf.	Pluperf.
Act.	nōn vult	nōlet	nōlébat	nōluit	nōlúerit	nōlúerat
Subjunctive Mood
Act.	nōlit	—	nōllet	nōlúerit	—	nōluísset
Indicative Mood
Act.	māvult	mālet	mālébat	māluit	mālúerit	mālúerat
Subjunctive Mood
Act.	mālit	—	māllet	mālúerit	—	māluísset

Nōlō and Negative Commands

While volō and mālō lack imperatives, nōlō has singular and plural imperatives that were commonly employed with complementary infinitives to express NEGATIVE COMMANDS:

Nōlī manēre, Catilīna! Do not remain, Catiline!
Nōlīte discēdere, amīcī meī! Do not leave, my friends!

PROVISO CLAUSES

The subjunctive is used in a subordinate clause introduced by dummodo, provided that, so long as, and certain other words that express a provisional circumstance or "proviso"; nē is used as the negative in such clauses. The verb in such clauses is simply translated as an indicative:

Nōn timēbō, dummodo hīc remaneās. I shall not be afraid, provided that you remain here.
Erimus fēlīcēs, dummodo nē discēdās. We shall be happy, so long as (provided that) you do not leave.

VOCĀBVLA

You must learn all the irregular adverbs in the chart on p. 265–66—not a daunting task if you have mastered the irregular adjective comparisons presented in Capvt XXVII. To reinforce learning volō, nōlō, and mālō, do a synopsis of each in a different person and number and then check your work against the full conjugations in the Summārium Fōrmārum, p. 507–08.

custōdia, custōdiae, f., protection, custody; pl., guards (custodian)

The Character of Cimon

lib- generosity

Cimōn celeriter ad summōs honōrēs pervēnit. Habēbat enim satis ēloquentiae, summam līberālitātem, magnam scientiam lēgum et reī mīlitāris, quod cum patre ā puerō in exercitibus fuerat. Itaque hic populum urbānum in suā potestāte facillimē tenuit et apud exercitum valuit plūrimum auctōritāte.

Cum ille occidisset, Athēniēnsēs dē eō diū doluērunt; nōn sōlum in bellō, autem, sed etiam in pāce eum graviter dēsīderāvērunt. Fuit enim vir tantae līberālitātis ut, cum multōs hortōs habēret, numquam in hīs custōdiās pōneret; nam hortōs līberrimē patēre voluit nē populus ab hīs frūctibus prohibērētur. Saepe autem, cum aliquem minus bene vestītum vidēret, eī suum amiculum dedit. Multōs locuplētāvit; multōs pauperēs vīvōs iūvit atque mortuōs suō sūmptū extulit. Sīc minimē mīrum est sī, propter mōrēs Cimōnis, vīta eius fuit sēcūra et mors eius fuit omnibus tam acerba quam mors cuiusdam ex familiā.

Nepos Cim. (adapted excerpts): Cornelius Nepos, as you may recall from the notes to "Catullus Dedicates His Poetry Book" in Capvt II above, was author of hundreds of brief biographies of famous Greeks and Romans. Two dozen or so of Nepos' biographies survive, including his life of the 5th-cent. Athenian statesman Cimon, whose career, while distinguished, did have its low points, including a 10-year ostracism (exile) from Athens.—per + venīre: another compound verb whose meaning you can easily deduce; "parvenu."—ēloquentia, -ae, f., = Eng.; "eloquent."—līberālitās, -tātis, f., = Eng.; "liberal," "liberalism."—mīlitāris, -e, = Eng.; "militarism," "demilitarize."—ā puerō: from his boyhood.—potestās, -tātis, f., power; "potent"; cf. possum.—auctōritās, -tātis, f., authority; "authoritative"; cf. auctor; here ABL. OF RESPECT OR SPECIFICATION, in (respect to his). . . .—Athēniēnsis, -is, m./f., an Athenian.—hortus, -ī, m., garden; "horticulture," "cohort."—vestītus, -a, -um, clothed; "vest," "vestment," "divest."—amiculum, -ī, n., cloak.—locuplētāre, to enrich; "complete," "replete."—sūmptus, -ūs, m., expense; "sumptuous," "consumption."—extulit: from ex + ferō (efferō), here = bury, but what is the lit. meaning? "efferent," "elation."—mīrus, -a, -um, surprising; "miracle," "admiration."—sēcūrus, -a, -um: from sē-, without, + cūra; "secure," "security."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Nepos, never regarded as a critical historian (one modern scholar has ungently termed him "an intellectual pygmy"), tended to eulogize his subjects and reshape the facts when useful to his moralizing purposes; what are the principal virtues Nepos here attributes to Cimon, and in what two different arenas of Athenian life?

A Vacation . . . from You!

Quid mihi reddat ager quaeris, Line, Nōmentānus?
Hoc mihi reddit ager: tē, Line, nōn videō!

*Martial Epig. 2.38: Does Linus really wonder why Martial takes so many country vacations?! Meter: elegiac couplet.—reddō, -ere, to give back, return (in profit); "render," "rent."—ager: here, farm, i.e., Martial's rustic retreat.—Nōmentānus, -a, -um, in Nomentum, a town of Latium known for its wine industry.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is most striking stylistically in this epigram, and what is the comic effect?—though not so funny to poor Linus!

Please . . . Don't!

Nīl recitās et vīs, Māmerce, poēta vidērī.
Quidquid vīs estō, dummodo nīl recitēs!

*Martial Epig. 2.88: Mamercus was a wannabe poet—there were plenty of those in Rome (cf. "Juvenal Explains," Capvt XVI)! Meter: elegiac couplet.—nīl: = nihil.—estō: fut. imperat. of esse, which often had the stern tone of a religious or legal dictum, "Thou shalt be . . . !"

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Compare this poem with Epig. 1.38 in Capvt XVII; how were Fidentinus and Mamercus at once alike, and unalike? Which, in Martial's view, was the greater pest? What do the two epigrams tell you about the importance of recitātiō in Roman literary culture?

M. Salāriō fēlīciter!

CIL 4.6811: Scribbled on the wall of a house in Reg. V by some well-wisher of Salarius. A Manius Salarius Crocus is known from two graffiti in a nearby house, and this Salarius may be the same: the Romans usually abbreviated the praenomen Mārcus with an M and Mānius with M', but the distinction was not always observed in graffiti.—fēlīciter: an example of the sort of 3rd-decl. adj.-based adverbs newly introduced in this chapter; sc. sit or something such, in the sense of "may things go well for . . . !"

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! The modern Olympic games have as their motto three comparative adverbs, citius, altius (from altus, -a, -um, high), fortius. The new irregular verbs in this chapter, especially volō and nōlō are extremely common in Latin and you'll find them, willy-nilly, all through English. You know very well, for example, the legal plea of nōlō, short for nōlō contendere, I am unwilling to contest (the accusation); there's also nol. pros. = nōlle prōsequī, to be unwilling to pursue (the matter), meaning to drop a lawsuit; nōlēns, volēns, unwilling (or) willing, i.e., whether or not one wishes, like "willy-nilly" (a contraction of "will ye, nill ye"); the abbreviation "d.v.," for deō volente; also volō, nōn valeō, I am willing but not able; nōlī mē tangere, a warning against tampering as well as Latin for the jewel-weed flower or "touch-me-not"; quantum vīs, as much as you wish (which may be more than just quantum satis, Capvt XXX!); Deus vult, the call to arms of the First Crusade; and mālō morī quam foedārī, freely "death before dishonor" (lit., I prefer to die than to be dishonored: for the deponent verb morior, see Capvt XXXIV). Years ago some pundit wrote (demonstrating the importance of macrons), mālō malō malō mālō, I'd rather be in an apple tree than a bad man in adversity; the first mālō is from mālum, -ī, apple, fruit-tree, which calls to mind Horace's characterization of a Roman cēna, from the hors d'oeuvres to the dessert, as ab ovō (ovum, -ī, egg) usque ad māla, a phrase, very like the expression "from soup to nuts," that became proverbial for "from start to finish." Et cētera ex vocābulīs novīs: cēterīs pāribus, all else being equal; custōdia is related to custōs, custōdis, guard, and custōdīre, to guard, hence Juvenal's satiric query, sed quis custōdiet ipsōs custōdēs; exercitus is connected with exerceō, exercēre, to practice, exercise, and the noun exercitātiō, which gives us the proverb, most salutary for Latin students: exercitātiō est optimus magister. And so, valēte, discipulī/ae, et exercēte, exercēte, exercēte!

CAPVT XXXIII

Conditions

GRAMMATICA

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

CONDITIONS are among the most common sentence types, others being DECLARATIVE, INTERROGATIVE, and EXCLAMATORY. You have encountered numerous conditional sentences in your Latin readings already, and are likely aware that they consist of two clauses: (1) the condition or PROTASIS (Greek for "proposition" or "premise"), a subordinate clause usually introduced by sī, if, or nisi, if not or unless, and stating a hypothetical action or circumstance, and (2) the conclusion or APODOSIS (Greek for "outcome" or "result"), the main clause, which expresses the anticipated outcome if the premise turns out to be true.

There are six basic conditional types; three have their verbs in the indicative, three in the subjunctive, and the reason is simple. While all conditional sentences, by their very nature, describe actions in the past, present, or future that are to one extent or another hypothetical, the indicative was employed in those where the condition was more likely to be realized, the subjunctive in those where the premise was either less likely to be realized or where both the condition and the conclusion were absolutely contrary to the actual facts of a situation. Study the following summary, learning the names of each of the six conditional types, how to recognize them, and the standard formulae for translation:

Indicative Conditions

1. SIMPLE FACT PRESENT: Sī id facit, prūdēns est. If he is doing this [and it is quite possible that he is], he is wise. Present indicative in both clauses; translate verbs as present indicatives.
2. SIMPLE FACT PAST: Sī id fēcit, prūdēns fuit. If he did this [and quite possibly he did], he was wise. Past tense (perfect or imperfect) indicative in both clauses; translate verbs as past indicatives.
3. SIMPLE FACT FUTURE (sometimes called FUTURE MORE VIVID): Sī id faciet, prūdēns erit. If he does (will do) this [and quite possibly he will], he will be wise. Future indicative in both clauses; translate the verb in the protasis as a present tense (here English "if" + the present has a future sense), the verb in the apodosis as a future. (Occasionally the future perfect is used, in either or both clauses, with virtually the same sense as the simple future: see S.A. 8 and "B.Y.O.B." line 3, p. 277.)

Subjunctive Conditions

The indicative conditions deal with potential facts; the subjunctive conditions are ideal rather than factual, describing circumstances that are either, in the case of the "future less vivid," somewhat less likely to be realized or less vividly imagined or, in the case of the two "contrary to fact" types, opposite to what actually is happening or has happened in the past.

1. CONTRARY TO FACT PRESENT: Sī id faceret, prūdēns esset. If he were doing this [but in fact he is not], he would be wise [but he is not]. Imperfect subjunctive in both clauses; translate with auxiliaries were (. . . ing) and would (be).
2. CONTRARY TO FACT PAST: Sī id fēcisset, prūdēns fuisset. If he had done this [but he did not], he would have been wise [but he was not]. Pluperfect subjunctive in both clauses; translate with auxiliaries had and would have.
3. FUTURE LESS VIVID (sometimes called SHOULD-WOULD): Sī id faciat, prūdēns sit. If he should do this [and he may, or he may not], he would be wise. Present subjunctive in both clauses; translate with auxiliaries should and would.

There are occasional variants on these six basic types, e.g., use of the imperative in the apodosis, MIXED CONDITIONS with different tenses or moods in the protasis and apodosis, different introductory words (e.g., dum), etc., but those are easily dealt with in context. For practice, identify the type of each of the following conditions:

1. Sī hoc dīcet, errābit. If he says this, he will be wrong.
2. Sī hoc dīcit, errat. If he says this, he is wrong.
3. Sī hoc dīxisset, errāvisset. If he had said this, he would have been wrong.
4. Sī hoc dīcat, erret. If he should say this, he would be wrong.
5. Sī hoc dīxit, errāvit. If he said this, he was wrong.
6. Sī hoc dīceret, errāret. If he were saying this, he would be wrong.
7. Sī veniat, hoc videat. If he should come, he would see this.
8. Sī vēnit, hoc vīdit. If he came, he saw this.
9. Sī venīret, hoc vidēret. If he were coming, he would see this.
10. Sī veniet, hoc vidēbit. If he comes, he will see this.
11. Sī vēnisset, hoc vīdisset. If he had come, he would have seen this.

VOCĀBVLA

Note that ops (like a few other nouns you've learned, e.g., animus and fīnis) has some different meanings in the plural; and be aware that quis, quid, as you'll see below, is often indefinite and not interrogative; finally, the eu diphthong in heu is one of the very few sounds in classical Latin (the sound represented by the letter y is another) that we do not have in English: as always, listen carefully to this chapter's vocabulary either on the CDs or at www.wheelockslatin.com.

inítium, inítiī, n., beginning, commencement (initial, initiate, initiation) ops, ópis, f., help, aid; ópēs, ópum, pl., power, resources, wealth (opulent, opulence; cf. cōpia, from con- + ops) philósophus, philósophī, m., and philósopha, philósophae, f., philosopher (philosophical; cf. philosophia) plēbs, plḗbis, f., the common people, populace, plebeians (plebs, plebe, plebeian, plebiscite) sāl, sális, m., salt; wit (salad, salami, salary, saline, salinometer, sauce, sausage) spéculum, spéculī, n., mirror (speculate, speculation; cf. spectāre, to watch, look at) quis, quid, after sī, nisi, nē, num, indef. pron., anyone, anything, someone, something (cf. quis? quid? quisque, quisquis) cándidus, cándida, cándidum, shining, bright, white; beautiful (candid, candidate, candor, incandescent, candle, chandelier) mérus, méra, mérum, pure, undiluted (mere, merely) suā́vis, suā́ve, sweet (suave, suaveness, suasion, dissuade, persuade) -ve, conj. suffixed to a word = aut before the word (cf. -que), or heu, interj., ah!, alas! (a sound of grief or pain; cf. "woe") súbitō, adv., suddenly (sudden, suddenness) recū́sō, recūsā́re, recūsā́vī, recūsā́tum, to refuse (recuse, recusant, recusative; cf. causa) trā́dō, trā́dere, trā́didī, trā́ditum (trāns + dō), to give over, surrender; hand down, transmit, teach (tradition, traitor, treason)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

Read each sentence and passage aloud, and read for comprehension, before attempting a translation. As you read, identify the specific type of each conditional sentence and translate according to the rules introduced above.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Dummodo exercitus opem mox ferat, moenia urbis celeriter cōnservāre poterimus.
2. Cum cōnsilia hostium ab initiō cognōvissēs, prīmō tamen ūllum auxilium offerre aut etiam centum mīlitēs prōmittere nōluistī.
3. Sī dīvitiae et invidia nōs ab amōre et honōre usque prohibent, dīvitēsne vērē sumus?
4. Pauper quidem nōn erit pār cēterīs nisi scientiam ingeniumve habēbit; sī autem haec habeat, multī magnopere invideant.
5. Nisi īnsidiae patērent, ferrum eius maximē timērēmus.
6. Sī quis rogābit quid nunc discās, nōlī dubitāre: refer tē artem nōn mediocrem sed ūtilissimam ac difficillimam discere.
7. Lēgēs ita scrībantur ut dīvitēs et plēbs—etiam pauper sine asse—sint parēs.
8. Sī custōdiae dūriōrēs fortiōrēsque ad casam tuam contendissent, heu, numquam tanta scelera suscēpissēs et hī omnēs nōn occidissent.
9. Illa philosopha sapientissima, cum id semel cognōvisset, ad eōs celerrimē sē contulit et omnēs opēs suās praebuit.
10. Dūrum exsilium tam ācrem mentem ūnō annō mollīre nōn poterit.
11. Propter omnēs rūmōrēs pessimōs (quī nōn erant vērī), nātae suāvēs eius magnopere dolēbant et dormīre nōn poterant.
12. If those philosophers should come soon, you would be happier.
13. If you had not answered very wisely, they would have hesitated to offer us peace.
14. If anyone does these three things well, he will live better.
15. If you were willing to read better books, you would most certainly learn more.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Sī vīs pācem, parā bellum. (Flavius Vegetius.—parā: prepare for.)
2. Arma sunt parvī pretiī, nisi vērō cōnsilium est in patriā. (Cicero.—pretium, -ī, n., value; "precious," "price," "appraise.")
3. Salūs omnium ūnā nocte certē āmissa esset, nisi illa sevēritās contrā istōs suscepta esset. (Cicero.—sevēritās, -tātis, f., = Eng.; "severe," "persevere.")
4. Sī quid dē mē posse agī putābis, id agēs—sī tū ipse ab istō perīculō eris līber. (Cicero.)
5. Sī essem mihi cōnscius ūllīus culpae, aequō animō hoc malum ferrem. (Phaedrus.—cōnscius, -a, -um, conscious; "conscience," "unconscious.")
6. Dīcis tē vērē mālle fortūnam et mōrēs antīquae plēbis; sed sī quis ad illa subitō tē agat, illum modum vītae recūsēs. (Horace.)
7. Minus saepe errēs, sī sciās quid nesciās. (Publilius Syrus.)

8. Dīcēs "heu" sī tē in speculō vīderis. (Horace.)
9. Nīl habet īnfēlīx paupertās dūrius in sē quam quod rīdiculōs hominēs facit. (*Juvenal.—nīl: = nihil.—īnfēlīx: = īn-, not, + fēlīx.–quod, the fact that.)
10. Magnō mē metū līberābis, dummodo inter mē atque tē mūrus intersit. (*Cicero.–mūrus, -ī, m., wall, city-wall; "mural."–intersum, -esse, -fuī, to be between, lie between; "interest.")
11. Sī occīdī, rēctē fēcī; sed nōn occīdī. (*Quintilian.–occīdō, -ere, -cīdī, -cīsum, to kill; "homicide."–rēctē, adv., rightly, justly; "rectitude.")

*Catullus Carm. 13: The perfect reading selection for a chapter on conditions; this dinner invitation, one of Catullus' most popular poems, was highly conditional, but if Fabullus accepts, he's in for an unusual treat! Meter: hendecasyllabic.—favēre: + dat., to be favorable toward, favor; "favorite."—cachinna, -ae, f., laugh, laughter; "cachinnate"; probably in origin ONOMATOPOETIC, like Eng. "cackle."—venustus, -a, -um, from venus/Venus, attractive (in appearance or manner), charming; "venereal."—sacculus, -ī, m., money-bag, wallet; "sack," "satchel."—arānea, -ae, f., spiderweb; "araneid," cognate with "arachnid."—contrā, here adv., on the other hand, in return; "contrary."—seu, conj., or if, or perhaps.—ēlegāns, gen. -gantis; "elegance," "elegantly."—unguentum, -ī, n., salve, perfume; "unguent," "ointment."—dabo: -ō was often shortened in verse.—dōnārunt: = dōnāvērunt (such contractions, dropping v and the following vowel, were common in perf. system forms), from dōnāre, to give; "donation," "donor."—Venus, -neris, f., and Cupīdō, -dinis, m.; Venus and Cupid, pl. here to represent all the fostering powers of Love; "venerate," "cupidity;" cf. cupiō; cupiditās.—quod . . . olfaciēs: = cum tū id olfaciēs.—olfaciō, -ere, to smell; "olfactory," "olfactant."—deōs rogābis . . . ut . . . faciant: JUSSIVE NOUN CLAUSE, a construction formally introduced in Capvt XXXVI, but easily translated here.—nāsus,

-ī, m., nose; "nasal" and "nasalize" are derivatives, "nostril" and "nozzle" are cognate; obj. complement with tē; the wide separation of adj. and noun suggests the cartoon-like enormity of the imagined schnoz!

QVAESTIŌNĒS: The poem neatly falls into two parts, the first describing what Fabullus will not receive at this cēna, and what therefore he must bring, and why; the second describing what he will receive, and why. Comment on Catullus' use of cēnābis/cēna and nam as structural markers, and on how effectively the poet produces a surprise ending at the close of each of the poem's halves. What other thematic connections do you see between the two sections?

The Rich Get Richer

Semper pauper eris, sī pauper es, Aemiliāne:

*Martial Epig. 5.81: Aemilianus, like most of Martial's addresses, is doubtless fictitious but represents a type. Meter: elegiac couplet.

QUAESTIŌ: Comment on the poet's use of anaphora, word order, and ALLITERATION (repetition of consonant sounds) to help make his point.

Quintilian Inst. 1.1.23: Quintilian (Marcus Fabius Quintilianus, ca. A.D. 35–95) is best known for his 12-volume work on oratory and education, the Īnstitūtiōnēs Ōrātōriae; he has given us the well known phrase defining the teacher's role of serving in locō parentis, and you read his dictum on Roman satire in the notes to "Juvenal Explains" in Capvt XVI. Philip hired Aristotle to tutor Alexander when the boy was 13; for another reflection on the intellectual interests of Alexander the Great, review the passage you read from Cicero's Prō Archiā in Capvt XIII.—an, interrog. conj., or, can it be that.—Macedonēs, -num, m./f. pl., Macedonians.—Aristotelēs, -lis, m.—pertinēre ad: to relate to, affect; "pertain," "pertinent."—summa, -ae, f., highest part, whole; "sum," "summary."

Cicero Sen. 4.11: Another example of Roman wit, from Cicero's treatise On Old Age (take a few minutes now to review the other selections you have read from that same work, in Capita XV, XVII, and XIX). During the second Punic War, the inhabitants of Tarentum, in southeastern Italy (Map 1), revolted from the Romans to Hannibal, though the Romans under Marcus Livius Salinator managed to hold the citadel. In 209 B.C. the city was recaptured by Quintus Fabius Maximus (Fabius "the Delayer," about whose accomplishments you read in Capvt XV).— opera, -ae, f., work, help, effort; meā operā is rather like our idiom, "thanks to me."—mē audiente: like our idiom "in my presence," but what is the lit. meaning? Like Cicero's other philosophical treatises, the Dē Senectūte was written in the form of a dialogue; the "me" speaking here was Cato the Elder, a contemporary of Fabius.

QVAESTIŌ: Explain Salinator's hubris, and Fabius' wit.

CIL 4.10237: One of several illustrated gladiatorial graffiti from a tomb in the necropolis outside Pompeii's Porta di Nocera; the games whose results are recorded here were sponsored by Marcus Cominius Heres (Hērēs, -rēdis), apparently a local magistrate. The three named gladiators, Princeps (whose name is misspelled) and the two depicted in the drawing, Hilarus and Creunus, all of them slaves, had impressive winning records: the first Roman numeral after each gladiator's name stands for the number of pugnae, fights, in which he had competed, the second for the number of corōnae (here, as often, abbreviated as a reverse C), crowns or victory garlands, which he had won; someone, perhaps the fan of a rival, marked out the number of Hilarus' victories with two lines; the meaning of the letters (TAAV?) written beneath Creunus' name is unclear. Pictured to the right are musicians (gladiatorial games had bands just like football games today!); the figures to the far left are probably spectators.—mūnus, -neris, n., service, function, duty; public show, game; offering, gift; "munificence," "munificent."—Nōlae: LOCATIVE case (see Capvt XXXVII) of the place name Nōla, = at Nola, a town northeast of Pompeii.—quādrīduum, -ī, n., (a period of) four days; with dē, for a . . . ; gladiatorial games were often scheduled for several consecutive days.—Nerōniānus, -a, -m, of (the emperor) Nero, Neronian; the epithet indicates that these fighters were from the imperial gladiatorial camp at Capua.—missus est: i.e., he was defeated but spared ("sent home to fight another day").

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Here are some well known conditions: sī nātūra negat, facit indignātiō versum, if nature denies (i.e., if my talent is lacking), indignation creates my verse (so said the satirist Juvenal, who had plenty of both!—see "Juvenal Explains," Capvt XVI); sī fēcistī, negā! (a lawyer's advice); sī Deus nōbīscum, quis contrā nōs (the verbs are left out, but the meaning is clear); sī post fāta venit glōria, nōn properō, if glory comes (only) after death, I'm in no hurry! (Martial); sī sīc omnēs, freely, a wistful "if only everything were like this" (or does it really mean "all on the boat became ill"?!!). Ex vocābulīs novīs quoque: well, to start "from the beginning," the phrase ab initiō is quite common in English; those running for political office in Rome wore the toga candida, white toga, hence English "candidate." The Romans called undiluted wine merum (which the bibulous merely imbibed!); ope et cōnsiliō is a good way to manage life. The expression "with a grain of salt" comes from Latin cum grānō salis; "salary" is also from sāl, a package of which was part of a Roman soldier's pay (we "bring home the salty bacon," Romans brought home the salt!); and sāl Atticum is dry Athenian wit. Art is a speculum vītae. If you remember how to form adverbs from adjectives, then you can decipher the proverb suāviter in modō, fortiter in rē, a good mode for the Latin teacher; and if you read music, you may have seen subitō, a musical annotation meaning quickly.

Hope you enjoy these closing miscellānea (from miscellāneus, -a, -um, varied, mixed), and here's one reason why: sī fīnis bonus est, tōtum bonum erit, an old proverb, a "mixed condition," and familiar vocabulary, so I'll give you the free version, "All's well that ends well (including this chapter)!": et vōs omnēs, quoque valeātis!

GRAMMATICA

DEPONENT VERBS

Latin has a number of common DEPONENT VERBS, verbs that have passive endings but active meanings. There are few new forms to be learned (only the imperatives); the most crucial matter is simply to recall which verbs are deponent, so that you remember to translate them in the active voice, and that can be managed through careful vocabulary study. There are a few exceptions to the rule of passive forms/active meanings, and those will also need to be carefully noted.

Principal Parts and Conjugation

As you will see from the following examples, deponents have only three principal parts, the passive equivalents of the first three principal parts of regular verbs (1. first pers. sg. pres. indic., 2. pres. infin., 3. first pers. sg. perf. indic.).

Present Indic.	Present Infin.	Perfect Indic.
hórtor, I urge	hortārī, to urge	hortātus (-a, -um) sum, I urged fáteor, I confess	fatērī, to confess	fássus (-a, -um) sum, I confessed
séquor, I follow	séquī, to follow	secūtus (-a, -um) sum, I followed mōlior, I work at	mōlīrī, to work at	mōlītus (-a, -um) sum, I worked at pátior, I suffer	pátī, to suffer	pássus (-a, -um) sum, I suffered

Deponents are conjugated according to the same rules as regular verbs in the passive voice; the following representative forms are provided for review, and full conjugations for each of the five examples given above are included in the App. (p. 504–06).

Indicative

Present

1. hórtor, I urge	séquor, I follow
2. hortāris (-re), you urge	séqueris (-re), you follow
3. hortātur, he urges	séquitur, he follows
1. hortāmur, we urge	séquimur, we follow
2. hortāminī, you urge	sequíminī, you follow
3. hortántur, they urge	sequúntur, they follow

Imperfect

1. hortābar, I was urging	sequēbar, I was following
2. hortābāris (-re), you were urging, etc.	sequēbāris (-re), you were following, etc.

Future

1. hortābor, I shall urge	séquar, I shall follow
2. hortāberis (-re), you will urge	sequēris (-re), you will follow
3. hortābitur, he will urge, etc.	sequētur, he will follow, etc.

Perfect

hortātus, -a, -um sum, I urged, etc.	secūtus, -a, -um sum, I followed, etc.

Pluperfect

hortātus, -a, -um éram, I had urged, etc.	secūtus, -a, -um éram, I had followed, etc.

Future Perfect

hortātus, -a, -um érō, I shall have urged, etc.	secūtus, -a, -um érō, I shall have followed, etc.

Subjunctive

Present

hórter, hortēris, hortētur, etc.	séquar, sequāris, sequātur, etc.

Imperfect

hortārer, hortārēris, hortārētur, etc.	séquerer, sequerēris, sequerētur, etc.

Perfect

hortātus, -a, -um sim, sīs, etc.	secūtus, -a, -um sim, sīs, etc.

Pluperfect

hortātus, -a, -um éssem, etc.	secūtus, -a, -um éssem, etc.

Synopsis

The following synopsis of fateor, fatērī, fassus sum provides a useful overview of the conjugation of deponents; remember that all English equivalents are active, i.e., he confesses, he will confess, etc.

Indicative Mood

Pres.	Fut.	Imperf.	Perf.	Fut. Perf.	Pluperf.
fatētur	fatēbitur	fatēbātur	fássus est	fássus érit	fássus érat

Subjunctive Mood

fateātur	——	fatērētur	fássus sit	——	fássus ésset

Participles, Infinitives, and Imperatives

The participles and infinitives of typical deponent verbs are here given in full not because of any new forms but because of certain discrepancies in the general rule of passive forms with active meanings:

Participles

Pres. hórtāns, urging	séquēns, following
Perf. hortātus, -a, -um, having urged	secūtus, -a, -um, having followed
Fut. hortātūrus, -a, -um, about to urge	secūtūrus, -a, -um, about to follow
Ger. hortándus, -a, -um, to be urged	sequéndus, -a, -um, to be followed

Infinitives

Pres. hortārī, to urge	séquī, to follow
Perf. hortātus, -a, -um ésse, to have urged	secūtus, -a, -um ésse, to have followed
Fut. hortātūrus, -a, -um ésse, to be about to urge	secūtūrus, -a, -um ésse, to be about to follow

Exceptions: Deponents have the same four participles as regular verbs, but only three infinitives, one for each tense. Three of the participles and one of the infinitives present exceptions to the rule that deponents are passive in form but active in meaning:

1. Present and future participles: active forms with active meanings.
2. Gerundive (future passive participle): passive form with passive meaning.
3. Future infinitive: active form with active meaning.

Imperatives

The present imperative of deponents would naturally have the forms of the present passive imperative. These forms have not been given before because they are found chiefly in deponent verbs, but they are easy to learn: the second person singular has the same spelling as that of the alternate second person singular passive of the present indicative, e.g., sequere, follow! Note that, coincidentally, this form is also identical to the (non-existent) present active infinitive: be careful not to mistake this deponent imperative for an infinitive. The plural imperative is spelled the same as the second person plural passive of the present indicative, e.g., sequiminī, follow! Compare the following examples:

hortā́re, urge!	fatḗre, confess!	mōlī́re, work at!	pátere, endure!

Semi-Deponent Verbs

Latin has a few SEMI-DEPONENT VERBS, which are normal in the present system but deponent in the perfect system, as seen in their principal parts:

aúdeō, I dare	audḗre, to dare	aúsus sum, I dared
gaúdeō, I rejoice	gaudḗre, to rejoice	gāvī́sus sum, I rejoiced

Study the following sentences, containing both deponent and semi-deponent verbs:

1. Eum patientem haec mala hortātī sunt.
   They encouraged him (as he was) suffering these evils.
2. Eum passūrum haec mala hortātī sunt.
   They encouraged him (as he was) about to suffer these evils.
3. Is, haec mala passus, hortandus est.
   This man, having suffered these evils, ought to be encouraged.
4. Is haec mala fortiter patiētur.
   He will suffer these evils bravely.
5. Eum sequere et haec mōlīre.
   Follow him and work at these things.
6. Eum sequī et haec mōlīrī nōn ausus es.
   You did not dare to follow him and work at these things.
7. Eum sequeris/sequēris.
   You are following/will follow him.
8. Eum hortēmur et sequāmur.
   Let us encourage and follow him.

ABLATIVE WITH SPECIAL DEPONENTS

The ablative is used as object of a few deponent verbs, of which ūtor (and its compounds) is the most common (others, including fruor, to enjoy, fungor, to perform, potior, to possess, and vēscor, to eat, are not employed in this book, but may be encountered in your later reading). Ūtor, to use, enjoy, may originally have meant I am benefitted/I benefit myself (by), so that this ABLATIVE WITH SPECIAL DEPONENTS may in origin have been an ablative of means:

Ūtitur stilō. He is using a pencil (lit., He is benefitted/benefits himself by means of a pencil).
Cicerō Graecīs litterīs ūtēbātur. Cicero used to enjoy Greek literature.
Nōn audent ūtī nāvibus. They do not dare to use the ships.
Nōn ausī sunt ūtī nāvibus. They did not dare to use the ships.

VOCĀBVLA

The basic sense of anima, introduced below, was life-breath, whereas animus, as you have already learned, refers fundamentally to mind, as opposed to body; but there came to be some overlap in meaning, and both words could mean soul. As you learn the principal parts of the deponent verbs introduced here, practice by doing a synopsis, with English translation, of two or three of them from different conjugations, each in a different person and number; and be careful not to confuse patior with pateō, learned earlier.

ánima, ánimae, f., air (breathed by an animal), breath; soul, spirit (anima, animism, animation, animated, inanimate; cf. animal, animus) remíssiō, remissiónis, f., letting go, release; relaxation (remiss, remission; from re + mittō) vōx, vốcis, f., voice, word (vocal, vocalic, vocalize, vociferous, vowel; vox angelica, vox humana, vox populi; cf. vocō) advérsus, advérsa, advérsum, opposite, adverse (adversary, adversative, adversity; cf. vertō) tālis, tāle, such, of such a sort (cf. quālis, of what sort, what kind of) vae, interj., often + dat. or acc., alas, woe to árbitror, arbitrārī, arbitrātus sum, to judge, think (arbiter, arbitress, arbitration, arbitrator, arbitrary, arbitrarily) cṓnor, cōnārī, cōnātus sum, to try, attempt (conation, conative) crḗscō, crḗscere, crḗvī, crḗtum, to increase (crescent, crescendo, concrete, decrease, excrescence, increment, accretion, accrue, crew, recruit) ēgrédior, ḗgredī, ēgréssus sum, to go out (egress; cf. aggression, congress, digress, ingredient, ingress, progress, regress, retrogress, transgress) fáteor, fatḗrī, fássus sum, to confess, admit (confession, profess, profession, professor; cf. fābula, fāma, fātum) hórtor, hortārī, hortātus sum, to encourage, urge (hortatory, exhortation) lóquor, lóquī, locū́tus sum, to say, speak, tell (loquacious, circumlocution, colloquial, elocution, eloquent, obloquy, soliloquy, ventriloquist) mṓlior, mōlīrī, mōlītus sum, to work at, build, undertake, plan (demolish, demolition; cf. mōlēs, a large mass, massive structure)

mórior, mórī, mórtuus sum, fut. act. partic. moritū́rus, to die (moribund, mortuary; cf. mors, mortālis, mortuus, immortālis)

nā́scor, nāscī, nā́tus sum, to be born; spring forth, arise (agnate, cognate, innate, nascent, natal, nation, nature, naive; cf. nāta, nātūra) pátior, pátī, pássus sum, to suffer, endure; permit (passion, passive, compassion, compatible, impassioned, dispassionate; cf. patientia) proficīscor, proficīscī, proféctus sum, to set out, start (profit and proficient from the related prōficiō, to make headway, gain results)

- rūsticor, rūsticārī, rūsticātus sum, to live in the country (rusticate, rustic, rural, cf. rūsticus, rural) sédeō, sedḗre, sḗdī, séssum, to sit (sedan, sedate, sedentary, sediment, sessile, session, assess, assiduous, president, siege, subsidy)
- séquor, séquī, secū́tus sum, to follow (consequent, consecutive, obsequious, persecute, sequence, sequel, subsequent; cf. secundus) spéctō, spectā́re, spectā́vī, spectā́tum, to look at, see (spectator, spectacle, speculate, aspect, circumspect, inspect; cf. speculum)
- ū́tor, ū́tī, ū́sus sum + abl., to use; enjoy, experience (abuse, disuse, peruse, usual, usurp, usury, utensil, utilize, utility, utilitarian; cf. ūtilis)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After studying the new grammar, memorizing the vocabulary, and testing your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, scan the following readings for all (a) deponent verbs, identifying the tense, number, person, and mood of each, and (b) ablatives with special deponents. Listen to the CDs, if you have them, and read aloud for comprehension before translating.

13. Homō stultus! Postquam dīvitiās habēre coepit, mortuus est! (Cicero.—postquam, conj., after; "postscript.")
14. Ō passī graviōra, dabit deus hīs quoque fīnem. (*Vergil.—Ō passī, voc. pl., O you who have. . . .—hīs: = hīs rēbus gravibus.)

Claudius' Excremental Expiration

Et ille quidem animam ēbulliit, et ex eō dēsiit vīvere vidērī. Exspīrāvit autem dum comoedōs audit, ut sciās mē nōn sine causā illōs timēre. Ultima vōx eius haec inter hominēs audīta est, cum maiōrem sonitum ēmisisset illā parte quā facilius loquēbātur: "Vae mē, putō, concacāvī!" Quod an fēcerit, nesciō—omnia certē concacāvit!

*Seneca Apoc. 4: The 1st-cent. A.D. philosopher Seneca the Younger, whose views on frugality you read in Capvt IX ("When I Have . . . Enough!"), is also credited with authoring a satirical and occasionally cruel farce on the emperor Claudius' death and deification; the work's Greek title, Apocolocyntōsis, seems to have meant "Pumpkinification" or "Deification of a Pumpkin-Head."—ēbulliō, -īre, ēbulliī, to bubble out, + animam, comic for "he died"; "ebullient."—ex eō: sc. tempore.—dēsinō, -sinere, -siī, -situm, to cease.—exspīrāre, to breathe out, die; "expiration," "expire."—comoedus, -ī, m., comic actor, comedian.—audit: use of the pres. instead of the expected perf. was a colloquialism.—vōx: i.e., utterance.—sonitus, -ūs, m., sound; "sonic," "resonate."—ē/ex + mittere: = Eng.; "emission," "emissary."—illā parte: sc. corporis, i.e., his bottom; the suggestion that Claudius spoke from his anus with greater ease than from his mouth was an indelicate slur on the emperor's affliction with stuttering.—concacāre, to defecate upon.—quod: = id.—an, whether, introducing an ind. question.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is the satiric implication of the remark dēsiit vīvere vidērī? At the outset of the satire, the narrator assumes the persona of a historian trying to report the facts of an actual event according to the limited sources available to him; where in this excerpt does that persona humorously appear?

And Vice Is Not Nice!

Mentītur quī tē vitiōsum, Zōile, dīcit:
nōn vitiōsus homō es, Zōile, sed vitium!

*Martial Epig. 11.92: meter: elegiac couplet.—mentior, -tīrī, -tītus sum, to lie, deceive.—vitiōsus: adj. from vitium; "viciousness"; for the suffix -ōsus, -a, -um, = Eng. "-ous" or "-ose," see S.S., p. 490; —tē vitiōsum: sc. esse; remember that the verb sum, esse is often omitted when readily understood from the context, a type of omission known as ELLIPSIS.—Zōilus: a Greek name.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What do we initially think the narrator's attitude toward Zoilus is? Comment specifically on the epigram's word-play and how anaphora and word order accentuate the surprise ending.

Pretty Is as Pretty Does

Bella es, nōvimus, et puella, vērum est, et dīves—quis enim potest negāre?
Sed cum tē nimium, Fabulla, laudās, nec dīves neque bella nec puella es!

*Martial Epig. 1.64: Fabulla boasteth too much! Meter: hendecasyllabic.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Fabulla either is bella, a puella, and dīves, or . . . she isn't! Comment on the poet's use of word order, alliteration, and POLYSYNDETON (use of more conjunctions than usual or necessary) to make his point; and what are the multiple ramifications of telling this lady she is nec puella?

On Lesbia's Husband

Ille mī pār esse deō vidētur, ille, sī fās est, superāre dīvōs, quī, sedēns adversus, identidem tē spectat et audit
dulce rīdentem, miserō quod omnīs ēripit sēnsūs mihi: nam simul tē, Lesbia, aspexī, nihil est super mī,

[Lesbia, vōcis,] lingua sed torpet, tenuis sub artūs flamma dēmānat, sonitū suōpte tintinant aurēs, geminā teguntur lūmina nocte.
Ōtium, Catulle, tibi molestum est;
ōtiō exsultās nimiumque gestīs;
ōtium et rēgēs prius et beātās perdidit urbēs.

*Catullus Carm. 51: One of the most admired of Catullus' poems, Carmen 51 is generally regarded as dramatically at least, if not in its actual order of composition, first of the Lesbia cycle; in part an imitation of an erotic poem by the 7th cent. B.C. Greek poetess Sappho of Lesbos (whose home and literary milieu inspired the pseudonym Catullus gave his mistress), the poet recalls an occasion when, gazing upon Lesbia and a man sitting opposite her (likely her husband), he becomes emotionally and even physiologically overwhelmed by her beauty and the sweet sound of her laughter. Meter: Sapphic stanza.—mī: = mihi.— fās est: it is right; read the two opening verses aloud and listen to the rhyming of the first four words in each.—dīvōs: = deōs.—identidem, adv., again and again; "identical."—dulce: adv. of dulcis.—miserō . . . mihi: DATIVE OF SEPARATION, essentially the same as the abl. usage; the prose order would be quod omnīs (= omnēs) sēnsūs mihi miserō ēripit.—quod: a circumstance which; the entire preceding clause is the antecedent.—simul, adv., as soon as; "simultaneous," "ensemble."—aspexī: = spectāvī; "aspect."—nihil: with vōcis, gen. of the whole, no. . . .—est super: = superest, remains.—Lesbia, vōcis: an editorial suggestion for a verse missing in the manuscripts.—torpēre, to grow numb; "torpedo," "torpid."—tenuis: with flamma, from tenuis, -e, thin, slender; "tenuous," "extenuate."—artus, -ūs, m., joint, limb (of the body); "article," "articulation."—flamma, -ae, f., flame; "flammable," "inflammation."—dēmānāre, to flow through.—suōpte: intensive for suō.—tintināre, to ring; "tintinnabulation."—tegō, -ere, to cover; "protect," "detect."—lūmen, -minis, n., light; eye; "luminary," "luminous."—molestus, -a, -um, troublesome; "molest."—exsultāre, to celebrate, exult (in), + ōtiō; "exultant," "exultation."—gestīre, to act without restraint, be elated or triumphant.—perdō, -ere, -didī, -ditum, to destroy; "perdition."

QUAESTIŌNĒS: What makes the man sitting with Lesbia godlike?—i.e., what can he endure that, by contrast, overpowers Catullus? Describe as exactly as possible what happens to Catullus in the second and third stanzas, esp. in lines 11–12. Geminā is an example of a TRANSFERRED EPITHET, modifying nocte grammatically when logically it should apply to Catullus' lūmina; what effect does the resultant image exert on the reader? Some scholars have questioned whether the fourth stanza, with its abrupt transition and self reprimand, was even a part of the original poem or if instead it was somehow misplaced here by scribal error during the transmission of the manuscript from antiquity into the middle ages and beyond; review your other readings from Catullus, including poem 5 (Capvt XXXI) and esp. the excerpt from poem 7 (Capvt XIX), and argue your own position on this issue.

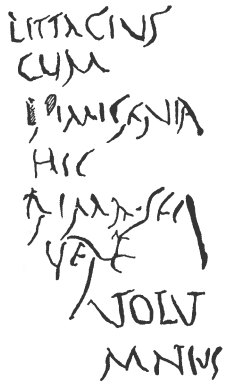
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Pittacius cum Prīmigeniā hīc. Prīma, sequere!
Volumnius

CIL 4.8769: Pittacius Volumnius scribbled this note on a column of Pompeii's Large Palaestra (Reg. II, Ins. 7), recording a liaison with his girlfriend, then urging another lady (or was "Prima" just his shortened, pet name for Primigenia?) to follow him.—sequere: watch out—this form is not what it may seem to be, as you know if you've studied this chapter carefully. Because he was writing on a fluted column (#106: archaeologists have assigned identifying numbers to all these columns), Volumnius could fit only a few letters on each line and after writing SEQ on one line continued with VERE on the next, a common practice seen again in his signature VOLV/MNIVS; to help the reader avoid confusion on the one line that contained more than one word, he placed a punctum between PRIMA and SEQ.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, meī discipulī discipulaeque! Quid agitis? (Spērō vōs valēre.) Now that you've begun to read more real, unadapted Latin literature (like the above selections from Martial, Seneca, and Catullus), you might appreciate the following remark: "Looking back on school, I really liked Latin. In my case, a little bit stuck: I ended up with a feeling for literature."—Paul McCartney. So, how much Latin is enough?—quantum placeat, as much as gives one pleasure (close to quantum vīs, Capvt XXXII, and more, one hopes, than quantum satis, Capvt XXX!).

Here are some Latin phrases that are by no means moribund: first, an unfortunate (and fortunately overstated!) old proverb, quem dī dīligunt, adulēscēns moritur; a reminder of one's mortality is a mementō morī, freely "remember that you must die" (the -tō form is a relatively rare FUTURE IMPERATIVE not formally introduced in this book but often employed in ancient legal and religious texts); on sacrificing one's life for one's country, Horace wrote dulce et decōrum (from decōrus, -a, -um, fitting, proper) est prō patriā morī; another bleak proverb (but essential here, as it offers two deponents!) is the astronomer Manilius' dictum, nascentēs morimur (even as we are) being born, we (begin to) die; and then there is Seneca's version of "eat, drink, and be merry," complete with a passive periphrastic, bibāmus, moriendum est, and the words addressed to the emperor by gladiators preparing to fight, Avē, Imperātor: moritūrī tē salūtant, hail, Emperor, they (who are) about to die salute you! To any who have suffered, not death, but defeat, one might proclaim vae, victīs, woe to the conquered, a famous line from Livy's account of the Gallic sack of Rome in 390 B.C.

Well, enough morbidity. Hīc sunt alia miscellānea ex vocābulīs novīs: vōx populī; vōx clamantis in dēsertō, the voice of one calling out in the wilderness (from the gospel of Matthew); crēscit amor nummī quantum ipsa pecūnia crēvit, love of the coin grows as much as one's wealth itself has grown (Juvenal 14.139); sedente animō, with a calm mind. And here are some other deponents: Maryland's state motto is crēscite et multiplicāminī (can you figure that one out?); loquitur is a note in a dramatic text; and the legal phrase rēs ipsa loquitur, the matter speaks for itself, we have seen before, but now you understand the verb form. And how about this sequence: seq. is an abbreviation for sequēns/sequentēs, the following, once common in footnotes; a nōn sequitur is a remark that does not follow logically from a prior statement (a sequitur, of course, does!); sequor nōn īnferior, I follow (but am) not inferior. Will this exciting chapter have a sequel in the subsequent chapter? And, if not, what will be the consequences? Stay tuned . . . et valēte!

CAPVT XXXV

Dative with Adjectives, Special Verbs, and Compounds

GRAMMATICA

THE DATIVE CASE

The dative case is in general employed to indicate a person or thing that some act or circumstance applies to or refers to "indirectly," as opposed to the accusative, which indicates the more immediate recipient or object of an action. The indirect object, e.g., is the person/thing toward which a direct object is "referred" by the subject + verb: "I am giving the book [direct object] to you [indirect object]" = "I am giving the book, not just to anyone anywhere, but in your direction, i.e., to you." Even in the passive periphrastic construction, the dative of agent indicates the person for whom a certain action is obligatory. A number of other dative usages are distinguished by grammarians, but most are variants on this basic notion of reference or direction.

DATIVE WITH ADJECTIVES

The DATIVE WITH ADJECTIVES construction is one you have already encountered in your readings, though it has not yet been formally introduced. Simply stated, a noun in the dative case is employed with many Latin adjectives—particularly those indicating attitude, quality, or relation—to indicate the direction (literally or metaphorically) in which the adjective applies; such adjectives are normally followed by "to," "toward," or "for" in English (e.g., "friendly to/toward," "hostile to/toward," "suitable to/for," "useful to," "similar to," "equal to," etc.).

Mors est similis somnō. Death is similar to sleep.
Sciēbam tē mihi fidēlem esse. I knew that you were loyal to me.
Nōbīs* est vir amīcus. He is a man friendly toward us.
Quisque sibi cārus est. Each person is dear to himself.
Ille vidētur pār esse deō. That man seems to be equal to a god.

DATIVE WITH SPECIAL VERBS

Conceptually similar is the DATIVE WITH SPECIAL VERBS construction. Many of these verbs (the most important of which are listed below) are actually intransitive and, like adjectives that take a dative, indicate attitude or relationship, e.g., nocēre, to be injurious to, parcō, to be lenient toward, etc. Although these verbs are often translated into English as if they were transitive and the dative nouns they govern as though they were direct objects (e.g., tibi parcit, he spares you; lit., he is lenient toward you), the datives again indicate the person/thing toward whom the attitude or quality applies.

Although a common rule for the dative with special verbs lists those meaning to "favor," "help/harm," "please/displease," "trust/distrust," "believe," "persuade," "command," "obey," "serve," "resist," "envy," "threaten," "pardon," and "spare," the list is cumbersome and involves some important exceptions (including iuvō, to help, and iubeō, to command, order, which take accusatives). More useful is simply to understand the concept and recognize some of the commonest Latin verbs that take this construction. In learning the following list, note that the more literal translation, given first for each verb, includes English to and thus reminds you of the required dative; note as well that each verb conveys some notion of attitude toward a person or thing, again suggesting a dative.

crēdō + dat., entrust to; trust, believe (crēdō tibi, I believe you) ignōscō + dat., grant pardon to; pardon, forgive (ignōscō virīs, I forgive the men) imperō + dat., give orders to; command (imperō mīlitibus, I command the soldiers) noceō + dat., do harm to; harm (noceō hostibus, I harm the enemy) nūbō + dat., be married to; marry (nūbō illī virō, I am marrying that man) parcō + dat., be lenient to; spare (parcō vōbīs, I spare you) pāreō + dat., be obedient to; obey (pāreō ducī, I obey the leader) persuādeō + dat., make sweet to, make agreeable to; persuade (persuādeō mihi, I persuade myself) placeō + dat., be pleasing to; please (placeō patrī, I please my father) serviō + dat., be a slave to; serve (serviō patriae, I serve my country) studeō + dat., direct one's zeal to; study (studeō litterīs, I study literature)

Crēde amīcīs. Believe (trust) your friends.
Ignōsce mihi. Pardon me (forgive me).
Magistra discipulīs parcit. The teacher spares (is lenient toward) her pupils.
Hoc eīs nōn placet. This does not please them.
Nōn possum eī persuādēre. I cannot persuade him.
Variae rēs hominibus nocent. Various things harm men.
Cicerō philosophiae studēbat. Cicero used to study philosophy.
Philosophiae servīre est lībertās. To serve philosophy is liberty.

Some of these verbs, it should be noted, can also take a direct object (e.g., crēdō takes a dative for a person believed, mātrī crēdit, he believes his mother, but an accusative for a thing, id crēdit, he believes it); and some, like imperō and persuādeo, take a noun clause as an object, as we shall see in the next chapter.

DATIVE WITH COMPOUND VERBS

A very similar dative usage occurs with certain verbs compounded with ad, ante, con- (=cum), in, inter, ob, post, prae, prō, sub, super, and sometimes circum and re- (in the sense of against). This DATIVE WITH COMPOUNDS is especially common when the meaning of a compound verb is significantly different from its simple form, whether transitive or intransitive; conversely, if the meaning of the compound is not essentially different from that of the simple verb, then the dative is ordinarily not employed:

Eum sequor. I follow him.
Eī obsequor. I obey him (lit., I follow in the direction of, i.e., in his path) Sum amīcus eius. I am his friend.
Amīcō adsum. I support my friend (lit., I am next to my friend, i.e., at his side).
Ad nōs vēnit. He came to us.
Ad nōs advēnit. He came to us.

Often the dative functions essentially as object of the prepositional prefix, though the preposition would take another case if separate from the verb; thus adsum amīcō above and the following examples:

Aliīs praestant. They surpass the others (lit., they stand before the others).
Exercituī praeerat. He was in charge of the army (lit., he was in front of/before the army).

If the simple verb is transitive, then the compound may take an accusative as object of the root verb as well as a dative dependent on the prefix:

Exercituī eum praeposuī. I put him in charge of the army (lit., I put him [posuī eum] in front of the army [prae- + exercituī]).
Amīcitiae pecūniam praeposuī. I preferred money to friendship (lit., I put money [posuī pecūniam] before friendship [prae- + amīcitiae]).

Since there is such variability in the rules for dative with special verbs and compounds, the best procedure is to understand the concepts involved and then, when encountering a dative in a sentence, to be aware of these possible functions; just as with the other cases, you should be maintaining a list of the dative uses you have learned (there have been five thus far) in your notebook or computer file, including definitions and representative examples.

VOCĀBVLA

Be careful not to confuse aestās below with aetās, nor parcō and pāreo below with parō, nor serviō with servō. And remember to learn all these new words, as always, by listening to them on the CDs or at www.wheelockslatin.com and repeating them aloud.

aéstās, aestā́tis, f., summer (estival, estivate, estivation; cf. aestus, -ūs, heat, aestuāre, to be hot, seethe, boil) iā́nua, iā́nuae, f., door (janitor, Janus, January) péctus, péctoris, n., breast, heart (pectoral, expectorate, parapet) praémium, praémiī, n., reward, prize (premium) īrā́tus, īrā́ta, īrā́tum, angry (irate; cf. īra, īrāscor, to be angry) antepṓnō, antepṓnere, antepósuī, antepósitum, to put before, prefer fóveō, fovḗre, fṓvī, fṓtum, to comfort, nurture, cherish (foment) ignṓscō, ignṓscere, ignṓvī, ignṓtum + dat., to grant pardon to, forgive ímperō, imperā́re, imperā́vī, imperā́tum + dat., to give orders to, command (imperative, emperor; cf. imperātor, imperium) mī́ror, mīrā́rī, mīrā́tus sum, to marvel at, admire, wonder (admire, marvel, miracle, mirage, mirror; cf. mīrāculum, a marvel) nóceō, nocḗre, nócuī, nócitum + dat., to do harm to, harm, injure (innocent, innocuous, nuisance, obnoxious; cognate with necō) nṻ́bō, nṻ́bere, nṻ́psī, nṻ́ptum, to cover, veil; + dat. (of a bride) to be married to, marry (nubile, connubial, nuptials; cf. nūptiae, marriage) párcō, párcere, pepércī, parsū́rum + dat., to be lenient to, spare (parsimonious, parsimony) pā́reō, pārḗre, pā́ruī + dat., to be obedient to, obey (apparent, appear, apparition) persuā́deō, persuādḗre, persuā́sī, persuā́sum + dat., to succeed in urging, persuade, convince (assuage, dissuade, suasion; cf. suāvis) pláceō, placḗre, plácuī, plácitum + dat., to be pleasing to, please (complacent, placable, implacable, placate, placid, plea, plead, pleasure) sápiō, sápere, sapī́vī, to have good taste; have good sense, be wise (sapient, sapid, insipid, sage, savor; cf. sapiēns, sapientia) sérviō, servī́re, servī́vī, servī́tum + dat., to be a slave to, serve (service, disservice, subservient, servile, servility, deserve, desert = reward, dessert; cf. servus, servitūs) stúdeō, studḗre, stúduī + dat., to direct one's zeal to, be eager for, study (student; cf. studium, studiōsus, eager, diligent, scholarly) subrī́deō, subrīdḗre, subrī́sī, subrī́sum, to smile (down) upon (cf. rīdeō, rīdiculus)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After thorough study of the new grammar and vocabulary, scan the following readings for all dative nouns and pronouns, identifying the specific usage of each. Then read each sentence and passage aloud, listening to the CDs if you have them, and translate into idiomatic English.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Minerva, fīlia Iovis, nāta est plēna scientiae et ingeniī.
2. Custōdiae sī cum duce nostrō līberē loquantur et huic tyrannum trādere cōnentur, sine perīculō ex moenibus urbis prōtinus ēgredī possint.
3. Pārēre lēgibus aequīs melius est quam tyrannō servīre.
4. Cum optimē honōribus ūsus esset et sibi cīvitātem semper antepōneret, etiam plēbs eī crēdēbat et nōn invidēbat.
5. Diū passa, māter vestra fēlīciter, sedēns apud amīcōs, mortua est.
6. Philosophī cōnsilium spectāvērunt et recūsāvērunt tālem rem suscipere mōlīrīve.
7. Cum dīves sīs atque dīvitiae crēscant, tamen opibus tuīs parcere vīs et nēminī assem offerēs.
8. Ab illā īnsulā subitō profectus, eādem nocte ad patriam nāve advēnit; tum, quaerēns remissiōnem animae, diū rūsticābātur.
9. Hic mīles, cum imperātōrī vestrō nōn placēret, heu, illa praemia prōmissa āmīsit.
10. Nisi mōrēs parēs scientiae sunt—id nōbīs fatendum est—scientia nōbīs magnopere nocēre potest.
11. Magistra tum rogāvit duōs parvōs puerōs quot digitōs habērent.
12. Māter candida nātae cārissimae subrīdet, quam maximē fovet, et eī plūrima ōscula suāvia dat.
13. Why does he now wish to hurt his two friends?
14. If he does not spare the plebeians, alas, we shall neither trust him nor follow him.
15. Since you are studying Roman literature, you are serving a very difficult but a very great master.
16. If they were truly willing to please us, they would not be using their wealth thus against the state.

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Nēmō līber est quī corporī servit. (Seneca.)
2. Imperium habēre vīs magnum? Imperā tibi! (Publilius Syrus.)
3. Bonīs nocet quisquis pepercit malīs. (*Id.)

4. Cum tū omnia pecūniae postpōnās, mīrāris sī nēmō tibi amōrem praestat? (Horace.—post-pōnō; "postponement," "postpositive.")
5. Frūstrā aut pecūniae aut imperiīs aut opibus aut glōriae student; potius studeant virtūtī et honōrī et scientiae et alicui artī. (Cicero.—frūstrā, adv., in vain; "frustrate," "frustration."—potius, adv., rather.)
6. Virtūtī melius quam Fortūnae crēdāmus; virtūs nōn nōvit calamitātī cēdere. (Publilius Syrus.—calamitās, -tātis; "calamitous.")
7. Et Deus āit: "Faciāmus hominem ad imāginem nostram et praesit piscibus maris bēstiīsque terrae." (Genesis.—imāgō, -ginis, f.; "imagery," "imagination."—prae-sum.—piscis, -is, m., fish; "Pisces," "piscine."—bēstia, -ae, f., beast; "bestial," "bestiary.")
8. Omnēs arbitrātī sunt tē dēbēre mihi parcere. (Cicero.)
9. Quid facere vellet, ostendit, et illī servō spē lībertātis magnīsque praemiīs persuāsit. (Caesar.)
10. Sī cui librī Cicerōnis placent, ille sciat sē prōfēcisse. (Quintilian.—prōficiō: = prō + faciō, to progress, benefit; "proficiency," "profit.")
11. In urbe nostrā mihi contigit docērī quantum īrātus Achillēs Graecīs nocuisset. (Horace.—contingō, -ere, -tigī, -tāctum, to touch closely, fall to the lot of; "contingent," "contiguous," "contact.")
12. Alicui rogantī melius quam iubentī pārēmus. (Publilius Syrus.)
13. Vīvite fortiter fortiaque pectora rēbus adversīs oppōnite. (Horace.—oppōnō: = ob + pōnō, to set against; "opponent," "opposite.")
14. Nōn ignāra malī, miserīs succurrere discō. (*Vergil.—ignārus, -a, -um, ignorant; "ignorance," "ignore;" ignāra is f. because it agrees with Dido, exiled queen, who speaks these words to the shipwrecked Aeneas.—succurrō: = sub + currō, to help; "succor.")
15. Ignōsce saepe alterī, numquam tibi. (Publilius Syrus.)
16. Cum enim tē, deum meum, quaerō, vītam beātam quaerō; quaeram tē ut vīvat anima mea. (*St. Augustine.)
17. Sequere hāc, mea gnāta, mē, cum dīs volentibus. (*Plautus.–hāc, adv., in this direction, this way.—gnāta: = nāta.)

Ovid Asks the Gods to Inspire His Work

In nova fert animus mūtātās dīcere fōrmās corpora: dī, coeptīs—nam vōs mūtāstis et illās—adspīrāte meīs prīmāque ab orīgine mundī ad mea perpetuum dēdūcite tempora carmen!

*Ovid Met. 1.1–4: Ovid invokes the gods to inspire his work in these opening verses of his Metamorphōsēs (review "On Death and Metamorphosis," and the accompanying notes, in Capvt XVIII); the challenge in translating this excerpt, as with much of Lat. verse, is to connect the adjectives with the nouns they modify, so watch the endings!—nova: of the three nouns in this sent., which does this adj. agree with?—fert: here, compels (me).—coeptum, -ī, n., usually pl., beginning, undertaking, enterprise; "inception."—mūtāstis: = mūtāvistis; such contractions, with v and the following vowel dropped, are common in perf. system forms; cf. dōnārunt for dōnāvērunt in Catullus 13 (Capvt XXXIII).—et: = etiam.—adspīrāre, to breathe upon, inspire; "aspire," "aspirant."—orīgō, -ginis, f., = Eng.; "originator," "aboriginal."—mea perpetuum . . . tempora carmen: if you do not recall the technical term for this common poetic word order device, see "Note on a Copy of Catullus' Carmina," Capvt XXX. —dē + dūcō: derivatives include "deduce" and "deduction," but the verb has a more lit. meaning here.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What range of time is spanned by the transformation tales Ovid's poem will relate? What are the theological implications of Ovid's prologue?

Sorry, Nobody's Home!

Nāsīca ad poētam Ennium vēnit. Cum ad iānuam Ennium quaesīvisset et serva respondisset eum in casā nōn esse, sēnsit illam dominī iussū id dīxisse et Ennium vērō esse in casā. Post paucōs diēs, cum Ennius ad Nāsīcam vēnisset et eum ad iānuam quaereret, Nāsīca ipse exclāmāvit sē in casā nōn esse. Tum Ennius "Quid?" inquit, "Ego nōn cognōscō vōcem tuam?" Hīc Nāsīca merō cum sale respondit: "Vae, homō es impudēns! Ego, cum tē quaererem, servae tuae crēdidī tē nōn in casā esse; nōnne tū mihi ipsī nunc crēdis?"

Cicero De Or. 2.276.—Cicero's Dē Ōrātōre, published in 55 B.C., was one of several treatises he wrote on oratory and rhetoric, important subjects for the Roman ruling class; in this passage he relates a humorous anecdote about Publius Cornelius Scipio Nasica, a celebrated jurist, and his friend the poet Quintus Ennius, as an example of the potential value of using jokes in speeches.—iussū, at the command of; cf. iubeō.–exclāmāre, to shout out; "exclaim," "exclamation."—impudēns, gen. -dentis; "impudence."

QVAESTIŌ: Explain the joke—and if you laughed out loud when you read it, that means your Latin is getting better and better!

"I Do." "I Don't!"

Nūbere vīs Prīscō. Nōn mīror, Paula; sapīstī.
Dūcere tē nōn vult Prīscus: et ille sapit!

*Martial Epig. 9.10: Priscus was an eligible bachelor, maybe a rich one; Paula was apparently not his type! Meter: elegiac couplet.—sapīstī: = sapīvistī; for the form, see on mūtāstis above.—dūcere: i.e., in mātrimōnium.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Which of these two players was smart, and how does Martial use word order to underscore the point?

Maronilla Has a Cough

Petit Gemellus nūptiās Marōnillae et cupit et īnstat et precātur et dōnat.
Adeōne pulchra est? Immo, foedius nīl est.
Quid ergō in illā petitur et placet? Tussit!

*Martial Epig. 1.10: meter: choliambic.—nūptiae, -ārum, f. pl., marriage; "nuptial," "prenuptial"; cf. nūbere.—īnstāre, to press, insist; "instance," "instant."—precor, -cārī, -cātus sum, to beg, entreat; "deprecation," "imprecate."—dōnat: = dat; "donation."—adeō: = tam.—immō, adv., on the contrary; the -o is shortened here for metrical purposes.—foedius: = turpius.—nīl: = nihil.—ergō: = igitur.—tussīre, to cough; "tussive," "pertussis."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Identify the POLYSYNDETON and comment on its effect (if you don't recall the term, see "Pretty Is" in the last chapter). Explain Gemellus' interest in Maronilla (if you can't, recall what you've learned about Rome's captātōrēs)–and where is his motivation revealed?

Summer Vacation

Ludī magister, parce simplicī turbae:
aestāte puerī sī valent, satis discunt.

*Martial Epig. 10.62.1, 12: Even in ancient Rome students got a summer vacation and were "spared the rod" during harvest time, from July to October. Meter: choliambic.—simplex, gen. -plicis, simple, unaffected, here youthful; "simplicity," "simplistic."

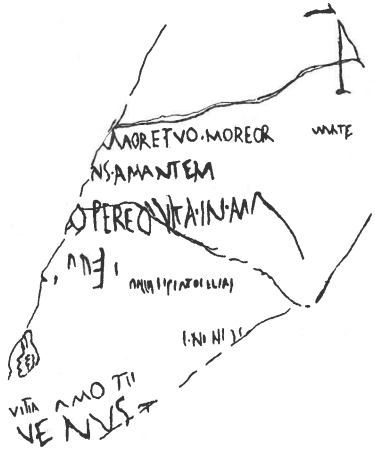
SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



[A]mōre tuō moreor. . . . Pereō, vīta, in am[ōre]. . . . Vīt{i}a, amō tē!

CIL 4.9054: From one of several stucco fragments found in the Building of Eumachia (Reg. VII, Ins. 9); only these three sentences can be confidently restored, but it seems from the few other legible words (amantem, Venus: can you find them in the drawing?) that perhaps all or most of what was inscribed here was amatory in nature.—amōre: ABLATIVE OF CAUSE, a common abl. case construction whose sense is easily understood here.—moreor: = morior; the lovestruck writer was not a great speller, but at least he recalled that the verb is deponent. In a curious illustration of the continuity of classical Lat., however coincidental it may be, the exclamatory Amōre tuō morior is uttered both by Helen to Paris, as she implores him to take her to be his lover in Troy, in the 13th cent. Excidium Troie (The Destruction of Troy), a narrative ultimately dating back to ancient sources, and by Mary Magdalene, crying out to the crucified Christ, in the 17th-cent. hymn "Maria Magdalene Stabat," composed by the Benedictine nun Chiara Margarita Cozzolani.—pereō, -īre, -iī, -itum, to pass away, be destroyed, perish; "perishable."—vīta: a common term of endearment, esp. among lovers, often mea vīta; why was the scribbler's misspelling VITIA, instead of VITA, somewhat comically unfortunate?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulī discipulaeque! Or perhaps now that you have learned the meaning of studēre you should be termed studentēs, since it is clearly your zeal for learning that has brought you this far in your study of Latin! So, studentēs, here is your praemium, more delectables for your cēna Latīna, once more ex novīs grammaticīs atque vocābulīs: if you remember that verbs signifying "favor . . . etc." govern the dative, you can understand this first, fortuitously alliterative motto, fortūna favet fortibus; the command favēte linguīs, lit. be favorable with your tongues, was used in religious rituals to call for silence and the avoidance of any ill-omened speech; imperō obviously gives us "imperative," but also the expression dīvide (from dīvidere, to separate, divide) et imperā; a placet is an affirmative vote, a placitum a judicial decision, and a "placebo" is an unmedicated preparation meant to humor a patient (what, literally, does the "medicine" promise to do?); secret meetings are held iānuīs clausīs (from claudō, claudere, clausī, clausum, to close, as in "recluse," "closet," etc.), but iānuae mentis are the ones studying Latin will help you to open (aperiō, aperīre, aperuī, apertum is to open, as in "aperture"). Also from iānua we have: "janitor," lit. a "doorman"; "Janus," the two-faced god of doors, of entrances and exits, of beginnings and ending; and "January," the doorway into the new year. Studēte Latīnae, aperīte mentēs, et semper valēte, studentēs!

CAPVT XXXVI

Jussive Noun Clauses; Fīō

GRAMMATICA

JUSSIVE NOUN CLAUSES

The JUSSIVE NOUN CLAUSE is a kind of indirect command: as with indirect statements (Capvt XXV) and indirect questions (Capvt XXX), the actual command (or request, entreaty, etc.) is not quoted verbatim, via an imperative or a jussive subjunctive (Capvt XXVIII) in a main clause, but is reported indirectly in a subordinate clause, i.e., not "he ordered them, 'Do this!'" but "he ordered them to do this." In Latin such clauses are introduced by ut or nē and employ a subjunctive verb, usually present or imperfect tense, whereas in English, and therefore in translation, we ordinarily employ a present infinitive with no introductory word and no auxiliary such as "may" or "might":

1. Hoc facite. Do this! (imperative, direct command)
2. Hoc faciant. Let them do this. (jussive subjunctive, direct command)
3. Imperat vōbīs ut hoc faciātis. He commands you to do this.
4. Imperāvit eīs ut hoc facerent. He commanded them to do this.
5. Persuādet eīs ut hoc faciant. He persuades them to do this.
6. Petīvit ab eīs nē hoc facerent. He begged (from) them not to do this.
7. Monuit eōs nē hoc facerent. He warned them not to do this.
8. Hortātus est eōs ut hoc facerent. He urged them to do this.

These clauses are often confused with purpose clauses because in appearance they are identical, but a study of the examples given above reveals their jussive nature. In contrast to purpose clauses, which function adverbially (answering the question "why?"), jussive noun clauses function as objects of the main verbs which introduce them (answering the question "what . . . was ordered, requested, advised, etc.?"). The following list includes some of the more common verbs that can introduce jussive noun clauses and indicates the case employed for the person being ordered or requested to act:

hortor eum ut, I urge him to . . .
imperō eī ut, I order him to . . .

moneō eum ut, I advise him to . . .
ōrō eam ut, I beg her to . . .
persuādeō eī ut, I persuade him to . . . (or I persuade him that . . .) petō ab eō ut, I beg (from) him to . . .
quaerō ab eā ut, I request (from/of) her to . . .
rogō eum ut, I ask him to . . .

Volō, nōlō, and mālō (Capvt XXXII) sometimes introduce such clauses (e.g., mālō ut, I prefer that. . .), although they also commonly are followed by infinitives; iubeō nearly always takes the infinitive construction.

IRREGULAR Fīō, fierī, factus sum, to occur, happen; be done, be made

The common irregular verb fīō, fierī, meaning to occur, happen, was used by the Romans in place of the passive of the present system of faciō and so, although active in form, also has the passive meanings to be done, be made; e.g., fit was used instead of facitur for it is done, is made (the practice with compounds of faciō varied: perficitur, is completed, but calefit instead of calefacitur for is heated). Conversely, the perfect system of fīō was lacking and was supplied by the perfect passive system of faciō, the same sort of suppletion seen earlier in the use of tulī and lātum for the perfect system of ferō, ferre.

In effect, we have a composite verb with the principal parts fīō, fierī, factus sum and with the range of related meanings occur, happen, become, be made, be done. In translating, when you see the active present system forms of fīō remember the passive force options be done, be made, and when you see the passive perfect system forms factus est, factus erat, factus sit, etc., remember the options has become, had occurred, etc.

The only new forms to be learned are those listed below; note that: the stem vowel -ī- is long in all places except fit, fierī, and the imperfect subjunctive; otherwise, the forms of the present, future, and imperfect indicative and the present subjunctive follow the pattern of audiō; the imperfect subjunctive follows a predictable pattern, given the infinitive fierī.

Hoc facit (faciet). He is doing or making this (will do or make).
Hoc fit (fiet). This is done or made (will be done or made).
Hoc faciat. Let him do or make this.
Hoc fīat. Let this be done or made.
Dīcunt eum hoc facere. They say that he is doing this.
Dīcunt hoc fierī. They say that this is being done (is happening).
Perīculum fit gravius. The danger is becoming graver.
Mox factī sunt fēlīces. They soon became happy.

VOCĀBVLA

As a check on your mastery of fīō, do a synopsis in all six tenses with the book closed, then compare your work with the full conjugation on p. 509. And remember: as you memorize this new list, audī ac prōnūntiā!

cupídō, cupídinis, f., desire, passion (cupidity, Cupid; cf. cupiō, cupiditās) léctor, lēctóris, m., and léctrīx, lēctrícis, f., reader (lector; cf. legō, lectern, lecture) vínculum, vínculī, n., bond, chain, fetter (vinculum; cf. vinciō, to bind) cōtídiē, adv., daily, every day (quot + diēs; cotidian) ōrō, ōrāre, ōrāvī, ōrātum, to speak, plead; beg, beseech, entreat, pray (orator, oration, oracle, adore, inexorable, peroration; cf. ōrātor) récreō, recreāre, recreāvī, recreātum (re + creō), to restore, revive; refresh, cheer (recreate, recreation) requīrō, requīrere, requīsīvī, requīsītum (re + quaerō), to seek, ask for; miss, need, require (requisite, requisition, prerequisite, request) serēnō, serēnāre, serēnāvī, serēnātum, to make clear, brighten; cheer up, soothe (serene, serenity, serenade)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After studying the new grammar and vocabulary, check your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises and Answer Key, and then scan the readings to identify (a) the tense, person, number, and mood of all forms of fīō, and (b) all jussive noun clauses; be careful not to confuse jussive noun and purpose clauses, and remember to translate the subjunctive verbs in the former (and often the latter) simply as infinitives. Listen to each sentence and passage, if you have the CDs, read them aloud for comprehension, and write out your translations.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

17. Citius venit perīclum cum contemnitur. (*Publilius Syrus.—perīclum: = perīculum; for another example of this type of contraction, known as SYNCOPE, see the Fēlīclam graffito in Capvt II.)

The Quality of Martial's Book

Sunt bona, sunt quaedam mediocria, sunt mala plūra quae legis hīc; aliter nōn fit, Avīte, liber.

*Martial Epig. 1.16: Anyone who has ever written a book will be grateful for this defense Martial offers to Avitus; meter, elegiac couplet.—aliter, adv., otherwise.

I Don't Cook for Cooks!

Lēctor et audītor nostrōs probat, Aule, libellōs, sed quīdam exāctōs esse poēta negat.
Nōn nimium cūrō, nam cēnae fercula nostrae mālim convīvīs quam placuisse cocīs!

*Martial Epig. 9.81; meter: elegiac couplet.—probat: it was common for a verb to agree in number with the nearer of two subjects, though here the hypothetical lēctor and audītor are perhaps thought of as one and the same person.—esse: sc. eōs, = libellōs, as subject.—ferculum, -ī, n., course (of a meal).—mālim: POTENTIAL SUBJUNCTIVE, a common usage employed for hypothetical action, I would prefer that.—cēnae . . . cocīs: more usual order might be mālim fercula cēnae nostrae placuisse convīvīs quam cocīs.—quam: i.e., magis quam.—convīva, -ae, m., dinner-guest; "convivial."—cocus, -ī, m., cook; "concoction."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: In both epigrams the poet offers a defense of his work, proving the obvious point that literary critics existed then as now; comment on the issues Martial raises in both poems, and on the effectiveness of the culinary metaphor employed in the second.

Oh, I'd Love to Read You My Poems . . . Not!

Ut recitem tibi nostra rogās epigrammata. Nōlō—nōn audīre, Celer, sed recitāre cupis!

*Martial Epig. 1.63: Unlike the implied critics in the preceding epigrams, Celer was a fan of Martial's—or at least pretended to be! Meter: elegiac couplet.—epigramma, -matis, n.; "epigrammatic," "epigrammatist."

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Compare Martial's response to Celer with his response to Pontilianus in "Please Remove My Name from Your Mailing List" (Capvt XXVIII); how are they alike, how different, and what do they tell you about Roman literary culture of the 1st cent. A.D.? What several additional selections have you read in this book, from Martial and other authors as well, in which writers talk about writing?—what range of issues do they raise?

I Love Her . . . I Love Her Not

Ōdī et amō! Quārē id faciam fortasse requīris.
Nescio, sed fierī sentiō et excrucior.

*Catullus Carm. 85: Brief, but intense, and one of Catullus' most admired poems; meter: elegiac couplet.—excruciāre, to crucify, torment; "excruciate," "crux"; from crux, crucis, f., cross; crucifixion, a form of punishment borrowed by the Romans from the Carthaginians, was largely reserved for slaves.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: The poem is largely about antitheses, but not just love and hate; 8 of the 14 words are verbs: which, on the one hand, are about asking and knowing and acting, and which, conversely, are about feeling, and suffering, and being acted upon? What is the effect of these oppositions?

Who Is Truly Free?

Quis igitur vērō līber est? Tantum vir sapiēns, quī sibi imperat, quem neque fortūna adversa neque paupertās neque mors neque vincula terrent, quī potest cupīdinibus fortiter respondēre honōrēsque contemnere, cuius virtūs cōtīdiē crēscit, quī in sē ipsō tōtus est.

Horace Sat. 2.7.83ff: In this prose adaptation from one of his later satires, Horace comments on what was a central topic in ancient philosophy, following essentially the views of Stoicism; review the other selections you have read from the Sermōnēs, in Capita III and XXIV.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Summarize these requisites of intellectual and moral freedom, and explain how they are encapsulated, in a sense, in the final clause; do you agree with them all, including Horace's privileging of the vir sapiēns, which reflects Stoic dogma that all but the wise are slaves?

Testimony Against the Conspirators

Senātum coēgī. Intrōdūxī Volturcium sine Gallīs. Fidem pūblicam eī dedī. Hortātus sum ut ea quae scīret sine timōre nūntiāret. Tum ille, cum sē ex magnō timōre recreāvisset, dīxit sē ab Lentulō habēre ad Catilīnam mandāta ut auxiliō servōrum ūterētur et ad urbem quam prīmum cum exercitū accēderet. Intrōductī autem Gallī dīxērunt sibi litterās ad suam gentem ab Lentulō datās esse et hunc imperāvisse ut equitātum in Italiam quam prīmum mitterent. Dēnique, omnibus rēbus expositīs, senātus dēcrēvit ut coniūrātī, quī hās īnsidiās mōlītī essent, in custōdiam trāderentur.

Cicero Cat. 3, excerpts: In this adaptation from his third oration against Catiline, Cicero informs the Roman citizenry of the evidence against the conspirators and of actions taken by the senate; be sure to review all the earlier readings on the Catilinarian conspiracy in Capita XI, XIV, XX, and XXX.—intrō + dūcō, -ere, = Eng.; "introduction," "introductory."—Volturcium: Titus Volturcius, a minor figure among the conspirators, had been arrested in possession of the incriminating letters you read about in Capvt XXX; he was given immunity, fidem pūblicam, in return for his testimony here.—Gallus, -ī, m. a Gaul; Lentulus, the leading conspirator at Rome in Catiline's absence, had been seeking support from the Gallic Allobroges (Map 2), who had a delegation at Rome. The ambassadors pretended to go along, but instead reported what they knew to Cicero and assisted him in trapping Volturcius and seizing Lentulus' letters.—scīret: a subordinate clause that would ordinarily have an indic. verb often has instead a subjunct. when the clause occurs either within an ind. state. or, as here, within another subjunct. clause; in this latter instance the verb is often termed SUBJUNCTIVE BY ATTRACTION.—mandātum, -ī, n., order; "mandate," "command," "demand."—quam prīmum: see Capvt XXXII.—equitātus, -ūs, m., cavalry; "equitation," "equestrian."

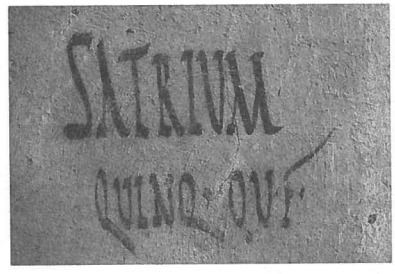
QVAESTIŌ: Summarize what you have learned about the Catilinarian conspiracy, and the role Cicero played in its suppression, from the several passages you have read in this book.

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Satrium quīnq(uennālem) ō(rō) v(ōs) f(aciātis).

CIL 4.7620: Another electoral programma like the one presented in Capvt XXII above, painted on the front wall of the House of Trebius Valens, facing onto Pompeii's Via dell'Abbondanza (Reg. III, Ins. 2). This notice advocated election of Satrius to the post of duumvir quīnquennālis, the title given to duumvirs (see Capvt XXII) who were elected in a census year (usually every five years, hence the title, from quīnque); from other programmata we know the candidate was Marcus Satrius Valens, member of a prominent Pompeian family, who ran for this office along with Quintus Postumius Modestus in A.D. 75. Abbreviations were common in these dipinti, as was the punctum, the raised dot seen in the photo following QVINQ, which was often employed to mark the ending of a word or an abbreviation.—ōrō vōs: sc. ut; the conj. was frequently omitted in a jussive noun clause.

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET ŪTILIS!

Salvēte, studentēs! Here are some fīō items: if you've found it easier to write a speech than a poem, you'll believe the old saying nāscimur poētae, fīmus ōrātōrēs; a fiat (not the car) is a magisterial command, let it be done! From Publilius Syrus (the source of many of this book's sententiae) comes repente dīvēs nēmō factus est bonus (like Juvenal's nēmō repente fuit turpissimus, Capvt XXX); also the legal expression regarding "consenting adults," volentī nōn fit iniūria, injury is not done to a willing person, and fīat ut petitur, let it be done as requested, the phrase used for granting a legal petition. Et cētera ex vocābulīs novīs in hōc capite: an accessit (lit., he/she approached, came close) is a recognition for second place or honorable mention in a competition; vinculum mātrimōniī is the bond of matrimony, and ā vinculō mātrimōniī is legal Latin for an annulment; dē minimīs nōn cūrat lēx, the law does not concern itself with trivialities, is another familiar legal maxim; there are numerous mottoes and familiar sayings from ōrāre, including ōrāre et spērāre and ōrā et labōrā; besides carpe diem, there is carpent tua pōma nepōtēs, your descendants will harvest your fruits. Carpāmus omnēs diēs, lēctōrēs et lēctrīcēs!

CAPVT XXXVII

Conjugation of Eō; Place and Time Constructions

GRAMMATICA

IRREGULAR Eō, īre, iī, itum, to go

The irregular fourth conjugation verb eō, īre, iī, itum, to go, is fully conjugated below; the verb is as common in Latin as "go" is in English, and so the conjugation should be learned thoroughly.

Indicative

Pres.	Imperf.	Fut.	Perf.	Pluperf.	Fut. Perf.
1. éō	íbam	íbō	íī	íeram	íerō
2. īs	íbās	íbis	ístī	íerās	íeris
3. it	íbat	íbit	íit	íerat	íerit
1. ímus	íbámus	íbimus	íimus	ierámus	iérimus
2. ítis	íbátis	íbitis	ístis	ierátis	iéritis
3. éunt	íbant	íbunt	iérunt	íerant	íerint

Subjunctive

Pres.	Imperf.	Perf.	Pluperf.
1. éam	írem	íerim	íssem
2. éās	írēs	íerīs	íssēs
3. éat	íret	íerit	ísset
1. eámus	írémus	ierímus	íssémus
2. eátis	írétis	ierítis	íssétis
3. éant	írent	íerint	íssent

Imperatives: Sg. ī Pl. īte Gerund: eúndī

Participles (in common use): Pres. íēns (eúntis, eúntī, etc.) Fut. itūrus, -a, -um

Infinitives: Pres. īre Fut. itūrus ésse Perf. īsse

A few irregularities in the present system of eō merit particular attention. First, the normal stem, ī-, seen in the present infinitive, becomes e- before a, o, and u in the present indicative and subjunctive (e.g., eō, eunt, eam, eundī), as well as in all forms of the present participle, except the nominative singular, and in the gerund (a form explained in Capvt XXXIX). Second, the future has the tense sign and endings of a first or second conjugation verb, i.e., -bō, -bis, etc., not -am, -ēs, etc. The perfect system is regular except that ii- before s usually contracts to ī-; e.g., īstī, īsse. Forms with -v-, such as īvī, are rare and do not appear in this book.

Only the active forms are presented here; the rare impersonal passive (e.g., ītur, ībātur) and the future and perfect passive participles (eundum, itum) do not appear in this book. Transitive compounds such as adeō, to approach, commonly have passive endings (e.g., adeor, adībātur, etc.), but those forms likewise are not employed in this book.

PLACE CONSTRUCTIONS

You have already learned the prepositions and cases employed in the following regular place constructions:

(1) PLACE WHERE: in or sub + ablative
In illā urbe vīsus est. He was seen in that city.
Nihil sub sōle est novum. There is nothing new under the sun.

(2) PLACE TO WHICH: in, ad, or sub + accusative
In illam urbem ībit. He will go into that city.
Sub hastam hostis occidit. He fell under the enemy's spear.

(3) PLACE FROM WHICH: ab, dē, or ex + ablative
Ex illā urbe iit. He went out of that city.

Special Place Constructions

With the actual names of cities, towns, and small islands, as well as the nouns domus, humus, and rūs, no prepositions were employed in Latin, though they usually must be supplied in English translation (cf., however, English "he ran home" for "he ran to his home").

(1) For PLACE WHERE with these words a special case was used in Latin, the LOCATIVE. The locative is identical to the genitive for the singular of first and second declension nouns; elsewhere the locative is usually identical to the ablative.

Vīsus est Rōmae, Ephesī, Athēnīs, et Carthāgine.
He was seen at Rome, Ephesus, Athens, and Carthage.

(2) PLACE TO WHICH: accusative without a preposition Ībit Rōmam, Ephesum, Athēnās, et Carthāginem.
He will go to Rome, Ephesus, Athens, and Carthage.

(3) PLACE FROM WHICH: ablative without a preposition Iit Rōmā, Ephesō, Athēnīs, et Carthāgine.
He went from Rome, Ephesus, Athens, and Carthage.

Domus, as seen in the Vocābula below, is an irregular feminine noun, having some second declension endings and some fourth. In place constructions the commonest forms are as follows:

domī (locative), at home — Domī vīsus est. He was seen at home.
domum (acc.), home (= to home) — Domum ībit. He will go home.
domō (abl.), from home — Domō iit. He went from home.

The locative of humus, a feminine second declension noun, follows the rule: humī, on the ground. The locative of rūs is either rūrī or rūre, in the country.

TIME CONSTRUCTIONS

You are familiar with the ABLATIVE OF TIME WHEN OR WITHIN WHICH (Capvt XV); no preposition is used in Latin, but in English translation you must supply "in," "within," "at," "on," etc., depending on the particular noun:

Eōdem diē iit. He went on the same day.
Paucīs hōrīs domum ībit. He will go home in/within a few hours.

Newly introduced here is the ACCUSATIVE OF DURATION OF TIME, which indicates, not the time at or within which an action occurs, but for how long a period of time the action occurs. No preposition is employed in Latin; in English translation, the preposition "for" is sometimes used, sometimes omitted. The construction also commonly occurs with nātus to indicate a person's age.

Multōs annōs vīxit. He lived (for) many years.
Paucās hōrās domī manēbit. He will stay at home (for) a few hours.
Quīnque et vīgintī annōs nātus, imperātor factus est. At the age of 25 (lit., having been born for 25 years), he became commander.

VOCĀBVLA

You'll find a few exceptional forms in this list: the toponyms Athēnae and Syrācūsae are nouns that (like īnsidiae) have plural forms with singular meanings; the Romans treated domus sometimes as second declension, sometimes fourth, and so you'll see a variety of endings. Licet is one of several common IMPERSONAL VERBS, which have only third person (and infinitive) forms because they have as their subject, not a person, but a phrase or clause or an indefinite "it" or "one"; e.g., licet tibi abīre literally means to leave is permitted for you, though the idiomatic translation is it is permissible for you to leave or, simply, you may leave. As an aid to mastering eō, try a synopsis with your book closed, then check your work by referring to the full conjugation above; the new noun iter, by the way, is related and literally means "a going."

Athēnae, Athēnārum, f. pl., Athens (cf. athenaeum) dómus, dómūs (dómī), f., house, home (domain, domicile, domestic, domesticate, dome, major-domo) húmus, húmī, f., ground, earth; soil (humus, exhume, inhumation, posthumous; cf. humiliate, humility, from humilis, lit. = on the earth, down-to-earth) íter, itíneris, n., journey; route, road (itinerant, itinerary; cf. eō) rūs, rūris, n., the country, countryside (rustic, rusticity; cf. rūsticor) Syrācūsae, Syrācūsārum, f. pl., Syracuse

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After studying the new grammar, memorizing the vocabulary, and checking your mastery with the Self-Tutorial Exercises and key, scan the following readings for (a) forms of eō and its compounds, identifying tense, number, person, and mood of each, and (b) occurrences of place and time constructions, identifying the case and use of each. Listen to the CDs, if you have them, and read aloud for comprehension before translating.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

SENTENTIAE ANTĪQVAE

1. Mortālia facta perībunt. (*Horace.)
2. Noctēs atque diēs patet ātrī iānua Dītis. (*Vergil.—āter, ātra, ātrum, dark, gloomy; "atrocious," "atrocity."—Dīs, Dītis, m., Dis, another name for Pluto, god of the dead.)
3. Annī eunt mōre modōque fluentis aquae. Numquam hōra quae praeteriit potest redīre; ūtāmur aetāte. (Ovid.—praeterīre, to go by, pass; "preterit," "praeteritio.")
4. Heu, obiī! Quid ego ēgī! Fīlius nōn rediit ā cēnā hāc nocte. (Terence.)
5. Frāter meus ōrat nē abeās domō. (Terence.)
6. Dīcit patrem ab urbe abīsse sed frātrem esse domī. (Terence.)
7. Tertiā hōrā forīs ībam Sacrā Viā, ut meus mōs est. (Horace.—Sacrā Viā: ABLATIVE OF ROUTE, a common construction, usually translated by way of. . . . The Sacred Way was the main street through the Roman Forum; another famous street in Rome was Via Lāta, from lātus, -a, -um, broad: how would you translate the street's name?)

The Roman Forum with remains of the temple of Castor and Pollux in the foreground and beyond it the Sacra Via Rome, Italy

8. Dēnique Dāmoclēs, cum sīc beātus esse nōn posset, ōrāvit Dionȳsium tyrannum ut abīre ā cēnā licēret. (Cicero.)
9. Eō tempore, Syrācūsīs captīs, Mārcellus multa Rōmam mīsit; Syrācūsīs autem multa atque pulcherrima relīquit. (Cicero.)
10. Diēs multōs in eā nāve fuī; ita adversā tempestāte ūsī sumus. (Terence.)

Candidius nihil est tē, Caeciliāne. Notāvī:
sī quandō ex nostrīs disticha pauca legō,

Hoc mihi dās, tamquam dēteriōra legās,

*Martial Epig. 2.71: Caecilianus is yet another contemporary reciter on Martial's "don't go there" list! (ut) recitēs: as we have seen before, the conj. is often omitted before a jussive noun clause.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Explain the joke—i.e., how can Caecilianus really make Martial's poetry look good? The punch-line, as so often, comes down to one, strategically placed word: what is that word?

Trimalchio's Epitaph

"Īnscrīptiō quoque vidē dīligenter sī haec satis idōnea tibi vidētur: 'C. Pompeius Trimalchiō Maecēnātiānus hīc requiēscit. Huic sēvirātus absentī dēcrētus est. Cum Haec ut dīxit Trimalchiō, flēre coepit ūbertim. Flēbat et Fortūnāta; flēbat et Habinnas; tōta dēnique familia, tamquam in fūnus rogāta, lāmentātiōne triclīnium implēvit.

*Petronius Sat. 71–72: Petronius (his exact identity and dates are uncertain, but probably Titus Petronius Arbiter, forced by Nero to commit suicide in A.D. 66) was author of the Satyricon, a picaresque novel whose antiheroes in one episode arrive at the home of Trimalchio, a freedman known for his lavish but utterly gauche dinner-parties; in this scene Trimalchio asks his guests their opinion of his proposed epitaph.—īnscrīptiō, -ōnis, f., = Eng. ; the more usual order would be quoque vidē dīligenter sī haec īnscrīptiō. . . .—C.: = Gāius.—Maecēnātiānus: Trimalchio takes this name to associate himself with the famous Maecenas, a powerful and wealthy associate of Augustus.—huic . . . absentī: i.e., in absentia from Rome.—sēvirātus, -ūs, m., the post of sēvir Augustālis, a member of the six-man commission that supervised the cult of the emperor.—decūria, -ae, f., club; these were groups of ten men organized for both business and social purposes.—pius, -a, -um, devoted, dedicated; "pious," "expiate."—ex parvō: i.e., from humble beginnings.—sestertium . . . trecentiēs: 30 million sesterces, a hefty sum!—nec . . . audīvit: i.e., he "never even went to college!"—et tū: sc. valē; epitaphs typically represented such "conversations": the deceased wishes the passerby "Farewell," and the passerby, reading the inscription, replies, "And you (likewise farewell)."—haec ut: = ut haec.—flēre, to weep; from the related adj. flēbilis, lamentable, tearful, we have "feeble."—ūbertim, adv., profusely.—et: = etiam.—Fortunata ("Lucky") and Habinnas were Trimalchio's wife and a guest.—fūnus, -neris, n., funeral; "funereal," "funerary."—lamentātiō, -ōnis, f.; "lament," "lamentable."—triclīnium, -iī, n., dining room.—impleō, -plēre, -plēvī, -plētum, to fill; "implement," "implementation."

QVAESTIŌ: Elsewhere during the banquet, Trimalchio joyfully mis-tells the Trojan War story, confusing all the characters and events; in what specific ways does his epitaph reflect his anti-intellectualism, and other aspects of his arrogance?

CIL 4.5296: This elaborate graffito found near a doorway in a house in Reg. IX, Ins. 7, is an erotic poem in dactylic hexameter, though the meter, as well as some of the syntax, is irregular—due either to compositional flaws or to the failure of the person inscribing it on the wall to recall the text perfectly from memory. The lovesick soliloquy is clearly delivered, and the poem itself most likely authored, by a woman; the piece is a variation on the PARACLAUSITHYRON form, a verse lament spoken by a lover shut out at his or her paramour's door. Though echos from the republican poets Catullus and Lucretius have been detected, the poem is clearly an original composition and further testimony to the level of literacy found in Pompeii.—utinam, conj. + subjunct., introducing wishes, how I wish that, if only.—collum, -ī, n., neck; "collar"; collō: with tenēre brāciola, sc.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: In what one or two places do you see the clearest evidence that the speaker is female? What do you see as the intended effect of the diminutives in lines 2–3? What apparently has the addressee done to upset the speaker, and what is the speaker's admonition to her in verses 3–4? What are the writer's closing observations on the power of the goddesses Fortuna and Venus? What do you imagine the poem's closing verse(s) may have said—i.e., how would you have concluded the poem? Verse 2, with its repeated la/la/la/llīs syllables is highly alliterative; which other lines are marked by alliteration?

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! These familiar words and phrases from eō are certainly going to interest you (notice how colloquial English employs "go" as an auxiliary verb to indicate futurity, and cf. Latin's use of īrī in those rare future passive infinitive forms): exit and exeunt omnēs are stage directions; to "perish" is to be "thoroughly gone" (from per + eō), i.e., to make one's final "exit" from life's stage, an exodus often marked by obiit on old tombstones or by the abbreviation O.S.P. for obiit sine prōle (he/she died without offspring, from prōlēs, prōlis, f., the source of "proletariate"); pereant quī ante nōs nostra dīxērunt is a proverbial curse on folks who had all our best ideas before we had them ourselves (!); iter (lit. a going) is related to eō and also to the adverb obiter, which gives us obiter dictum, something said along the way (or "in passing"), and likewise obiter scrīptum; Monty Python fans will recall the Rōmānī, īte domum routine from the "Life of Brian"; and finally aut bibat aut abeat, let him either drink or go away, is an old Roman proverb and the motto of our local pub!

Et cētera: grātus is related to grātia, favor, kindness, gratitude, as in grātiās agere, to give thanks, Deī grātiā, by the grace of God, and also English "gratis," something done "for thanks" (grātīs), i.e., without a fee. R.I.P., also found on tombstones (though not Trimalchio's!), stands for requiēscat in pāce (remember the jussive subjunctive?); rūs in urbe, a phrase from Martial, refers to a city park or garden or some other rustic setting or view that reminds one of the countryside. Vidēlicet, namely, derives from vidēre licet, lit., it is permitted to see, i.e., it is plain to see. In medieval manuscripts the word was often contracted to vi-et, and one abbreviation for et resembled a z; hence the abbreviation viz. From another compound of licet is the much more common abbreviation sc. for scīlicet, namely, clearly (from scīre licet, you may understand), which we use as an instruction to supply some word or idea that has been omitted from a text but is readily understood (see the example above in the notes on "Trimalchio"). Well, enough for today: nunc domum eāmus!

CAPVT XXXVIII

Relative Clauses of Characteristic; Dative of Reference; Supines

GRAMMATICA

RELATIVE CLAUSES OF CHARACTERISTIC

The type of relative clause you have encountered thus far provides some factual description of its antecedent, an actual person or thing, and thus has an indicative verb (Capvt XVII); e.g., haec est discipula quae Latīnam amat, this is the student who loves Latin. The RELATIVE CLAUSE OF CHARACTERISTIC, by contrast, describes some general quality of an antecedent that is itself either general, indefinite, interrogative, or negative, and accordingly has its verb in the subjunctive; e.g., haec est discipula quae Latīnam amet, this is a student (or the sort of student) who would love Latin.

Recognition: The relative clause of characteristic is easily recognized, since its verb is subjunctive and its antecedent is often obviously general, negative, etc. (typical examples are sunt quī, there are people who; quis est quī, who is there who; nēmō est quī, there is no one who). Translation: the auxiliary "would" is sometimes used in translating the subjunctive verb, and sometimes a phrase like "the sort of" or "the kind of" is employed in the main clause to make it clear that the antecedent is indefinite:

Quis est quī huic crēdat? Who is there who trusts this man (of such a sort that he would trust this man)?

Nēmō erat quī hoc scīret. There was no one who knew this.

Sunt quī hoc faciant. There are some who do this (of such a sort as to do this).

Is nōn est quī hoc faciat. He is not a person who does (would do) this.

Hic est liber quem omnēs legant. This is the kind of book that all read (a book that all would read).

Hic est liber quem omnēs legunt. This is the book that all are reading (= a fact, hence the indicative).

Some relative clauses have the force of result (e.g., S.A. 4 below), purpose (see "More Examples of Roman Wit" below), causal, or adversative clauses (i.e., clauses otherwise generally introduced by ut, cum, etc.) and so also have subjunctive verbs.

DATIVE OF REFERENCE OR INTEREST

The dative case is often used to indicate a person (or a thing) to whom some statement refers, or from whose perspective it is true, or to whom it is of special interest. This DATIVE OF REFERENCE OR INTEREST (which should be compared to the dative uses discussed in Capvt XXXV) can sometimes be translated with "to" or "for," but often some more elaborate phrase is required, depending upon the context, as you will see from the following examples; occasionally the function seems to be simply possessive (as in the second example below), but the intended force is generally more emotional.

Sī quis metuēns vīvet, līber mihi nōn erit umquam.
If anyone lives in fear, he will not ever be free—as I see it (mihi) or to my way of thinking or in my opinion.
Caret tibi pectus inānī ambitiōne?
Is your breast free from vain ambition—are you sure (tibi)?
Nūllīus culpae mihi cōnscius sum.
In my own heart (mihi), I am conscious of no fault.
Claudia est sapiēns multīs.
To many people Claudia is wise.

Remember to add this usage to your list of other dative case constructions (indirect object, dative of agent, dative with adjectives, dative with special verbs and compounds).

SUPINES

The SUPINE is a defective fourth declension verbal noun, based on the same stem as the perfect passive participle; only two forms were in common use, the accusative and ablative singular. The supines for our model verbs are: acc. laudā́tum, abl. laudā́tū; mónitum, mónitū; áctum, áctū; audītum, audītū; cáptum, cáptū.

The ablative is used with the neuter of certain adjectives to indicate in what respect a particular quality is applicable: e.g., mīrābile dictū, amazing to say (lit., amazing in respect to saying); facile factū, easy to do. The accusative (which must not be confused with the perfect passive participle) is employed with verbs of motion to indicate purpose: e.g., ībant Rōmam rogātum pecūniam, they were going to Rome to ask for money; persuāsum amīcīs vēnērunt, they came to persuade their friends (note that the supine can take a direct object, a dative, or any other construction the basic verb can govern).

VOCĀBVLA

Not only is arbor, tree, feminine, but so regularly are the names of individual trees, regardless of declension, e.g.: betulla, -ae, birch; ficus, -ī, fig; abies, -etis, fir; quercus, -ūs, oak. Some more look-alikes to beware of: opus/ops, queror/quaerō, odium/ōtium. As you learn the verbs in this list, see if you can form the supines for the four regular ones (excluding metuō, which lacks a fourth principal part, and the deponent queror); your instructor can check your answers, or you can simply compare the supines of the five model verbs presented above. Finally, don't forget the sound of gn in dignitās: listen to this, and all new words, online or on the CDs, and practice saying each aloud several times.

árbor, árboris, f., tree (arbor, Arbor Day, arboretum, arboriculture) quéror, quérī, quéstus sum, to complain, lament (querulous; cf. quarrel, from querēla, -ae, complaint) recognōscō, recognōscere, recognōvī, recognitum, to recognize, recollect (recognition, recognizance, reconnaisance, reconnoitre; cf. nōscō, cognōscō) suspéndō, suspéndere, suspéndī, suspēnsum, to hang up, suspend; interrupt (suspense, suspension; cf. pendere, to hang, pendant, pendulum) vēndō, vēndere, vēndidī, vēnditum, to sell (vend, vendor)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After testing your mastery of the chapter's new material with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, scan the readings for each (a) relative clause of characteristic, (b) dative of reference, and (c) supine; remember that in translating the relative clause of characteristic you often must supply some word/phrase indicating the indefinite nature of the antecedent or action, e.g., "a book that all would enjoy," "the sort of book that all enjoy." Listen to the CDs, if you have them, and read aloud for comprehension before translating.

Note on a Book by Lucan

Sunt quīdam quī mē dīcant nōn esse poētam;

*Martial Epig. 14.194: In this note from a gift copy of Lucan's poetry (compare the note from a copy of Catullus in Capvt XXX), the author is himself imagined as speaking; meter: elegiac couplet.—bibliopōla, -ae, m., book-dealer, antecedent of quī; "bibliopole," "bibliopolist," and cf. "bibliography" and "bibliophile," all Gk. in origin.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Is the accusation in line 1 real or hypothetical?—how do you know? The language of verse, as of daily speech, is often elliptical; what must be understood following putat?

More Examples of Roman Wit

Cum quīdam, querēns, dīxisset uxōrem suam dē fīcū suspendisse sē, amīcus illīus "Amābō tē," inquit, "dā mihi ex istā arbore surculōs quōs seram!"

Cum quīdam ōrātor sē misericordiam ōrātiōne fortasse mōvisse putāret, rogāvit Catulum vidērēturne misericordiam mōvisse. "Ac magnam quidem, mihi," inquit, "putō enim nēminem esse tam dūrum cui ōrātiō tua nōn vīsa sit digna misericordiā!"

Cicero De Or. 2.278: You read another joke ("Sorry, Nobody's Home!") from the same section of Dē Ōrātōre in Capvt XXXV; the first one here you ought not tell your wife, but the second just might get a laugh in a class on public speaking!—fīcus, -ūs, f., fig tree; "ficus."—surculus, -ī, m., shoot, sprig; "surculose."—quōs: = ut eōs, RELATIVE CLAUSE OF PURPOSE, a common alternative, introducing the purp. clause with a rel. pron. instead of ut.—serō, -ere, to plant, sow; "season."—misericordia, -ae, f., pity; "misericord"; cf. miser; an important objective for the ancient orator, and one for which he was trained, was to arouse the audience's emotions.—Catulus, -ī, m.; Quintus Lutatius Catulus, orator, author, and statesman, consul in 102 B.C.—vidērēturne: the -ne, whether, signals an ind. question.—magnam: sc. misericordiam mōvistī!—cui: = ut eī, RELATIVE CLAUSE

OF RESULT; like the rel. clause of purp., this construction is a common variant in which the clause is introduced by a rel. pron., rather than by ut.

QVAESTIŌ: The first of these jokes, albeit unkind, is clear enough, but how about the second: "pitiful" in contemporary American English can carry a double entendre identical to the one intended here—can you explain the joke?

Two Letters to Cicero

Cn. Magnus Prōcōnsul Salūtem Dīcit Cicerōnī Imperātōrī

Sī valēs, bene est. Tuās litterās libenter lēgī; recognōvī enim tuam prīstinam virtūtem etiam in salūte commūnī. Cōnsulēs, Rōmā abientēs, ad eum exercitum vēnērunt quem in Āpūliā habuī. Magnopere tē hortor ut occāsiōnem carpās et tē ad nōs cōnferās, ut commūnī cōnsiliō reī publicae miserae opem atque auxilium ferāmus. Moneō ut Rōmā exeās, viā Appiā iter faciās, et quam celerrimē Brundisium veniās.

Caesar Imperātor Salūtem Dīcit Cicerōnī Imperātōrī

Cum Brundisium celerius adeam atque sim in itinere, exercitū iam praemissō, dēbeō tamen ad tē scrībere et grātiās idōneās tibi agere, etsī hoc fēcī saepe et saepius factūrus videor; ita dignus es. Imprīmīs, quoniam crēdō mē celeriter ad urbem ventūrum esse, ā tē petō ut tē ibi videam ut tuō cōnsiliō, dignitāte, ope ūtī possim. Festīnātiōnī meae brevitātīque litterārum ignōscēs; cētera ex Furniō cognōscēs.

Cicero Atticum 8.11c and 9.6a: Among the hundreds of letters surviving from Cicero's correspondence, several were written, not by him, but to him, including these two adapted from the collection of his epistles to his friend Atticus, Epistulae ad Atticum; one is from Gnaeus Pompeius Magnus, "Pompey the Great," written on February 20, 49 B.C., and the other was sent about two weeks later, on March 5, by Julius Caesar, both of whom were at this point bidding for the statesman's support in the civil war that broke out between them after Caesar's crossing of the Rubicon on January 10.—prōcōnsul, -sulis, m., proconsul, governor (of a province).—salūte commūnī: here the public welfare.—Āpūliā: Apulia was a district in southeastern Italy.—viā Appiā: ABLATIVE OF ROUTE (see S.A. 7, Capvt XXVII); the Via Appia, or "Appian Way," built in the 4th cent. B.C., was the highway leading south from Rome and, ultimately, to Brundisium (see Map 1), the port of departure for Greece, where Pompey was fleeing with his army, in order to regroup and then take a stand against Caesar's forces.—commūnī: with cōnsiliō, mutual, collaborative.—prae + mittō, -ere; "premise."—imprīmīs, adv., especially.—festīnātiō, -ōnis, f., haste, rush; "festination."—brevitās, -tātis, f.; cf. brevis; "abbreviate."—Furnius: Gaius Furnius was tribune of the plebs and a friend of both Cicero and Caesar.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What one thing in particular (look for a repeated noun) are both generals seeking from Cicero? Do you detect any difference of tone between the two letters that might suggest one of the two men was on better terms with Cicero?

Ask Me If I Care

Nīl nimium studeō, Caesar, tibi velle placēre, nec scīre utrum sīs albus an āter homō!

*Catullus Carm. 93: As noted earlier, Catullus wrote not only love poems, but also satiric zingers aimed at the high and mighty. Here he deals Julius Caesar the ultimate insult, pretending to know nothing of the man—not even the color of his skin!—this is not a racial slur, as the Romans were largely without color prejudice, but rather a barb aimed at Caesar's pride in being a nōbilis or "known man." Meter: elegiac couplet.—nīl: = nōn.—albus, -a, -um, white; "albino," "album," "albumen."—āter, ātra, ātrum, black; "atrabilious," "atrous."

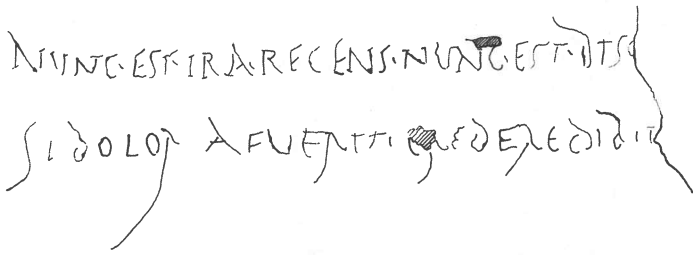
QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is the effect of using nīl nimium instead of simply nōn? How does Catullus' use of homō vs. vir contribute to the intended tone?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS



Nunc est īra recēns, nunc est disc[ēdere tempus.]
Sī dolor āfuerit, crēde: redībit [amor]!

CIL 4.4491: An elegiac couplet inscribed—after a lovers' spat?—at the entrance to the House of Sextus Pompeius Axiochus (Reg. VI, Ins. 13). The text of the two damaged verses is easily restored, as the writer was copying out lines from the elegist Propertius (El. 2.5.9–10), lines perhaps memorized in school.—recēns, gen. -centis, of recent origin, recent; fresh in the mind/memory.—absum, -esse, āfuī, āfutūrum, to be away, be absent; be removed, be distant; "absence."

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte! Have you noticed that we like to ad lib. in this section of each chapter? Ad libitum, at one's pleasure, is connected with libenter, which is how Latin should be both taught and learned: gladly! So, libenter carpite diem et hās rēs novās: first, note that impediō is from in + pēs; when you're "impeded," you've got something on your feet (like "fetters," from the same base as "foot"), so perhaps you should consult a podiatrist (pod- is the Greek cognate of Latin ped-) and ask him to "expedite" your treatment (expedīre is essentially "to de-fetter," the opposite of impedīre; cf. "implicate" and "explicate" from implicāre/explicāre); otherwise, just give up your pedestrian ways and start pedaling. Odium means rivalry as well as hatred; guess who the rivals are in odium medicum, odium scholasticum, and odium theologicum? And speaking of odious types, the emperor Tiberius (A.D. 14–37) is said to have remarked of his subjects, ōderint dum metuant, let them hate (me), so long as they fear (me)! The abbreviation op. cit. is from opere citātō, in the work cited; and opera omnia are an author's complete works. The use of opus in the titles of musical works is well known, e.g., Beethoven's "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor, Opus 67"; "opera" comes to us through It. from opera, -ae, effort, pains, work, which clearly has the same root as opus. The term magnum opus, on the other hand, is commonly used in the literary field. An old legal prescript provides that vēndēns eandem rem duōbus est falsārius (fraudulent); such a swindle would be īnfrā dignitātem, beneath one's dignity, so remember the familiar admonition caveat ēmptor, let the buyer beware! Iterum tempus fūgit: valeātis, amīcī et amīcae!

CAPVT XXXIX

Gerund and Gerundive

GRAMMATICA

THE GERUNDIVE

You are already familiar with the GERUNDIVE, or future passive participle, a verbal adjective formed with the endings -ndus, -nda, -ndum (Capvt XXIII). Besides functioning occasionally as a simple adjective (liber legendus, a book to be read), the gerundive is commonly employed in the passive periphrastic conjugation (Capvt XXIV: hic liber legendus est, this book should be read); some further uses are examined in this chapter.

THE GERUND

The GERUND is a verbal noun resembling the gerundive, except that it has only four forms, the neuter singular of the genitive, dative, accusative, and ablative. These forms are identical to the corresponding cases of the gerundive, but are active in meaning and correspond to the English gerund in "-ing" (legendī, of reading, as in magnum amōrem legendī habet, he has a great love of reading). Following are the complete gerund declensions for some representative Latin verbs:

Gen.	laudándī	dūcéndī	sequéndī	audiéndī
	(of praising, leading, following, hearing)
Dat.	laudándō	dūcéndō	sequéndō	audiéndō
	(to/for praising, etc.)
Acc.	laudándum	dūcéndum	sequéndum	audiéndum (praising, etc.)
Abl.	laudándō	dūcéndō	sequéndō	audiéndō
	(by praising, etc.)

Since the gerund is a verbal noun, it can be modified as a verb and used as a noun in the various cases. The gerund had no nominative case, however, and was not used as a subject, a function performed instead by the infinitive, another of Latin's verbal nouns (i.e., Latin could say errāre est humānum, to err is human, but not err- ing is human); the accusative was ordinarily employed as an object of ad and certain other prepositions, but not as a direct object (a function again performed by the infinitive, e.g., iussit eōs venīre, he ordered them to come: see App., p. 494). The following sentences illustrate typical uses of the gerund in its four cases:

Studium vīvendī cum amīcīs habet. She has a fondness of (for) living with friends.
Bene vīvendō operam dat. He gives attention to living well.
Ad bene vīvendum Athēnās iit. She went to Athens to live well.
Bene vīvendō fēlīciōrēs fīmus. We become happier by living well.

Differences between Gerund and Gerundive

Remember these distinctions between gerund and gerundive: (1) the gerund*ive* is a verbal adject*ive* (liber legendus, a book to be read), the gerund a verbal noun (amor legendī, love of reading); (2) as an adjective, the gerundive has a full set of masculine, feminine, and neuter endings, singular and plural, for all cases, whereas the gerund has only neuter singular forms and only in the genitive, dative, accusative, and ablative, i.e., a total of four forms altogether; (3) the gerundive is passive in meaning, the gerund active.

Gerund and Gerundive Phrases

As a verbal noun, the gerund may take the case construction required by its verb:

Studium legendī librōs habet. She has a fondness of reading books.
Librōs legendō discimus. We learn by reading books.

In actual practice, however, when the gerund would take a noun in the accusative as direct object, the Romans preferred to put this noun in the case in which the gerund would otherwise appear and to use instead a gerundive in agreement with the noun. The translation is the same no matter which construction is used, since English requires the gerund construction rather than the unidiomatic gerundive. In the following examples, those marked "A" are what we would expect on the basis of English idiom; those marked "B" are the gerundive phrases more common in Latin:

A. studium legendī librōs (acceptable)
B. studium librōrum legendōrum (preferred) fondness of reading books (not fondness of books to be read, which is unidiomatic)

A. Librōs legendō operam dat.
B. Librīs legendīs operam dat.
He gives attention to reading books.

A. Librōs legendō discimus.
B. Librīs legendīs discimus.
We learn by reading books.

A. Dē legendō librōs hoc locūta est.
B. Dē librīs legendīs hoc locūta est.
She said this about reading books.

The preposition ad + an accusative gerundive (or gerund) phrase and postpositive causā + a genitive phrase were often employed to indicate purpose:

A. Ad legendum librōs vēnit.
B. Ad librōs legendōs vēnit.
He came to read books.

A. Legendī librōs causā ōtium petit.
B. Librōrum legendōrum causā ōtium petit.
She seeks leisure for the sake of reading books.

Remember that purpose can be expressed in Latin, not only with gerundive/gerund phrases, but also with ut/nē + the subjunctive and, after a main verb of motion, the accusative supine: venit ut hōs librōs legat and hōs librōs lēctum venit both mean she is coming to read these books.

VOCĀBVLA

Knowing that diphthongs in Latin often drop their first vowel in English derivatives will help you recall the meanings of some words like aedificium, edifice, building, in the list below. Whereas fēmina means woman or female in its most basic sense, the new noun mulier (which gives us Spanish mujer) more often connotes an experienced woman, a wife, a lover (as opposed to a virgō). As you learn the new verbs in this list, you might practice with a synopsis or two; and can you identify the gerund and gerundive forms of, e.g., ōrnō?

aedifícium, aedifíciī, n., building, structure (edification, edifice, edify, aedile) iniū́ria, iniū́riae, f., injustice, injury, wrong (injurious; cf. iūdex, iūdicium, iūs) múlier, mulíeris, f., woman (muliebrity) trā́nsitus, trā́nsitūs, m., passing over, transit; transition véntus, véntī, m., wind (vent, ventilate, ventilation, ventilator) cúpidus, cúpida, cúpidum, desirous, eager, fond; + gen., desirous of, eager for (cf. cupiō, cupiditās, cupīdō) līberā́lis, līberā́le, of, relating to a free person; worthy of a free man, decent, liberal; generous (liberal arts, liberality; cf. līber, līberō, lībertās) necésse, indecl. adj. used as nom. or acc., necessary, inevitable; often necesse est + infin., it is necessary (to) (necessitate, necessitous; from nec + cēdō, in the sense of a requirement that is "not going away") vétus, gen. véteris, old (veteran, inveterate, veterinary, veterinarian) quási, adv. or conj., as if, as it were (quasi; = quam + sī) ámbulō, ambulā́re, ambulā́vī, ambulā́tum, to walk (amble, ambulance, ambulate, ambulatory, preamble, somnambulist) expérior, experī́rī, expértus sum, to try, test; experience (experiment, expert, inexpert, inexperience; cf. perīculum) lībō, lībā́re, lībā́vī, lībā́tum, to pour a libation of, on; pour ritually; sip; touch gently (libation) opórtet, oportḗre, opórtuit, impers., + infin., it is proper, right, necessary oppúgnō, oppugnā́re, oppugnā́vī, oppugnā́tum, to fight against, attack, assault, assail (oppugn, impugn, pugnacious; cf. pugnō) ōrnō, ōrnā́re, ōrnā́vī, ōrnā́tum, to equip, furnish, adorn (adornment, ornate, ornament, ornamental, suborn) pernóctō, pernoctā́re, pernoctā́vī, pernoctā́tum, to spend or occupy the night (nocturnal, nocturne; cf. nox) trānseō, trānsī́re, trānsiī, trānsitum, to go across, cross; pass over, ignore (transition, transitive, transitory, trance; cf. trānsitus above)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

After thorough study of the new grammar and vocabulary, identify all gerunds and gerundives in the following readings. Then read each sentence and passage aloud, listening to the CDs if you have them, and translate; remember that, for natural English idiom, gerundive phrases generally must be translated as active constructions, e.g., in Ex. 7 below, in rē pūblicā gerendā = in governing the republic, not in the republic to be governed.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

Promises, Promises!

Nūllī sē dīcit mulier mea nūbere mālle quam mihi, nōn sī sē Iuppiter ipse petat.
Dīcit: sed mulier cupidō quod dīcit amantī, in ventō et rapidā scrībere oportet aquā.

*Catullus Carm. 70: No mention of Lesbia here, but doubtless the woman Catullus had in mind; no longer puella, Lesbia is now mulier . . . mulier: as distinct from virgō and even fēmina, the word here, as often, denotes a woman with sexual experience, a wife or a mistress. Meter: elegiac couplet.—Nūllī . . . mihi: both are dat. with nūbere, and quam = magis quam; the prose order might be mulier mea dīcit sē nūllī quam mihi nūbere mālle.—amantī: lover.—rapidus, -a, -um, = Eng.; "rapidity," "rapacious"; cf. rapiō.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What is the poem's one key word, and in what ways does Catullus emphasize it? Read the opening verse aloud and comment on the multiple sound effects. What makes the imagery in the last line so remarkable; how does word order underscore its impact?

Paete, Nōn Dolet

Casta suō gladium cum trāderet Arria Paetō,

*Martial Epig. 1.13: Caecina Paetus was compelled to commit suicide in A.D. 42, because of the role he had played in a conspiracy against the emperor Claudius; his courageous and devoted wife Arria, choosing to die with him, stabbed herself before passing the sword to her husband, and assured him that the pain would be slight. Pliny the Younger relates the story in one of his letters, excerpted below in Locī Im. XXXIX. Meter: elegiac couplet.—castus, -a, -um, loyal, chaste; "caste," "chastity."—gladius, -ī, m., sword; "gladi-

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What common device of verse word order is seen in line 1, and what is its particular effect here? How does Martial's use of pronouns and the parallel word order and repetitions add to the pathos in verses 3-4?

Hannibal and the Beginnings of the Second Punic War

Hannibal, fīlius Hamilcaris, Carthāgine nātus est. In adulēscentiā prīstinum odium patris ergā Rōmānōs sīc fīrmē cōnservāvit ut numquam id dēpōneret. Cum patre exiit Carthāgine et in Hispāniam longō itinere prōfectus est; et post multōs annōs, Hamilcare interfectō, exercitus eī imperium trādidit. Sīc Hannibal, quīnque et vīgintī annōs nātus, imperātor factus est. Tribus annīs nōn requiēvit, sed omnēs gentēs Hispāniae superāvit et trēs exercitūs maximōs parāvit. Ex hīs ūnum in Āfricam mīsit, alterum cum frātre in Hispāniā relīquit, tertium in Italiam sēcum dūxit.

Ad Alpēs adiit, quās nēmō umquam ante eum cum exercitū trānsierat. Populōs cōnantēs prohibēre eum trānsitū necāvit; loca patefēcit; et cum multīs elephantīs mīlitibusque in Italiam iniit. In hōc itinere tam gravī morbō oculōrum adfectus est ut posteā numquam dextrō oculō bene ūtī posset. Multōs ducēs, tamen, exercitūsque Rōmānōs vīcit, et propter illum imperātōrem mīlia mīlitum Rōmānōrum periērunt.

Nepos Hann., excerpts: In this passage adapted from his life of Hannibal, Nepos summarizes some major events in the life of the Carthaginian general who led the Carthaginians against the Romans in the Second Punic War, 218–202 B.C.; for longer excerpts, see Locī Ant. VIII, and cf. the reading from Nepos' biography of Cimon in Capvt XXXII above.—Hamilcar, -caris, m.; Hamilcar Barca had commanded Carthage's army in the First Punic War (264–241 B.C.).—dē + pōnō; "deponent," "depose."—Hispānia, -ae, f., Spain; "Hispanic"; see Maps 1–2 for the locations mentioned in this passage.–quīnque . . . nātus: the phrase annōs nātus was a common idiom for indicating a person's age; we would say "at the age of . . . ," but what is the lit. translation? For the case usage of annōs here, see Capvt XXXVII.—Āfrica, -ae, f.—Alpēs, -pium, f. pl., the Alps.—adficiō, -ere, -fēcī, -fectum, to affect, afflict, weaken; "affection," "affectionate."

QVAESTIŌ: Though Hannibal was viewed by Romans for many generations after his death as one of their nation's bitterest and most terrifying enemies—he had very nearly brought his invading forces to the gates of Rome—nevertheless Nepos attributes to him qualities that even Romans would admire; what are some of those traits seen in this brief passage?

Quī mihi docendī dederit mercēdem, <h>abeat quod petit ā superīs!

CIL 4.8562: Graffito from a column in the colonnade around the Large Palaestra near the amphitheater in Pompeii (Reg. II); here, among many other activities, teachers instructed schoolboys for a fee, a common practice in Pompeii as in Rome, and this pedagogue prayed the gods would bless his paying customers!—mercēs, -cēdis, f., wage, fee; payment (for), + gen. for the service rendered.—<h>abeat: the letter h in the Roman alphabet represented a weak aspirate that was often dropped in speech and sometimes, even by teachers (!), in spelling.

ETYMOLOGIA

In recordātiō (S.A. 14) you see the stem of cor, cordis, n., heart: in antiquity the heart was regarded as the seat not only of the emotions, but also of the intellect and memory, a belief reflected in the Eng. expression "learn by heart"; derivatives, besides "record" and "recorder," include: accord, concord, discord, cordial, courage.

The terms "gerund" and "gerundive" derive ultimately from gerundum, variant of gerendum, fom gerō, to carry on, do. The gerund indicates "doing" (action); the gerundive indicates what is "to be done." In late Lat. the abl. of the gerund was used increasingly as the equivalent of a pres. participle; from this usage derive the following Romance language participles:

Lat.	It.	Sp.	Port.	Rom.
dandō	dando	dando	dando	dând
faciendō	facendo	haciendo	fazendo	făcând
dīcendō	dicendo	diciendo	dizendo	zicând
pōnendō	ponendo	poniendo	pondo	punând
scrībendō	scrivendo	escribiendo	escrevendo	scriind

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte, discipulī discipulaeque; haec sunt discenda: Cato's definition of an orator, as quoted by the 1st cent. A.D. educator Quintilian (Īnstitūtiō Ōrātōria 12.1.1), is quite well known, and you can easily translate it now that you've studied gerunds (and with the explanation that perītus, -a, -um + gen. = experienced in): ōrātor est vir bonus dīcendī perītus. Here are some more familiar items with gerunds and gerundives: New Mexico's state motto, crēscit eundō (review Capvt XXXVII, if you have trouble with that one!); docendō discimus, something all teachers know; spectēmur agendō, let us be judged by what we do (lit., by our doing); modus vīvendī and modus operandī ("m.o." to you detective show buffs!); onus probandī, the burden of proof (lit., of proving); then, of course, there are these many "things to be done": agenda, addenda, corrigenda, memorandum, referendum.

Et duo cētera ex vocābulīs novīs huius capitis: iniūria nōn excūsat iniūriam, (one) injury does not excuse (another) injury, is an old legal tenet, and expertō crēdite is still good advice. Habēte fēlīcem modum vīvendī, studentēs, et valēte!

CAPVT XL

-Ne, Num, and Nōnne in Direct Questions; Fear Clauses; Genitive and Ablative of Description

GRAMMATICA

-Ne, Num, AND Nōnne IN DIRECT QUESTIONS

As we have already seen, a Roman could ask a direct question in a variety of ways, by beginning a sentence with an interrogative pronoun (quis, quid) or such other interrogatives as ubi or cūr, or by suffixing -ne to the first word of the sentence (often the verb, or some other word on which the question hinged). But "leading questions" can also be asked in Latin: if the speaker expected "yes" as an answer, the question was introduced with nōnne (a construction already encountered, though not formally discussed); if a negative reply was anticipated, num was the introductory word:

Quis venit? Who is coming?
Cūr venit? Why is he coming?
Venitne? Is he coming?
Nōnne venit? He is coming, isn't he? or Isn't he coming?
Num venit? He isn't coming, is he?
Scrīpsistīne illās litterās? Did you write that letter?
Nōnne illās litterās scrīpsistī? You wrote that letter, didn't you? or Didn't you write that letter?
Num illās litterās scrīpsistī? You didn't write that letter, did you?

FEAR CLAUSES

Verbs denoting fear or apprehension often take subjunctive noun clauses introduced by nē (that) or ut (that . . . not; occasionally nē nōn was employed instead of ut); the conjunctions in these FEAR CLAUSES are the opposite of what might be expected, because in origin the clauses they introduced were essentially independent jussive clauses (i.e., timeō nē abeās, I fear that you may go away, = Timeō. Nē abeās!, I'm afraid—Don't go away!). Auxiliaries commonly employed in translating include "will" or "may" (in primary sequence) and "would" or "might" (in secondary sequence):

Timeō nē id crēdant. I fear that they will (may) believe this.
Vereor ut id crēdant. I am afraid that they will (may) not believe this.
Timuērunt nē amīcōs āmitterent. They feared that they might (would) lose their friends.
Metuistī ut mulierēs ex casā exīssent. You were afraid that the women had not left the house.

GENITIVE AND ABLATIVE OF DESCRIPTION

A noun in either the ablative or genitive case plus a modifying adjective may be employed to modify another noun; both the ABLATIVE OF DESCRIPTION and the GENITIVE OF DESCRIPTION (already encountered in the readings) might describe a noun by indicating its character, quality, or size, although the ablative usage was especially common in describing physical traits. Like adjectives, these descriptive phrases usually follow the nouns they modify:

fēmina magnae sapientiae, a woman of great intellect pāx in hominibus bonae voluntātis, peace among men of good will cōnsilium eius modī, a plan of this kind Dīligō hominem antīquā virtūte, I esteem a man of old-fashioned morality.
mīles fīrmā manū, the soldier with the strong hand
Es mōribus bonīs. You are a person of good character.

VOCĀBVLA

Welcome to your final Wheelock Vocābula! While fewer than a thousand words have been formally introduced in these 40 chapter lists, you have actually been introduced to nearly a thousand more through the glosses in the hundreds of Sententiae Antīquae, reading passages, and graffiti, and there are countless others whose meanings you can now easily intuit based on English derivatives and your knowledge of compounding, prefixes, suffixes, assimilation, and vowel shortening, and of the interrelations of word families like regō, rēx, rēgina, and cupiō, cupidus, cupiditās, etc.; from dominus and domina below, e.g., you should be able to guess the meanings of dominārе and dominātiō, from lacrima you should know lacrimāre and lacrimōsus, etc. So in your future readings, when you encounter some word you've not formally learned, take a closer look, both at the word itself and at its context, and very often you will find one or more secure clues to its meaning. Watch out for these last few look-alikes: metus/mēta, vultus/vulgus/vulnus. And be sure this one final time to use the CDs or online audio, in order to learn this new vocabulary by listening to and pronouncing each word aloud and not just by reading mutely from the written page.

aes, aéris, n., bronze (era; cf. aerārium, -ī, treasury; aereus, -a, -um, made of bronze) dóminus, dóminī, m., master (of a household), lord, and dómina, dóminae, f., mistress, lady (dominate, domineer, dominion, domain, domino, don, dungeon, belladonna, madonna, dame, damsel; cf. domus) lácrima, lácrimae, f., tear (lacrimal, lacrimation, lachrymose, lacrimoso) mēta, mētae, f., turning point, goal; limit, boundary monuméntum, monuméntī, n., monument (monumental; cf. moneō) nāsus, nāsī, m., nose (nasal, nasalize, nasogastric; cognates: nostril, nozzle) sáxum, sáxī, n., rock, stone (saxifrage, saxicolous; cf. secō, to cut, saw) vúltus, vúltūs, m., countenance, face iūstus, iūsta, iūstum, just, right (justice, unjust, justify, justification, adjust; cf. iūs, iūdex, iniūria) tot, indecl. adj., so many, as many; tot . . . quot, as many . . . as; cf. totidem, indecl. adj., the same number; totiēns, adv., that number of times, so often praéter, prep. + acc., besides, except; beyond, past (preterit, preterition, pretermit, preternatural; cf. prae) nōnne, interrog. adv. which introduces questions expecting the answer "yes" num, interrog. adv.: (1) introduces direct questions which expect the answer "no"; (2) introduces indirect questions and means whether omnīnō, adv., wholly, entirely, altogether; with negatives, at all (cf. omnis) postrēmum, adv., after all, finally; for the last time (cf. post) quīn, adv., indeed, in fact, furthermore éxplicō, explicāre, explicāvī, explicātum, to unfold; explain; spread out, deploy (explicate, inexplicable; implicate, from implicō, to enfold, interweave) fatīgō, fatīgāre, fatīgāvī, fatīgātum, to weary, tire out (fatigue, indefatigable) for, fārī, fātus sum, to speak (prophetically), talk, foretell (affable, ineffable, infant, infantry, preface; cf. fābula, fāma, fateor, fātum: what is "foretold" is one's "fate") opīnor, opīnārī, opīnātus sum, to suppose (opine, opinion) repériō, reperīre, répperī, repértum, to find, discover, learn; get (repertoire, repertory; cf. parēns and pariō, to give birth to) véreor, verērī, véritus sum, to show reverence for, respect; be afraid of, fear (revere, reverend, reverent, reverential, irreverent)

LĒCTIŌ ET TRĀNSLĀTIŌ

One last reminder, for the following selections and your future readings, always to read aloud and for comprehension, before attempting to translate. Test your mastery of the new grammar with the Self-Tutorial Exercises, then scan the sentences and passages below for all occurrences of fear clauses, the genitive and ablative of description, and -ne, num, and nōnne questions. In your translations of fear clauses, recall the seeming anomaly that ut = "that not" and nē = "that"; and whenever translating, always choose meanings that best suit the context—e.g., in the Vergil passage below will receive/take over is a better choice than will capture for excipiet, and will call/name makes better sense for dīcet than will say.

EXERCITĀTIŌNĒS

1. Nōnne Rōmulus, sator huius urbis, fuit vir mīrābilis virtūtis et fideī prīstinae atque quī deōs semper vereātur?

Ītaliā: sc. in; prepositions usual in prose were commonly omitted in verse.—ferōcīs: = ferōcēs, acc. pl.—pōnet: through a device known as ZEUGMA, the verb has different senses with its two objects, institute with mōrēs and build with moenia.—Māvortius, -a, -um, of Mars, the walls were so called from the legend that Mars was father of Romulus, Rome's first king.—rērum: of their affairs, i.e., for their empire.—tempora: here = time limits.—terrāsque . . . caelumque: this use of the double -que, rather like the use of et . . . et . . . you have often seen, is common in epic.—in melius: cf. the Eng. idiom "to change for the better"; Juno had sided with the Greeks in the Trojan war and had continued to resist Aeneas' fated mission.—togātus, -a, -um, togaed, toga-clad; the toga was the formal woolen outer garment worn by freeborn Roman men, particularly in the conduct of civic enterprise, whether in the forum, the courts, or legislative bodies.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: Jupiter's speech—the first of several major prophecies in the Aeneid—not only briefly foretells the fulfillment of Aeneas' mission, and Romulus', but also alludes to the destiny of the Roman empire; how specifically does he characterize the future nation in verses 278–282, and to what different realms of activity does he seem to allude in the two distinct phrases rērum dominōs and gentem . . . togātam ?

The Value of Literature

Sī ex hīs studiīs dēlectātiō sōla peterētur, tamen, ut opīnor, hanc animī remissiōnem hūmānissimam ac līberālissimam iūdicārētis. Nam cēterae neque temporum sunt neque aetātum omnium neque locōrum; at haec studia adulēscentiam alunt, senectūtem oblectant, rēs secundās ōrnant, adversīs perfugium ac sōlācium praebent, dēlectant domī, nōn impediunt forīs, pernoctant nōbīscum, peregrīnantur, rūsticantur.

*Cicero Arch. 7.16: Along with this passage you should review the selections you have read previously from Cicero's Prō Archiā, including his anecdote on Alexander the Great in Capvt XIII and his remarks on ambition and literature in Capvt XXII; this speech has remained over the centuries one of the orator's most admired, particularly for its eloquent defense of the value of the humanities.—studiīs . . . studia: i.e., literary pursuits; Cicero has in his preceding remarks discussed their "practical" benefits, and here turns to their value as a remissiō animī.—hanc: sc. esse.—iūdicāre, to judge, consider; "judicious," "adjudicate."—cēterae: sc. remissiōnēs.—omnium: modifies all three nouns, temporum, aetātum, and locōrum; this construction, a gen. following a verb (often sum, esse) and in one way or another describing the subj., is often termed a PREDICATE GENITIVE.—nōbīscum: construe with each of the three verbs.

QVAESTIŌNĒS: What are the multiple implications of the adjs. hūmānissimam and līberālissimam?–think of the root meanings of both words, which certainly Cicero himself had in mind. Looking back at the passages from this speech read earlier, compare specifically the benefits of literature he recounts there with those he describes here.

A Monument More Lasting than Bronze

> Exēgī monumentum aere perennius.
> . . .
> Nōn omnis moriar, multaque pars meī > vītābit Libitīnam.

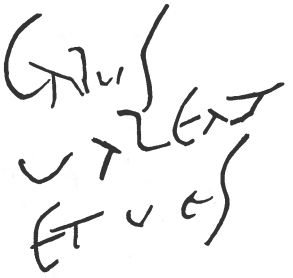
*Horace Carm. 3.30.1, 6–7: In the closing poem of his third volume of Odes (a longer excerpt from which appears below in Locī Im. XXVIII), Horace proudly lays claim to a degree of immortality; meter: first Asclepiadean.—perennis, -e, lasting (throughout the years, per annōs); "perennial."—multa: here = magna.—Libitīna, -ae, f., Libitina, ancient Italic goddess of funerals and here a symbol of death.

QVAESTIŌ: Likely it is too obvious to ask, but as a fitting final quaestiō for this book, what do you understand to be Horace's monumentum, though he does not explicitly identify it, and that multa . . . pars meī which he here proclaims will be deathless?

SCRĪPTA IN PARIETIBVS

Catus valeat—et vōs!



CIL 4.5200: This graffito was etched on the wall of a house in Reg. IX, Ins. 6; nearby was a painting of the Athenian hero Theseus and Ariadne, princess of Crete. The inscription seemed an apt one with which to conclude this final chapter's readings, as the writer here bids farewell not only to Catus, presumably a friend, but to you as well, and to all who would read this message inscribed so graciously by its anonymous scribbler nearly two thousand years ago. . . .

LATĪNA EST GAVDIVM—ET VTILIS!

Salvēte postrēmum, discipulī et discipulae! Here are some rēs novae ex hōc capite ultimō: dominus illūminātiō mea, the Lord is my light, is the motto of Oxford University; lacrima Christī is a well known Latin phrase for the tear of Christ (and also the name of a sweet Italian wine). An oft quoted line from Vergil's Aeneid comes as the hero Aeneas, shipwrecked in North Africa, gazes upon a Carthaginian mural that depicts the suffering of both his own people and the Greeks in the Trojan war: hīc etiam . . . sunt lacrimae rērum et mentem mortālia tangunt. The Latin works better than a literal English translation (which you can now easily provide for yourself), but a free rendering would be: even here there are tears for the ways of the world, and man's mortality touches the heart.

Not to be so lacrimose (or "lachrymose," an alternate spelling), let's move to some more upbeat items: remember how to make masculine agent nouns from verbs?—e.g., from reperiō is repertor, discover. Well, the feminine agentive suffix is -trīx, -trīcis (cf. Eng. "aviator" and "aviatrix," and lēctor/lēctrīx, which we've seen before), hence this proverb: paupertās omnium artium repertrīx, something like our "necessity is the mother of invention" (but what is the literal meaning?). Vultus est index animī, the face is an indication of the soul, it has often been said. And speaking of faces, to "stick your nose up in the air" and to "look down your nose" on someone are not wholly modern idioms for viewing others critically or with disdain; the Neronian satirist Persius says of his predecessor Horace, in a brilliant and not wholly complimentary metaphor, that he hung the people from his well-blown nose (excussō populum suspendere nāsō). And finally, the Augustan poet Ovid's cognomen was Nāsō, a less than flattering appellation often given someone with a big snub nose—a reminder of Cicero's poor wart-nosed ancestor, as you may recall from the notes to Capvt XVI's Scrīpta in Parietibus!

May your love of Latin be aere perennius: rīdēte, gaudēte, carpite omnēs diēs vestrōs, atque postrēmum, lēctōrēs et lēctrīcēs dulcēs, valēte!

LOCĪ ANTĪQVĪ

Although these passages selected from ancient authors have been adapted to accommodate the limited experience you have had with Latin thus far, they have been edited as little as possible; the language and thoughts are those of the ancient writers. In the case of poetry, one or more verses have been omitted from each excerpt, but the lines actually presented here have not been altered at all. In the case of a prose passage, some words or sentences may have been omitted or the wording may have been somewhat simplified at one point or another.

Not only will you find reading these varied Locī Antīquī interesting per se, but you should also gain considerable satisfaction and a sense of accomplishment in being able to read and translate passages of such complexity at this early stage in your study of "The Mother Tongue." As always, you should begin each passage by reading it aloud, at least once or twice, and reading for comprehension—attempting to gain a good sense of what the author is saying, before you attempt a translation into English.

Words appearing in these selections that have not been introduced in the 40 chapter Vocābula lists are glossed at their first one or two occurrences at least, and especially important words are listed in the Vocābula following the glosses to each passage; most are also included in the Latin-English Vocābula at the end of the book for easy reference.

eundem tamen malum et iniūstum.[5] Quārē, omnibus virīs bene vēritātem quaerentibus hunc vidērī miserrimum necesse est, nam nēminī crēdere audēbat. Itaque propter iniūstam cupiditātem dominātūs[6] quasi in carcerem[7] ipse sē inclūserat.[8] Quīn etiam,[9] nē tōnsōrī[10] collum[11] committeret, fīliās suās artem tōnsōriam docuit.[12] Ita hae virginēs tondēbant[13] barbam[14] et capillum[15] patris. IV. THE SWORD OF DAMOCLES

Hic tyrannus ipse dēmōnstrāvit quam beātus esset. Cum ille sē cupere dīxisset, hominem in aureō[8] lectō[9] collocārī[10] iussit mēnsāsque ōrnāvit argentō[11] aurōque.[12] Tum puerōs bellōs iussit cēnam exquīsītissimam[13] īnferre. Fortūnātus sibi Dāmoclēs vidētur. Eōdem autem tempore Dionȳsius gladium suprā[14] caput eius saetā equīnā[15] dēmittī[16] iussit. Dāmoclēs, cum gladium vīdisset, timēns ōrāvit tyrannum ut abīre licēret, quod iam "beātus" nōllet esse. Satisne Dionȳsius vidētur dēmōnstrāvisse nihil esse eī beātum cui semper aliquī[17] metus impendeat?[18] (Cicero, Tusculānae Disputātiōnēs 5.20.61–62)

V. DERIVATION OF "PHILOSOPHUS" AND SUBJECTS OF PHILOSOPHY

Eī quī studia in contemplātiōne[1] rērum pōnēbant "sapientēs" appellābantur, et id nōmen usque ad Pȳthagorae[2] aetātem mānāvit.[3] Hunc aiunt doctē et cōpiōsē[4] quaedam cum Leonte[5] disputāvisse[6]; et Leōn, cum illīus ingenium et ēloquentiam[7] admīrātus esset,[8] quaesīvit ex eō quā arte maximē ūterētur. At ille dīxit sē artem nūllam scīre sed esse philosophum. Tum Leōn, admīrātus novum nōmen, quaesīvit quī essent philosophī. Pȳthagorās respondit multōs hominēs glōriae aut pecūniae servīre sed paucōs quōsdam esse quī cētera prō nihilō[9] habērent sed nātūram rērum cognōscere cuperent; hōs sē appellāre "studiōsōs[10] sapientiae," id est enim "philosophōs."[11] Sīc Pȳthagorās huius nōminis inventor[12] fuit.

Ab antīquā philosophiā usque ad Sōcratem[13] philosophī numerōs et sīdera tractābant[14] et unde omnia orīrentur[15] et quō[16] discēderent. Sōcratēs autem prīmus philosophiam dēvocāvit ē caelō et in urbibus hominibusque collocāvit et coēgit eam dē vītā et mōribus rēbusque bonīs et malīs quaerere. (Cicero, Tusculānae Disputātiōnēs 5.3.8–9; 5.4.10)

VI. CICERO ON THE VALUE AND THE NATURE OF FRIENDSHIP

Ego vōs hortor ut amīcitiam omnibus rēbus hūmānīs antepōnātis. Sentiō equidem,[1] exceptā[2] sapientiā, nihil melius hominī ā deīs immortālibus datum esse. Dīvitiās aliī antepōnunt; aliī, salūtem; aliī, potestātem[3]; aliī, honōrēs; multī, etiam voluptātēs. Illa autem incerta sunt, posita nōn tam in cōnsiliīs nostrīs quam in fortūnae vicissitūdinibus.[4] Quī autem in virtūte summum bonum pōnunt, bene illī quidem faciunt; sed ex ipsā virtūte amīcitia nāscitur nec sine virtūte amīcitia esse potest.

Dēnique cēterae rēs, quae petuntur, opportūnae[5] sunt rēbus singulīs[6]: dīvitiae, ut eīs ūtāris; honōrēs, ut laudēris; salūs, ut dolōre careās et rēbus corporis ūtāris. Amīcitia rēs plūrimās continet; nūllō locō exclūditur[7]; numquam intempestīva,[8] numquam molesta[9] est. Itaque nōn aquā, nōn igne in locīs plūribus ūtimur quam amīcitiā; nam amīcitia secundās rēs clāriōrēs facit et adversās rēs leviōrēs.

Quis est quī velit in omnium rērum abundantiā ita[10] vīvere ut neque dīligat quemquam[11] neque ipse ab ūllō dīligātur? Haec enim est tyrannōrum vīta, in quā nūlla fidēs, nūlla cāritās,[12] nūlla benevolentia[13] potest esse; omnia semper metuuntur, nūllus locus est amīcitiae. Quis enim aut eum dīligat[14] quem metuat aut eum ā quō sē metuī putet? Multī autem sī cecidērunt, ut saepe fit, tum intellegunt quam inopēs[15] amīcōrum fuerint. Quid vērō stultius quam cētera parāre quae parantur pecūniā sed amīcōs nōn parāre, optimam et pulcherrimam quasi supellectilem[16] vītae?

Quisque ipse sē dīligit nōn ut aliam mercēdem[17] ā sē ipse petat sed quod per sē quisque sibi cārus est. Nisi idem in amīcitiam trānsferētur,[18] vērus amīcus numquam reperiētur. Amīcus enim est is quī est tamquam alter īdem. Ipse sē dīligit et alterum quaerit cuius animum ita cum suō misceat ut faciat ūnum ex duōbus. Quid enim dulcius quam habēre quīcum[19] audeās sīc loquī ut tēcum? (Cicero, Dē Amīcitiā, excerpts from Chs. 5, 6, 15, 21)

VII. CICERO ON WAR

Quaedam officia sunt servanda etiam adversus[1] eōs ā quibus iniūriam accēpimus. Atque in rē pūblicā maximē cōnservanda sunt iūra bellī. Quārē suscipienda quidem bella sunt ut sine iniūriā in pāce vīvāmus; post autem victōriam eī cōnservandī sunt quī nōn crūdēlēs,[6] nōn dūrī in bellō fuērunt, ut maiōrēs nostrī Sabīnōs[7] in cīvitātem etiam accēpērunt. At Carthāginem omnīnō sustulērunt; etiam Corinthum sustulērunt—quod nōn approbō[8]; sed crēdō eōs hoc fēcisse nē locus ipse ad bellum faciendum hortārī posset. Meā quidem sententiā,[9] pāx quae nihil īnsidiārum habeat semper quaerenda est. Ac aequitās[10] bellī fētiālī[11]

VIII. HANNIBAL; THE SECOND PUNIC WAR

Hannibal,[1] fīlius Hamilcaris,[2] Carthāgine nātus est. Odium patris ergā Rōmānōs sīc cōnservāvit ut numquam id dēpōneret.[3] Nam post bellum Pūnicum,[4] cum ex patriā in exsilium expulsus esset, nōn relīquit studium bellī Rōmānīs īnferendī.[5] Quārē, cum in Syriam[6] vēnisset, Antiochō[7] rēgī haec locūtus est ut hunc quoque ad bellum cum Rōmānīs indūcere[8] posset:

"Mē novem annōs nātō, pater meus Hamilcar, in Hispāniam[9] imperātor proficīscēns Carthāgine, sacrificium[10] dīs fēcit. Eōdem tempore quaesīvit ā mē vellemne sēcum proficīscī. Cum id libenter audīvissem et ab eō petere coepissem nē dubitāret mē dūcere, tum ille 'Faciam,' inquit, 'sī mihi fidem quam quaerō deris.' Tum mē ad āram[11] dūxit et mē iūrāre[12] iussit mē numquam in amīcitiā cum Rōmānīs futūrum esse. Id iūs iūrandum[13] patrī datum usque ad hanc aetātem ita cōnservāvī ut nēmō sit quī plūs odiī ergā Rōmānōs habeat."

Hāc igitur aetāte Hannibal cum patre in Hispāniam profectus est. Post multōs annōs, Hamilcare et Hasdrubale[14] interfectīs, exercitus eī imperium trādidit. Sīc Hannibal, quīnque et vīgintī annōs nātus, imperātor factus est. Tribus annīs omnēs gentēs Hispāniae superāvit et trēs exercitūs maximōs parāvit. Ex hīs ūnum in Āfricam[15] mīsit, alterum cum frātre in Hispāniā relīquit, tertium in Italiam sēcum dūxit.

Ad Alpēs[16] vēnit, quās nēmō umquam ante eum cum exercitū trānsierat.

XI. WHY NO LETTERS?

C.[1] Plīnius Fabiō[2] Suō S.[3]

Mihi nūllās epistulās[4] mittis. "Nihil est," inquis, "quod scrībam." At hoc ipsum scrībe: nihil esse quod scrībās; vel[5] illa verba sōla ā quibus maiōrēs nostrī incipere solēbant: "Sī valēs, bene est; ego valeō." Hoc mihi sufficit[6]; est enim maximum. Mē lūdere[7] putās? Sēriō[8] petō. Fac ut sciam quid agās. Valē. (Pliny, Epistulae 1.11)

XVII. WHO WILL PUT THE BELL ON THE CAT'S NECK?

Mūrēs[1] iniērunt cōnsilium quō modō sē ā cattō[2] dēfendere possent et quaedam sapientior quam cēterae āit: "Ligētur[3] campāna[4] in collō[5] cattī. Sīc poterimus eum eiusque īnsidiās vītāre." Placuit omnibus hoc cōnsilium, sed alia mūs "Quis igitur," inquit, "est inter nōs tam audāx[6] ut campānam in collō cattī ligāre audeat?" Respondit ūna mūs: "Certē nōn ego." Respondit alia: "Certē nōn ego audeō prō tōtō mundō cattō ipsī appropinquāre.[7]" Et idem cēterae dīxērunt.

Sīc saepe hominēs, cum quendam āmovendum esse arbitrantur et contrā eum insurgere[8] volunt, inter sē dīcunt: "Quis appōnet sē contrā eum? Quis accūsābit[9] eum?" Tum omnēs, sibi timentēs, dīcunt: "Nōn ego certē! Nec ego!" Sīc illum vīvere patiuntur. (Odo de Cerinton, Nārrātiōnēs, 12th cent.)

LOCĪ IMMŪTĀTĪ

The Locī Immūtātī are offered for those who may finish reading all the Locī Antīquī and wish to try their wits on some unaltered classical Latin. These passages are straight Latin, unchanged except for occasional omissions, which have been regularly indicated by three dots. Naturally this unadapted literary material had to be rather heavily annotated, but more in the matter of vocabulary than in other respects. As in the case of the Locī Antīquī, words appearing here that have not been introduced in the regular chapter Vocābula are glossed at their first one or two occurrences, and most are also included in the Latin-English Vocābula at the back of the book for quick reference, if needed. New grammatical principles have been treated as they occur, either by a brief statement in the notes or by reference to the Appendix.

Take the time, as always, to begin each passage by reading it aloud, once or twice at least, and always read first for comprehension—attempting to gain a clear sense of what the author is saying, before you attempt a translation into English.

I. A DEDICATION

Cui dōnō[1] lepidum[2] novum libellum āridō[3] modo[4] pūmice[5] expolītum[6]?
Cornēlī,[7] tibi, namque[8] tū solēbās meās esse aliquid putāre nūgās,[9] iam tum cum ausus es ūnus Ītalōrum[10] omne aevum[11] tribus explicāre[12] chartīs,[13]

quālecumque,[15] quod, Ō patrōna[16] virgō, plūs ūnō maneat[17] perenne[18] saeclō.[19] (Catullus 1)

II. HOW MANY KISSES[1]

Quaeris quot mihi bāsiātiōnēs[2]
tuae, Lesbia, sint satis superque.[3] Quam magnus numerus Libyssae[4] harēnae[5] laserpīciferīs[6] iacet Cyrēnīs,[7]
aut quam sīdera multa, cum tacet nox, fūrtīvōs[8] hominum vident amōrēs, tam tē[9] bāsia multa bāsiāre[10]
vēsānō[11] satis et super Catullō est. (Catullus 7.1–4, 7–10)

III. DEATH OF A PET SPARROW

Lūgēte,[1] Ō Venerēs[2] Cupīdinēsque[3] et quantum est hominum[4] venustiōrum[5]!
Passer[6] mortuus est meae puellae, passer, dēliciae[7] meae puellae, quem plūs illa oculīs suīs amābat.
Nam mellītus[8] erat, suamque nōrat[9]
ipsam[10] tam bene quam puella mātrem;

[14] labōriōsus, -a, -um, laborious
[15] libellī, gen. of whole; lit. whatever kind of book this is of whatsoever sort; i.e., this book such as it is. quāliscumque, quālecumque, of whatever sort or kind

[31] ocellus, -ī, diminutive of oculus

IV

METER: elegiac couplet.

[1] Catullus journeyed to Bithynia on the staff of Memmius, the governor, apparently for two prime reasons. He undoubtedly wanted to get away from Rome in order to regain his equilibrium and fortitude after his final break with the notorious Lesbia. The present poem shows that he also deeply desired to carry out the final funeral rites for his dearly beloved brother, who had died in a foreign land far from his loved ones.
[2] aequor, -oris, n., flat surface, the sea
[3] vehō, -ere, vexī, vectum, carry [4] īnferiae, -ārum, offerings in honor of the dead

V. VITRIOLIC DENUNCIATION[1] OF THE LEADER OF A CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE ROMAN STATE

Quō usque[2] tandem abūtēre,[3] Catilīna, patientiā nostrā? Quam diū etiam furor[4] iste tuus nōs ēlūdet[5]? Quem ad fīnem sēsē[6] effrēnāta[7] iactābit[8] audācia[9]? Nihilne[10] tē nocturnum[11] praesidium[12] Palātī,[13] nihil urbis vigiliae,[14] nihil timor populī, nihil concursus[15] bonōrum omnium, nihil hic mūnītissimus[16] habendī senātūs locus, nihil hōrum ōra[17] vultūsque mōvērunt? Patēre tua cōnsilia nōn sentīs? Cōnstrictam[18] iam omnium hōrum scientiā tenērī coniūrātiōnem[19] tuam nōn vidēs? Quid proximā,[20] quid superiōre[21] nocte ēgerīs, ubi fuerīs, quōs convocāverīs,[22] quid cōnsilī cēperīs, quem nostrum[23] ignōrāre[24] arbitrāris?

Ō tempora[25]! Ō mōrēs! Senātus haec intellegit, cōnsul videt; hic tamen vīvit. Vīvit? Immō[26] vērō[27] etiam in senātum venit, fit pūblicī cōnsilī particeps,[28] notat[29] et dēsignat[30] oculīs ad caedem[31] ūnum quemque nostrum. Nōs, autem, fortēs virī, satis facere reī pūblicae vidēmur sī istīus furōrem ac tēla[32] vītāmus. Ad mortem tē, Catilīna, dūcī iussū[33] cōnsulis iam prīdem[34] oportēbat, in tē cōnferrī pestem[35] quam tū in nōs māchināris[36] . . .

[25] in perpetuum, forever
[26] avē = salvē

V

[1] For the general situation of this speech see the introductory note to the reading passage in Capvt XXX. Since Cicero as yet lacked evidence that would stand in court, this speech is a magnificent example of bluff; but it worked to the extent of forcing Catiline (though not the other leaders of the conspiracy) to leave Rome for his army encamped at Fiesole near Florence.

convīviīs,[25] quantum dēnique alveolō,[26] quantum pilae,[27] tantum[28] mihi egomet[29] ad haec studia recolenda[30] sūmpserō[31]? Atque hoc ideō[32] mihi concēdendum est magis quod ex hīs studiīs haec quoque crēscit ōrātiō et facultās,[33] quae, quantacumque[34] est in mē, numquam amīcōrum perīculīs dēfuit[35] . . .

Plēnī omnēs sunt librī, plēnae sapientium vōcēs, plēna exemplōrum[36] vetustās[37]; quae iacērent in tenebrīs[38] omnia, nisi litterārum lūmen[39] accēderet. Quaeret quispiam,[50] "Quid? illī ipsī summī virī quōrum virtūtēs litterīs prōditae sunt,[51] istāne doctrīnā[52] quam tū effers[53] laudibus ērudītī fuērunt[54]?" Difficile est hoc dē omnibus cōnfirmāre,[55] sed tamen est certum quid respondeam . . . : saepius ad laudem atque virtūtem nātūram sine doctrīnā quam sine nātūrā valuisse[56] doctrīnam. ANECDOTES FROM CICERO (11–15)

XI. DEATH OF A PUPPY (EXAMPLE OF AN OMEN)

L. Paulus[1] cōnsul iterum, cum eī[2] bellum[3] ut cum rēge Perse[4] gereret[5] obtigisset,[6] ut eā ipsā diē domum ad vesperum rediit, fīliolam[7] suam Tertiam,[8] quae tum erat admodum[9] parva, ōsculāns[10] animadvertit[11] trīsticulam.[12] "Quid est,[13]" inquit, "mea Tertia? Quid[14] trīstis es?" "Mī pater," inquit, "Persa[15] periit." Tum ille artius[16] puellam complexus,[17] "Accipiō," inquit, "mea fīlia, ōmen.[18]" Erat autem mortuus catellus[19] eō nōmine. (Cicero, Dē Dīvīnātiōne 1.46.103)

XII. TOO CONSCIENTIOUS (AN EXAMPLE OF IRONY)

Est huic fīnitimum[1] dissimulātiōnī[2] cum honestō[3] verbō vitiōsa[4] rēs appellātur: ut cum Āfricānus cēnsor[5] tribū[6] movēbat eum centuriōnem[7] quī in Paulī pugnā[8] nōn adfuerat,[9] cum ille sē custōdiae causā dīceret in castrīs[10] remānsisse quaereretque cūr ab eō notārētur[11]: "Nōn amō," inquit, "nimium dīligentēs." (Cicero, Dē Ōrātōre 2.67.272)

XI

[1] L. Aemilius Paulus Macedonicus was the father of Scipio Africanus Minor. As consul in 168 B.C. he brought the war with Macedonia to a successful conclusion by the defeat of the Macedonian King, Perseus. This explains why, before setting out against Perseus, he interpreted the chance words Persa periit as a favorable omen. The Romans believed seriously in the importance of omens.

XIII. QUAM MULTA NŌN DĒSĪDERŌ!

Sōcratēs, in pompā[1] cum magna vīs[2] aurī[3] argentīque[4] ferrētur, "Quam multa nōn dēsīderō!" inquit.

Xenocratēs,[5] cum lēgātī ab Alexandrō[6] quīnquāgintā[7] eī talenta[8] attulissent (quae erat pecūnia temporibus illīs, Athēnīs praesertim,[9] maxima), abdūxit lēgātōs ad cēnam in Acadēmīam[10]; iīs apposuit[11] tantum quod satis esset, nūllō apparātū.[12] Cum postrīdiē[13] rogārent eum cui numerārī[14] iubēret, "Quid? Vōs hesternā,[15]" inquit, "cēnulā[16] nōn intellēxistis mē pecūniā nōn egēre?" Quōs cum trīstiōrēs vīdisset, trīgintā[17] mināS[18] accēpit nē aspernārī[19] rēgis līberālitātem[20] vidērētur.

At vērō Diogenēs[21] līberius,[22] ut[23] Cynicus, Alexandrō rogantī ut dīceret sī quid opus[24] esset: "Nunc quidem paululum,[25]" inquit, "ā sōle.[26]" Offēcerat[27] vidēlicet[28] aprīcantī.[29] (Cicero, Tusculānae Disputātiōnēs 5.32.91–92)

XIV. WHAT MAKES A GOOD APPETITE

Dārēus[1] in fugā[2] cum aquam turbidam[3] et cadāveribus[4] inquinātam[5] bibisset, negāvit umquam sē bibisse iūcundius. Numquam vidēlicet sitiēns[6] biberat. Nec ēsuriēns[7] Ptolemaeus[8] ēderat,[9] cui cum peragrantī[10] Aegyptum,[11] comitibus[12] nōn cōnsecūtīs[13] cibārius[14] in casā pānis datus esset, nihil vīsum est illō pāne iūcundius. Sōcratem ferunt,[15] cum usque ad vesperum contentius[16] ambulāret quaesītumque

XIX. THEMISTOCLES AND THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS[1]

Themistoclēs[2] ad (bellum Corcȳraeum[3]) gerendum praetor ā populō factus, nōn sōlum praesentī[4] bellō sed etiam reliquō[5] tempore ferōciōrem reddidit cīvitātem. Nam cum pecūnia pūblica, quae ex metallīs[6] redībat, largītiōne[7] magistrātuum[8] quotannīs[9] interīret,[10] ille persuāsit populō ut eā pecūniā classis centum nāvium aedificārētur.[11] Quā[12] celeriter effectā, prīmum Corcȳraeōs frēgit,[13] deinde maritimōs praedōnēs[14] cōnsectandō[15] mare tūtum reddidit. In quō[16] . . . perītissimōs[17] bellī nāvālis[18] fēcit Athēniēnsēs. Id quantae salūtī[19] fuerit ūniversae[20] Graeciae, bellō cognitum est Persicō.[21] Nam cum Xerxēs[22] et marī et terrā[23] bellum ūniversae īnferret Eurōpae, cum tantīs cōpiīs eam invāsit[24] quantās neque ante nec posteā habuit quisquam. Huius enim classis mīlle et ducentārum nāvium longārum[25] fuit, quam duo mīlia onerāriārum[26] sequēbantur. Terrestris[27] autem exercitus septingenta[28] (mīlia) peditum, equitum quadringenta[29] mīlia fuērunt.[30]

XX. ARISTIDES THE JUST

Aristīdēs,[1] Lȳsimachī[2] fīlius, Athēniēnsis, aequālis[3] ferē fuit Themistoclī[4] atque cum eō dē prīncipātū[5] contendit . . . In hīs autem cognitum est quantō[6] antistāret[7] ēloquentia innocentiae.[8] Quamquam enim adeō excellēbat[9] Aristīdēs abstinentiā[10] ut ūnus post hominum memoriam . . . cognōmine[11] "Iūstus" sit appellātus, tamen ā Themistocle collabefactus[12] testulā[13] illā[14] exsiliō[15] decem annōrum[16] multātus est.[17]

Quī quidem cum intellegeret reprimī[18] concitātam[19] multitūdinem nōn posse, cēdēnsque animadvertisset quendam scrībentem ut patriā pellerētur,[20] quaesīsse ab eō[21] dīcitur quārē id faceret aut quid Aristīdēs commīsisset cūr[22] tantā poenā dignus dūcerētur. Cui ille respondit sē ignōrāre[23] Aristīdēn, sed sibi nōn placēre[24] quod tam cupidē labōrāsset ut praeter cēterōs "Iūstus" appellārētur. Hic decem annōrum lēgitimam[25] poenam nōn pertulit. XL. A SWEET, BRAVE GIRL

C. Plīnius Marcellīnō Suō S.

Trīstissimus haec tibi scrībō, Fundānī nostrī fīliā minōre defūnctā,[1] quā puellā[2] nihil umquam fēstīvius,[3] amābilius,[4] nec longiōre vītā . . . dignius vīdī. Nōndum annōs trēdecim implēverat,[5] et iam illī[6] anīlis[7] prūdentia, mātrōnālis[8] gravitās[9] erat, et tamen suāvitās[10] puellāris[11] . . . Ut[12] illa patris cervīcibus[13] inhaerēbat[14]! Ut nōs, amīcōs paternōs,[15] et amanter[16] et modestē[17] complectēbātur![18] Ut nūtrīcēs,[19] ut paedagōgōs,[20] ut praeceptōrēs[21] prō suō quemque officiō dīligēbat! Quam studiōsē,[22] quam intelligenter[23] lēctitābat[24]! . . .

Quā illa temperantiā,[25] quā patientiā, quā etiam cōnstantiā[26] novissimam valētūdinem[27] tulit! Medicīs obsequēbātur;[28] sorōrem, patrem adhortābātur[29]; ipsamque sē dēstitūtam[30] corporis vīribus vigōre[31] animī sustinēbat.[32] Dūrāvit[33] hic[34] illī usque ad extrēmum,[35] nec aut spatiō[36] valētūdinis aut metū mortis īnfrāctus est[37] . . . XLIII. THANKS FOR A FRIEND'S CLEMENCY

C. Plīnius Sabīniānō Suō S.

Bene fēcistī[1] quod lībertum[2] aliquandō[3] tibi cārum redūcentibus[4] epistulīs[5] meīs in domum,[6] in animum recēpistī. Iuvābit hoc tē, mē certē iuvat; prīmum,[7] quod tē tam tractābilem[8] videō ut in īrā regī possīs; deinde, quod tantum mihi tribuis[9] ut vel[10] auctōritātī meae pāreās vel precibus indulgeās.[11] Igitur laudō et grātiās agō . . . Valē. (Pliny, Epistulae 9.24, excerpts)

XLIV. SELECTION OF A TEACHER

C. Plīnius Mauricō Suō S.

Quid ā tē mihi iūcundius potuit iniungī[1] quam ut praeceptōrem frātris tuī līberīs quaererem? Nam beneficiō[2] tuō in scholam[3] redeō et illam dulcissimam aetātem quasi resūmō.[4] Sedeō inter iuvenēs, ut solēbam, atque etiam experior quantum apud illōs auctōritātis[5] ex studiīs habeam. Nam proximē[6] frequentī[7] audītōriō[8] inter sē cōram[9] multīs ōrdinis[10] nostrī clārē[11] loquēbantur: intrāvī, conticuērunt[12]; quod[13] nōn referrem, nisi ad illōrum magis laudem quam ad meam pertinēret[14] . . . Cum omnēs quī profitentur[15] audierō, quid dē quōque sentiam scrībam efficiamque,[16] quantum tamen epistulā cōnsequī[17] poterō, ut ipse omnēs audīsse videāris. SELF-TUTORIAL EXERCISES

These exercises have been included in the hope of enriching the potential of this book for its various types of users.

1. Repetītiō est māter memoriae. In language study the value of repetition is indisputable. To the already large amount of repetition achieved in the regular chapters these exercises add even more practice. The phrases and sentences have deliberately been made simple so that the immediate points in forms and syntax may stand out strikingly. The words are purposely limited to those of the formal lesson vocabularies, which obviously should be memorized before turning to these self-tutorial exercises. As a result of their very nature and purpose, such sentences can make no claim to inspiration. Some hints of the worthwhile reading matter for which one studies Latin are to be found in the Sententiae Antīquae and the reading passages from the ancient authors, which are the heart of this book; but if one wants additional repetitious drill by which to establish linguistic reflexes, one can find it here in these exercises. As has been suggested elsewhere, be sure always to read aloud every Latin word and sentence—carefully, for such a practice enables one to learn through the ear as well as the eye and can provide many of the benefits of a language laboratory.

2. To students enrolled in a regular Latin course these exercises with their keys can prove valuable for review and self-testing and can be helpful in preparation for examinations.

3. Also to the private individual who wishes to learn or review Latin independently, these exercises are certain to be valuable, since they can be used as self-tests which can be corrected via the key. Likewise, completing these practice exercises with benefit of key will provide greater confidence in tackling the regular exercises of the book.

4. All students can test themselves in simple Latin composition by translating the English sentences of the key back into Latin and checking this work via the corresponding Latin sentences of the exercises.

5. In the translations ordinarily only one of the various meanings of a word given in the vocabulary will be used in any specific instance. If at times the translations are somewhat formal, the reason is that they can in this way follow the Latin more closely; and certainly these particular sentences are intended to provide practice in understanding Latin rather than practice in literary expression. Polished literary expression in translation is most desirable and should be practiced in connection with the other exercises in this book.

6. The answer keys have been placed by themselves after the exercises to facilitate self-testing and so that the exercises may be used for practice in class when the instructor wishes. It hardly need be added that the surest way to test oneself is to write out the answers before turning to the key.

7. Finally, let it be emphasized once again that for maximum value you must read aloud all the Latin words, phrases, and sentences, and that you must have studied the text of each lesson carefully through the vocabulary before turning to these exercises.

Dēbēmus illōs miserōs metū līberāre. 25. Nam quis potest beātus esse sī aliī hominēs frūctibus pācis lībertātisque carent?

26 What idea is expressed by each of the following ablatives, respectively? tempore (6), patriā (7), eō (8), virō (9), metū (10), nōbīs (12), patriā (13), sceleribus (14), metū (15), studiō (16), manibus (17), cōpiā (22), aetāte (23), metū (24).

EXERCISES FOR Capvt XXI

1. Give the passive personal endings of the present and future tenses.
2. Repeat aloud the present and future passive of the model verbs agō, audiō, and capiō.
3. How can the present passive infinitive be distinguished from the active in the 1st, 2nd, and 4th conjugations? Illustrate by changing the following active infinitives into passive ones: (1) sentīre; (2) movēre; (3) servāre; (4) scīre; (5) tenēre. Translate each.
4. What is exceptional about the form of the present passive infinitive of the 3d conjugation? Illustrate by changing the following active infinitives into passive ones: (1) mittere; (2) iacere; (3) tangere; (4) trahere. Translate each.
5. Translate each of the following in accordance with its form:

(1) mittar
(2) mitteris
(3) mittēris
(4) mittī
(5) mittuntur
(6) mittor
(7) rapitur
(8) rapiētur
(9) rapī
(10) rapimur
(11) rapientur
(12) rapiuntur
(13) raperis
(14) rapiēris
(15) tanguntur
(16) tangentur
(17) tangī
(18) tangeris
(19) tangēminī
(20) sciēris
(21) scīris
(22) sciētur
(23) scītur
(24) scīrī

6. Quis mittitur (mittētur, mittēbātur, missus est)? 7. Ā quō hae litterae mittentur (missae sunt, mittuntur)? 8. Cuius manū illae litterae scrīptae sunt (scrībentur)? 9. Quid dictum est (dīcēbātur, dīcētur, dīcitur)? 10. "Quis rapiētur?" "Tū rapiēris." 11. "Quī rapientur?" "Vōs rapiēminī." 12. Diū neglegēris/neglegēminī (neglēctus es/neglēctī estis). 13. Post multās hōrās līberātī sumus (līberābimur). 14. Cīvitātis causā eum rapī iussērunt. 15. Lībertātis causā cīvitās nostra ab alterō virō gerī dēbet. 16. Animus eius pecūniā tangī nōn poterat. 17. Amor patriae in omnī animō sentiēbātur (sentiētur, sentītur, sēnsus est). 18. Amōre patriae cum aliīs cīvibus iungimur (iungēbāmur, iungēmur). 19. Amīcitia nōn semper intellegitur, sed sentītur. 20. Sapientia et vēritās in illīs duōbus hominibus nōn invenientur (inveniuntur, inventae sunt). 21. Sapientia etiam multā pecūniā nōn parātur (parābitur, parāta est). 22. Vēritās saepe nōn scītur (sciētur, scīta est), quod studium eius est difficile. 23. Nōn sine magnō labōre vēritās inveniētur (inventa est, potest invenīrī). 24. Aliī studiō pecūniae atque laudis trahuntur; nōs dēbēmus amōre vēritātis sapientiaeque trahī.

EXERCISES FOR Capvt XXII

1. As u is characteristic of the 4th declension, what vowel is characteristic of the 5th declension?
2. List the case endings of the 5th declension which are enough like the corresponding endings of the 3rd declension that they can be immediately recognized without difficulty.
3. (1) What is the gender of most nouns of the 5th declension?
   (2) Name the chief exception.
4. Translate each of the following in accordance with its case(s) and number(s). Where a form is nom. or acc., so state.

(1) speī	(6) fidē	(11) diēbus	(16) reī
(2) spērum	(7) fidem	(12) rem	(17) ignium
(3) spem	(8) fideī	(13) rērum	(18) ignem
(4) spēbus	(9) diērum	(14) rē	(19) ignibus
(5) spēs	(10) diēs	(15) rēbus	(20) ignēs

5. Name the type of adverbial idea in each of the following, and then translate the sentence.

(1) In urbe remānsit.	(4) Cum eīs vēnit.	(7) Illud igne factum est.
(2) Ūnā hōrā veniet.	(5) Ex urbe vēnit.	(8) Id ab eīs factum est.
(3) Eō tempore vēnit.	(6) Igne carent.	(9) Id cum fidē factum est.

6. Concerning each of the following adverbial ideas, state whether in Latin the ablative alone expresses the idea, or whether the Romans used a preposition with the ablative, or whether a preposition was sometimes used and sometimes not. Base your answers on the rules learned thus far.

(1) personal agent	(5) means
(2) accompaniment	(6) manner
(3) separation	(7) place from which
(4) place where	(8) time when or within when

7. Eō tempore lībertātem illōrum decem cīvium cum fidē cōnservāvit. 8. Rem pūblicam magnā cum cūrā gessit. 9. Rēs pūblica magnā cūrā ab eō gesta est. 10. Multae rēs bonae in mediā urbe vīsae sunt. 11. Eō diē multās rēs cum spē parāvērunt. 12. Ignem ex manibus puerī ēripuimus. 13. Quīnque diēbus Cicerō rem pūblicam ē perīculō ēripiet. 14. Duās rēs pūblicās metū lībērāvistī. 15. Terra hominēs frūctibus bonīs alit. 16. Incertās spēs eōrum virtūte suā aluit. 17. Hāc aetāte spēs nostrae ā hīs tribus tyrannīs tolluntur. 18. Septem ex amīcīs nostrīs ex illā rē pūblicā magnō cum metū vēnērunt. 19. Tōta gēns in fīnēs huius reī pūblicae magnā cum manū amīcōrum ūnō diē vēnit. 20. Nōn omnēs virī līberī audent sē cum hāc rē pūblicā iungere. 21. Sī illī fidē carent, nūlla spēs est amīcitiae et pācis. 22. Bona fidēs et amor huius reī pūblicae possunt nōs cōnservāre. 23. Tōtam vītam huic reī pūblicae dedistī.

24. What idea is expressed by each of the following ablatives? (The numbers refer to the sentences.) (7) tempore, fidē; (8) cūrā; (9) cūrā; (10) urbe; (11) diē, spē; (13) diēbus, perīculō; (14) metū; (15) frūctibus; (16) virtūte; (17) aetāte, tyrannīs; (18) rē pūblicā, metū; (19) manū, diē; (21) fidē.

EXERCISES FOR Capvt XXIII

1. State what Latin participle is indicated by each of the following endings and give the English suffix or phrase which can be used as an approximate equivalent in each instance: (1) -tus; (2) -ns; (3) -sūrus; (4) -ntem; (5) -tūrus; (6) -ndus; (7) -sus; (8) -ntēs; (9) -sī; (10) -tīs. Such forms should be practiced aloud until you have an immediate linguistic reflex to each one. These reflexes can be tested in the following exercise.
2. Translate the following participles in accordance with their tense and voice.

(1) futūrus	(7) versus	(13) faciendus	(19) datī
(2) pressūrus	(8) versūrus	(14) rapientēs	(20) datūrōs
(3) premēns	(9) dictus	(15) raptūrōs	(21) dantem
(4) pressus	(10) dīcēns	(16) cupīta	(22) mōtus
(5) premendus	(11) dictūrus	(17) cupientēs	(23) moventem
(6) vertēns	(12) factus	(18) dandum	(24) mōtūrī

(1) (having been) seen	(10) (having been) conquered
(2) seeing	(11) about to conquer
(3) about to see	(12) conquering
(4) to be written	(13) about to join
(5) about to write	(14) joining
(6) (having been) written	(15) (having been) dragged
(7) sending	(16) dragging
(8) (having been) sent	(17) about to throw
(9) about to send	(18) (having been) thrown

4. Captus nihil dīxit. 5. Servitūte lībērātus, vītam iūcundam aget. 6. Dōna dantibus grātiās ēgit. 7. Aliquem dōna petentem nōn amō. 8. Hominī multam pecūniam cupientī pauca dōna sōla dabat. 9. Ad lūdum tuum fīlium meum docendum mīsī. 10. Iste, aliam gentem victūrus, magistrōs librōsque dēlēre cupiēbat. 11. Hīs īnsidiīs territī, vītam miseram vīvēmus. 12. Diū oppressī, sē contrā opprimentem tyrannum vertere coepērunt. 13. Illī quattuor virī miserī, ā tyrannō vīsī, trāns fīnem cucurrērunt. 14. Ōrātor, tyrannum timēns, iūcunda semper dīcēbat. 15. Aliquem nōs timentem timēmus. 16. Hī vincentēs omnia iūra cīvium victōrum tollent. 17. Ille miser fugitūrus cōnsilium trium amīcōrum petēbat. 18. Senex, ab duōbus ex amīcīs monitus, ad nōs fūgit. 19. Ipse, ā sene secundō adiūtus, pecūniā carentibus multās rēs dabat. 20. Quis, hīs perīculīs līberātus, deīs grātiās nōn dabit? 21. Iūnctī vōbīscum, rem pūblicam cōnservābimus. 22. Fidem habentibus nihil est incertum.

EXERCISES FOR Capvt XXIV

1. (1) What are the two essential parts of a regular ablative absolute in Latin?
   (2) Can the noun or pronoun of an ablative absolute also appear as the subject or the object of the verb?
2. (1) Explain the term "absolute."
   (2) Guided by the examples in Capvt XXIV, p. 194, tell what punctuation usually indicates an ablative absolute, and show how this harmonizes with the term "absolute."
3. Should the ablative absolute always be translated literally? Explain.
4. Name five subordinating conjunctions in English which may be used to translate the ablative absolute depending on the requirements of the context.
5. State whether the Romans would have regarded any or all of the following sentences as incorrect, and explain why. (Examples in Capvt XXIV will help you.)
   (1) Urbe captā, Caesar eam dēlēvit.
   (2) Caesar, urbem captus, eam dēlēvit.
   (3) Caesar urbem captam dēlēvit.
   (4) Urbe captā, Caesar multās gentēs dēlēvit.
6. (1) What idea is expressed by the -ndus participle (gerundive) + sum?
   (2) Explain the agreement of the -ndus, -nda, -ndum participle.
   (3) What Latin verb + the infinitive expresses a similar idea?
7. (1) Explain the syntax of mihi in the following sentence: Cīvitās mihi cōnservanda est.
   (2) Fill out the blank in the following sentence with the Latin for "by me" and explain the construction: Cīvitās—cōnservāta est.

8. Hīs duōbus virīs imperium tenentibus, rēs pūblica valēbit. 9. Hāc fāmā nārrātā, dux urbem sine morā relīquit. 10. Omnī cupiditāte pecūniae glōriaeque ex animō expulsā, ille dux sē vīcit. 11. Omnis cupiditās rērum malārum nōbīs vincenda est sī bonam vītam agere cupimus. 12. Cīvibus patriam amantibus, possumus habēre magnās spēs. 13. Omnēs cīvēs istum tyrannum timēbant, quī expellendus erat. 14. Tyrannō superātō, cīvēs lībertātem et iūra recēpērunt. 15. At tyrannō expulsō, alius tyrannus imperium saepe accipit. 16. Quis imperium accipiēns adiuvāre cīvitātem sōlam, nōn sē, cupit? 17. Multīs gentibus victīs, tōtum mundum tenēre cupīvistī. 18. Servitūs omnis generis per tōtum mundum opprimenda est. 19. Sī rēs pūblica nostra valet, nihil tibi timendum est. 20. Patria nostra cuique adiuvanda est quī nostrum modum vītae amat. 21. Omnia igitur iūra cīvibus magnā cūrā cōnservanda sunt. 22. Officiīs ā cīvibus relictīs, rēs pūblica in magnō perīculō erit. 23. Hīs rēbus gravibus dictīs, ōrātor ā nōbīs laudātus est. 24. Vēritās et virtūs omnibus virīs semper quaerendae sunt. 25. Vēritāte et virtūte quaesītīs, rēs pūblica cōnservāta est.

26. From the above sentences list:
   A. 10 instances of the ablative absolute.
   B. 7 instances of the -ndus sum construction (passive periphrastic).
   C. 5 instances of the dative of agent.
   D. 2 instances of the ablative of agent.

EXERCISES FOR Capvt XXV

1. Review the present active and passive infinitives of all four conjugations.
2. If -tūrus (-sūrus) marks the future active participle, what form logically is -tūrus (-sūrus) esse?
3. If -tus (-sus) marks the perfect passive participle, what form logically is -tus (-sus) esse?
4. With what do the participial elements of the above infinitives (the -tūrus, -tūra, -tūrum and the -tus, -a, -um) agree?
5. To what English verb phrase is the Latin ending -isse equivalent? Repeat this sufficiently so that when you see -isse your linguistic reflex automatically and instantly gives you the proper tense and voice of the infinitive.
6. Now try your reflexes by translating the following forms in accordance with their tense and voice.

(1) mōvisse	(11) sustulisse	(21) quaesītum esse
(2) mōtus esse	(12) trāxisse	(22) expulsum esse
(3) mōtūrus esse	(13) tetigisse	(23) relictōs esse
(4) movērī	(14) amāvisse	(24) data esse
(5) dīcī	(15) vīcisse	(25) datūra esse
(6) scīrī	(16) vīxisse	(26) versūrum esse
(7) servārī	(17) trāctōs esse	(27) pressūrōs esse
(8) rapī	(18) vīsam esse	(28) raptūrōs esse
(9) mittī	(19) raptum esse	(29) iussūrum esse
(10) crēdidisse	(20) missōs esse	(30) tāctūrōs esse

7. Explain the difference between a direct and an indirect statement.
8. Indicate what verbs in the following list may introduce an indirect statement and give their meanings.

(1) mittō	(7) videō	(13) audiō	(19) ostendō
(2) nūntiō	(8) nesciō	(14) sentiō	(20) spērō
(3) rīdeō	(9) parō	(15) agō	(21) iungō
(4) intellegō	(10) crēdō	(16) scrībō	(22) putō
(5) accipiō	(11) terreō	(17) audeō	(23) amō
(6) cupiō	(12) neglegō	(18) gerō	(24) negō

9. In what main categories can we list most verbs which frequently introduce indirect statements?

10. In English the indirect statement most often appears as a "that" clause, though an infinitive with subject accusative is sometimes used ("I believe that he is brave"; "I believe him to be brave"). What is the form of the indirect statement in classical Latin?
11. In what case did the Romans put the subject of an infinitive?
12. In Latin indirect statement does the tense of the infinitive depend on the tense of the verb of saying? In other words, must a present infinitive be used only with a present main verb, a perfect only with a perfect main verb, etc.?
13. What time relative to that of the main verb does each of the following infinitive tenses indicate: (1) perfect; (2) future; (3) present?

KEY FOR Capvt II

1. In classical Latin there was no regular definite or indefinite article. The words the and a have to be added in the English translation according to the sense of a Latin passage. Thus puella may mean the girl or a girl, and puellae may mean the girls or girls according to the Latin context. Often in an isolated sentence the and a can be used interchangeably, or perhaps no article at all need be used.

N.B. in the sg. any one of the three Latin genders of is, ea, id may be translated by it when the antecedent of the pronoun is a word which in English is neuter. For instance, suppose that in a preceding sentence the word pāx appears. Then we read: Sine eā nūlla cīvitās valet. The Latin feminine eā becomes English it because in English peace is regarded as neuter.

KEY FOR Capvt XXIV

1. (1) A noun (pronoun) + participle in abl.
   (2) No. (See p. 193.)
2. (1) See p. 193.
   (2) As a rule commas separate an abl. abs. from the rest of the sentence. This makes it appear somewhat apart from the rest of the sentence.
3. No. Since this "absolute" construction is not too commonly favored in English, the literal translation if regularly adhered to would make rather clumsy English.
4. When, since, after, although, if. (See p. 193–94.)
5. (1) Incorrect because the noun (urbe) of the abl. abs. is used (through its pronoun eam) as the object.
   (2) Incorrect because captus means having been captured, not having captured.
   (3) Correct because urbem captam (the captured city) stands as the natural object of dēlēvit.
   (4) Correct because urbe captā is a normal abl. abs., the noun of which is not used elsewhere as subject or object.
6. (1) Obligation or necessity.
   (2) It is really a predicate adjective; and so it naturally agrees with the subject of sum.
   (3) Dēbeō + infin., though dēbeō more often expresses the idea of moral obligation.
7. (1) Mihi is dat. of agent.
   (2) Ā mē; abl. of agent.

8. If (since, etc.) these two men hold the power, the republic will be strong. 9. When (since, etc.) this rumor had been reported, the leader left the city without delay. 10. When every desire for (lit., of) money and glory had been banished from his soul, that leader conquered himself. 11. Every desire for evil things ought to be conquered by us (= we ought to conquer . . .) if we wish to lead a good life. 12. If (since, etc.) the citizens love (their) country, we can have great hopes. 13. All citizens kept fearing that tyrant (of yours), who had to be banished. 14. When the tyrant had been overcome, the citizens regained their liberty and rights. 15. But after a tyrant has been expelled, another tyrant often gets the power. 16. Who in taking the power desires to help the state alone, not himself? 17. When many peoples had been conquered, you (sg.) desired to possess the whole world. 18. Slavery of every sort must be checked throughout the whole world. 19. If our republic is strong, nothing is to be feared by you (sg.). 20. Our country ought to be helped by each one who likes our mode of life. 21. All rights, therefore, ought to be preserved by the citizens with great care. 22. When duties have been deserted by the citizens, the state will be in great danger. 23. When these important things had been said, the orator was praised by us. 24. Truth and virtue ought always to be sought by all men. 25. When (since) truth and virtue had been sought, the republic was saved.

2. A relative clause with the subjunctive tells a characteristic of the antecedent, indicates it to be a person or thing of such a sort. See p. 323.
3. See p. 324.
4. See p. 324.

5. My friend who defended the consul was himself a very famous man. 6. But there was no one who would defend that base fellow. 7. What is there which men fear more than a tyrant? 8. Who is there who would hesitate between liberty and the command of a tyrant? 9. At ancient Rome there were those who loved money more than the state. 10. Let that evil man depart from his country—he who has endured the hatred of all good citizens. 11. Catiline, who had made such a great plot against the state, was driven from the city by Cicero. 12. What life can be pleasant for that leader as he goes off into exile? 13. Who is there who would be able to bear such pain? 14. If a person is not agreeable and good, he will not live a truly happy life, it seems to me. 15. They will not trust a consul who would do base deeds. 16. Do not trust a man who is harsh to his friends. 17. Cicero was a consul who would place the state before his own safety. 18. They knew why we wanted to follow such a brave consul. 19. I know nothing which could be easier for me. 20. I am seeking a leader whom all men would praise. 21. They were going to Rome to ask for freedom. 22. The Romans, who had captured ten Greek republics with their own armies, were themselves—amazing to say—taken captive by the Greek arts! 23. For the ancient men there was nothing which was better than courage and wisdom. 24. Nothing is to be feared which cannot injure the soul.

25. The quī . . . dēfendit states a fact about the amīcus; it does not describe his character. The subjunctive clause in #6 tells what kind of person the imagined nēmō might be.

2. (1) See p. 332 s.v. "The Gerundive."
(2) The gerund*ive* is an adject*ive*.
(3) As an adjective it modifies a noun or pronoun and agrees with that noun or pronoun in gender, number, and case.
(4) The gerundive (e.g., laudandus, -a, -um) is declined as magnus, -a, -um is. See p. 333.
(5) Since the gerund has only the endings -ī, -ō, -um, -ō, any feminine or any plural ending on an -nd- base is bound to indicate a gerundive; and also, if an -nd- form agrees with a noun as an adjectival modifier, it must be a gerundive.
3. (1) The Latin gerund is normally translated by the English gerund in -ing with any attending noun constructions or adverbial modifiers.
(2) The gerundive is to be translated as if it were a gerund with an object and any adverbial modifiers. In other words, both the gerund and the gerundive are to be translated in the same way. See p. 333–34.
(3) (A) We learn by reading with care.
(B) We learn by reading books with care.

4. We learn by experiencing. 5. They came to learn (for learning). 6. He gave (devoted) himself to learning. 7. They came to your school to learn (for the sake of learning). 8. SOME ETYMOLOGICAL AIDS

TWO RULES OF PHONETIC CHANGE

"Phonetic" derives from Greek phōnḗ, sound, voice, speech (cf. phonograph, phonology, symphony, telephone). Consequently, phonetic change means a change which occurs in original speech sounds for one reason or another. Of the many instances of this in Latin, the following two rules of phonetic change are probably the most important ones for the beginner.

A. Vowel weakening usually occurs in the medial syllables of compounds according to the following outline.

1. ă > ĭ before a single consonant and before ng.
   ă > ĕ before two consonants.
   căpiō, căptum: ac-cĭpiō, ac-cĕptum făciō, făctum: per-fĭciō, per-fĕctum făcilis: dif-fĭcilis cădō, cāsum: oc-cĭdō, oc-cāsum (Note that long ā does not change.)
   tăngō, tăctum: con-tĭngō, con-tăctum

2. ĕ > ĭ before a single consonant.
   tĕneō: con-tĭneō (but contentum) prĕmō: com-prĭmō (but compressum)
3. ae > ī.
   quaerō, quaesītum: re-quīrō, re-quīsītum laedō, laesum: col-līdō, col-līsum caedō, caesum: in-cīdō, in-cīsum; oc-cīdō, oc-cīsum aestimō: ex-īstimō
4. au > ū.
   claudō: in-clūdō, ex-clūdō
   causor: ex-cūsō

B. Assimilation of the final consonant of a prefix to the initial consonant of the base word commonly occurs.

ad-capiō > ac-cipiō	in-mortālis > im-mortālis
dis-facilis > dif-ficilis	in-ruō > ir-ruō

PREFIXES

Listed here are important prefixes helpful in the analysis of both Latin words and English derivatives. The Latin prefixes have passed over into English unchanged except where indicated. Incidentally, most Latin prefixes were also used by the Romans as prepositions; but the few labeled "inseparable" appear only as prefixes.

SUPPLEMENTARY SYNTAX

The following constructions are listed for the benefit of students who plan to continue their study of Latin beyond the introductory year. A number of these constructions have already been encountered here and there in the 40 formal chapters of this book. However, although often these can be easily translated without benefit of syntactical labels, it seems wise to catalog them here along with the more difficult items.

GENITIVE OF MATERIAL

The genitive may indicate the material of which a thing is made.

pōculum aurī, a goblet of gold
Numerus hostium crēscit, the number of the enemy is increasing.

Mōns aquae secūtus est et tempestās trēs nāvēs cīnxit aggere harēnae, a mountain of water followed and the storm surrounded three ships with a mound of sand.

OBJECTIVE GENITIVE

The objective genitive depends on a noun of verbal meaning and is used as the object of the verbal idea. It is sometimes translated by for.

amor laudis, love of praise (= amat laudem, he loves praise.) cupiditās pecūniae, greed for money (= cupit pecūniam, he longs for money.) metus mortis, fear of death (= metuit mortem, he fears death.) spēs salūtis, hope for safety (= spērat salūtem, he hopes for safety.) Fēmina erat dux factī, a woman was the leader of the enterprise (= dūxit factum.)
laudātor temporis āctī, a praiser of the past (= laudat tempus āctum.)

DATIVE OF PURPOSE

The dative may express the purpose for which a person or thing serves. A dative of reference (Capvt XXXVIII) often appears in conjunction with the dative of purpose, and this combination is called the "double dative" construction.

Petītiō mea tibi (dat. of ref.) summae cūrae (dat. of purp.) est, my candidacy is (for) the greatest concern to you.
Ea rēs mihi (ref.) summae voluptātī (purp.) erat, that matter was for the greatest pleasure to me = gave me the greatest pleasure.
Illī nōbīs (ref.) auxiliō (purp.) vēnērunt, they came as an aid to us.
Hōs librōs dōnō (purp.) mīsit, he sent these books as a gift.
Hoc mē iuvat et mihi (ref.) mellī (purp.) est, this gratifies me and is (as) honey to me.
Optant locum tēctō (purp.), they desire a place for a roof (building).

DATIVE OF POSSESSION

The dative can be used with sum to express the idea of possession.

Liber est mihi, a book is to me = I have a book.
(Contrast: liber est meus, the book is mine.)
Illī maior turba clientium est, that man has a greater throng of retainers.
Sunt tibi animus et mōrēs, you have a soul and character.
Haec eīs semper erunt, they will always have these things.
Prūdentia est illī puellae, that girl has prudence.
Ō virgō, nōn tibi est vultus mortālis, O maiden, you do not have the face of a mortal.
Sī umquam mihi fīlius erit . . . , if I ever have a son. . . .

ABLATIVE OF RESPECT OR SPECIFICATION

The ablative may be used to tell in what specific respect a verb or an adjective holds true.

Hī omnēs linguā, īnstitūtīs, lēgibus inter sē differunt, these all differ from one another in language, customs, and laws.

Illī virtūte omnibus (dat.) praestābant, those men used to excel all in courage.
Id genus erat intractābile bellō, that race was unmanageable in war.
Quis est praestantior aut nōbilitāte aut probitāte aut studiō optimārum artium? Who is more outstanding in nobility or integrity or the pursuit of the finest arts?
Ager bene cultus est ūber ūsū et ōrnātus speciē, a field well cultivated is rich in usefulness and beautiful in appearance.
Asia omnibus terrīs (dat.) antecellit ūbertāte agrōrum et varietāte frūctuum et multitūdine eārum quae exportantur, Asia excels all lands in richness of fields and variety of fruits and large number of those things which are exported.

ABLATIVE OF CAUSE

The ablative can be used to indicate a cause or reason.

Miser timōre dēlīrat, the wretched man is insane with fear.
Corpora eōrum metū dēbilia sunt, their bodies are weak from fear.
Aper dentibus timētur, the boar is feared because of his teeth.
Nihil arduum mortālibus est; caelum ipsum stultitiā petimus, nothing is (too) arduous for mortals; we seek the sky itself in our folly.
Odiō tyrannī in exsilium fūgit, because of his hatred of the tyrant he fled into exile.
Bonī amōre virtūtis peccāre ōdērunt, good men because of their love of virtue hate to sin.

ABLATIVE OF DEGREE OF DIFFERENCE

With comparatives and adverbs suggesting comparison the ablative can be used to indicate the degree of difference in the comparison.

Tantō melius, the better by so much = so much the better.
Senex nōn facit ea quae iuvenis, at multō maiōra et meliōra facit, an old man does not do the things which a young man does, but he does much greater and better things (greater by much).
Multō ācrius iam vigilābō, I shall now watch much more keenly.
Rōmam paucīs post diēbus vēnistī, you came to Rome a few days afterwards (afterwards by a few days).
Aberat ab eā urbe tribus mīlibus passuum, he was three miles from that city (was away by three miles).
Bonae Athēnae paulō plūs artis adiēcērunt, good Athens added a little more skill (more by a little).

SUBORDINATE CLAUSES IN INDIRECT STATEMENT

In indirect statement, subordinate clauses regularly have verbs in the subjunctive mood, even though they had the indicative in the direct form.

Lēgit librōs quōs mīserās, he read the books which you had sent.
Dīxit sē lēgisse librōs quōs mīsissēs, he said that he had read the books which you had sent.

Eī malī quī in urbe manent īnfīrmī erunt sine duce, those evil men who remain in the city will be weak without their leader.
Putō eōs malōs quī in urbe maneant īnfīrmōs futūrōs esse sine duce, I think that those evil men who remain in the city will be weak without their leader.

Sī id crēdet, errābit. If he believes this, he will be wrong.
Dīcō sī id crēdat eum errātūrum esse. I say that if he believes this he will be wrong.

OBJECTIVE INFINITIVE

The complementary infinitive has no subject accusative (see Capvt VI). However, when an infinitive with subject accusative is used as the object of a verb, it is called an objective infinitive.

Volunt venīre, they wish to come. (complem. infin.)
Iussit eōs venīre, he ordered them to come. (obj. infin.)
Nōn possum loquī, I cannot speak. (complem. infin.)
Nōn patitur mē loquī, he does not permit me to speak. (obj. infin.)
Nōn audet īre, he does not dare to go. (complem. infin.)
Coēgērunt eum īre, they forced him to go. (obj. infin.)

Vīs is irregular: Sg., N., vīs, G. (vīs), D. (vī), A. vim. Ab. vī; Pl., N. vīrēs, G. vīrium, D. vīribus, A. vīrēs, Ab. vīribus.

[1]The vocative singular of nouns like amīcus and of masculine adjectives like magnus ends in -e. The vocative singular of fīlius and of names in -ius ends in a single -ī (fīlī, Vergilī); the vocative singular of the masculine adjective meus is mī; the vocative singular of masculine adjectives in -ius ends in -ie (ēgregius; ēgregie). Otherwise, the vocative has the same form as the nominative in all declensions.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Frederic M. Wheelock (1902–1987) received the A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University. His long and distinguished teaching career included appointments at Haverford College, Harvard University, the College of the City of New York, Brooklyn College, Cazenovia Junior College (where he served as Dean), the Darrow School for Boys (New Lebanon, NY), the University of Toledo (from which he retired as full Professor in 1968), and a visiting professorship at Florida Presbyterian (now Eckerd) College. He published a number of articles and reviews in the fields of textual criticism, palaeography, and the study of Latin; in addition to Wheelock's Latin (previously titled Latin: An Introductory Course Based on Ancient Authors), his books include Wheelock's Latin Reader (previously titled Latin Literature: A Book of Readings) and Quintilian as Educator (trans. H. E. Butler; introd. and notes by Prof. Wheelock). Professor Wheelock was a member of the American Classical League, the American Philological Association, and the Classical Association of the Atlantic States. Biographies of Dr. Wheelock authored by Professor Ward Briggs appear in his book, A Biographical Dictionary of American Classicists (Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1994), as well as in the Winter, 2003, issue of The Classical Outlook. Frederic retired to Amherst, New Hampshire, and then to Kent, Connecticut with his beloved wife of 50 years, Dorothy Rathbone Wheelock. He is survived by his two daughters, Martha Wheelock and Deborah Wheelock Taylor, who have continued his tradition as teachers, and by his two grandchildren, Vanessa Taylor Sands and Ian Taylor.

Richard A. LaFleur received the B.A. and M.A. in Latin from the University of Virginia and the Ph.D. in Classical Studies from Duke. He has taught since 1972 at the University of Georgia, where he served for 21 years as head of one of the largest Classics programs in North America and was appointed in 1998 to the chair of Franklin Professor of Classics. He has numerous publications in Latin language, literature, and pedagogy, including the books The Teaching of Latin in American Schools: A Profession in Crisis, Latin Poetry for the Beginning Student, Love and Transformation: An Ovid Reader, Latin for the 21st Century: From Concept to Classroom, A Song of War: Readings from Vergil's Aeneid (with Alexander G. McKay), Scribblers, Scvlptors, and Scribes, and the revised editions of Wheelock's Latin, Wheelock's Latin Reader, and (with Paul Comeau) Workbook for Wheelock's Latin.

Professor LaFleur served as editor of The Classical Outlook for nearly 25 years and is a past President of the American Classical League. He has been recipient of more than a million dollars in grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and other agencies, and of state, regional, and national awards for teaching and professional service, including the American Philological Association's award for Excellence in the Teaching of Classics. He has three children (Jean-Paul, Caroline, and Kimberley) and five grandchildren (Zachary, Jackson, Lucas, Anna Caroline, and Charlotte), and joyfully resides with his wife Alice in the home she designed for them on the banks of Lake Oglethorpe, near Athens, Georgia.
